QHA Milestone: All Units Fully Occupied

Authority Receives $900K Grant For Playground Renovations

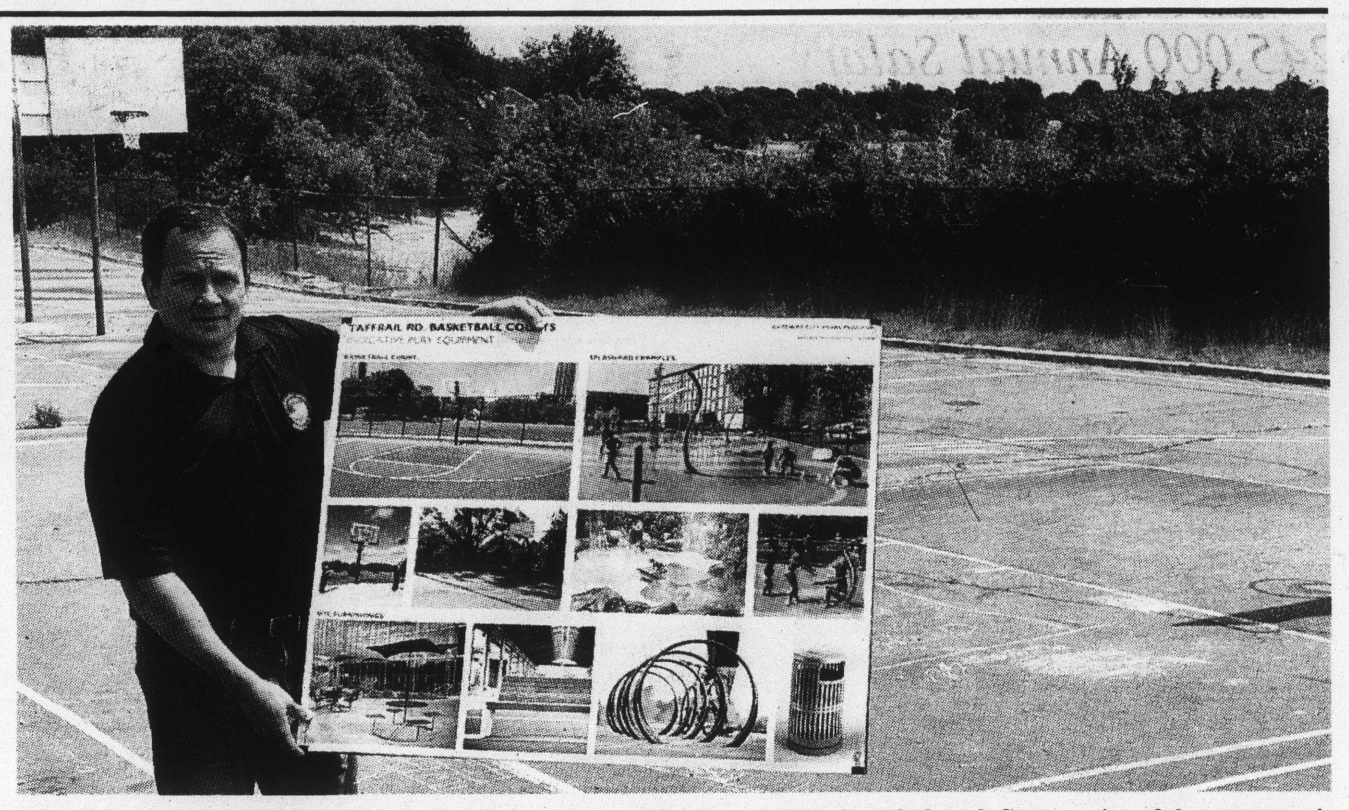

By SCOTT JACKSON

The more than 1,500 apartments owned by the Quincy Housing Authority are now fully occupied, just a few short years after the agency would routinely have dozens of units vacant at a given time.

The housing authority is also planning to renovate two Germantown playgrounds this summer and replace roofs at three buildings after completing several major capital projects over the past year.

James Marathas, who has served as the housing authority's executive director since May 2017, said it is unheard of for a housing authority the size of Quincy's to be fully occupied. Three years ago, when Marathas was named the Quincy Housing Authority's direc-

Pictured is Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director James Marathas with a poster board highlighting the new court and splash pad. "You can barely walk on [it]," Marathas said of the court's current condition. "It looks like rocky road." Another QHA recreation area – The Jean Kennedy Playground on Doane Street – will be renovated in August.

City Resurfacing 9 Major Roads, Replacing Water Mains

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city plans to resurface nine major arteries this summer using funding from a recently approved bond for street and sidewalk work.

The work will be completed by October, according to Al Grazioso, the city's commissioner of public works.

"We're trying to do the streets people drive on everyday," he said.

In the queue to be repaved this summer are East Squantum Street from Newbury Avenue to Quincy Shore Drive; Elm Street between Washington Street and Hancock Street; Hancock Street from Fenno Street to Billings Road; Harvard Street from Beale Street to West Squantum Street; Liberty Street, from Quincy Street to where the road comes to a stop at a dead end near Crown Colony; Quincy Avenue between Faxon Park Road and the Braintree town line; School Street, from west of Franklin Street to Hancock Street; Washington Street between Washington Court and McGrath Highway; and West Street from Willard Street to Centre Street.

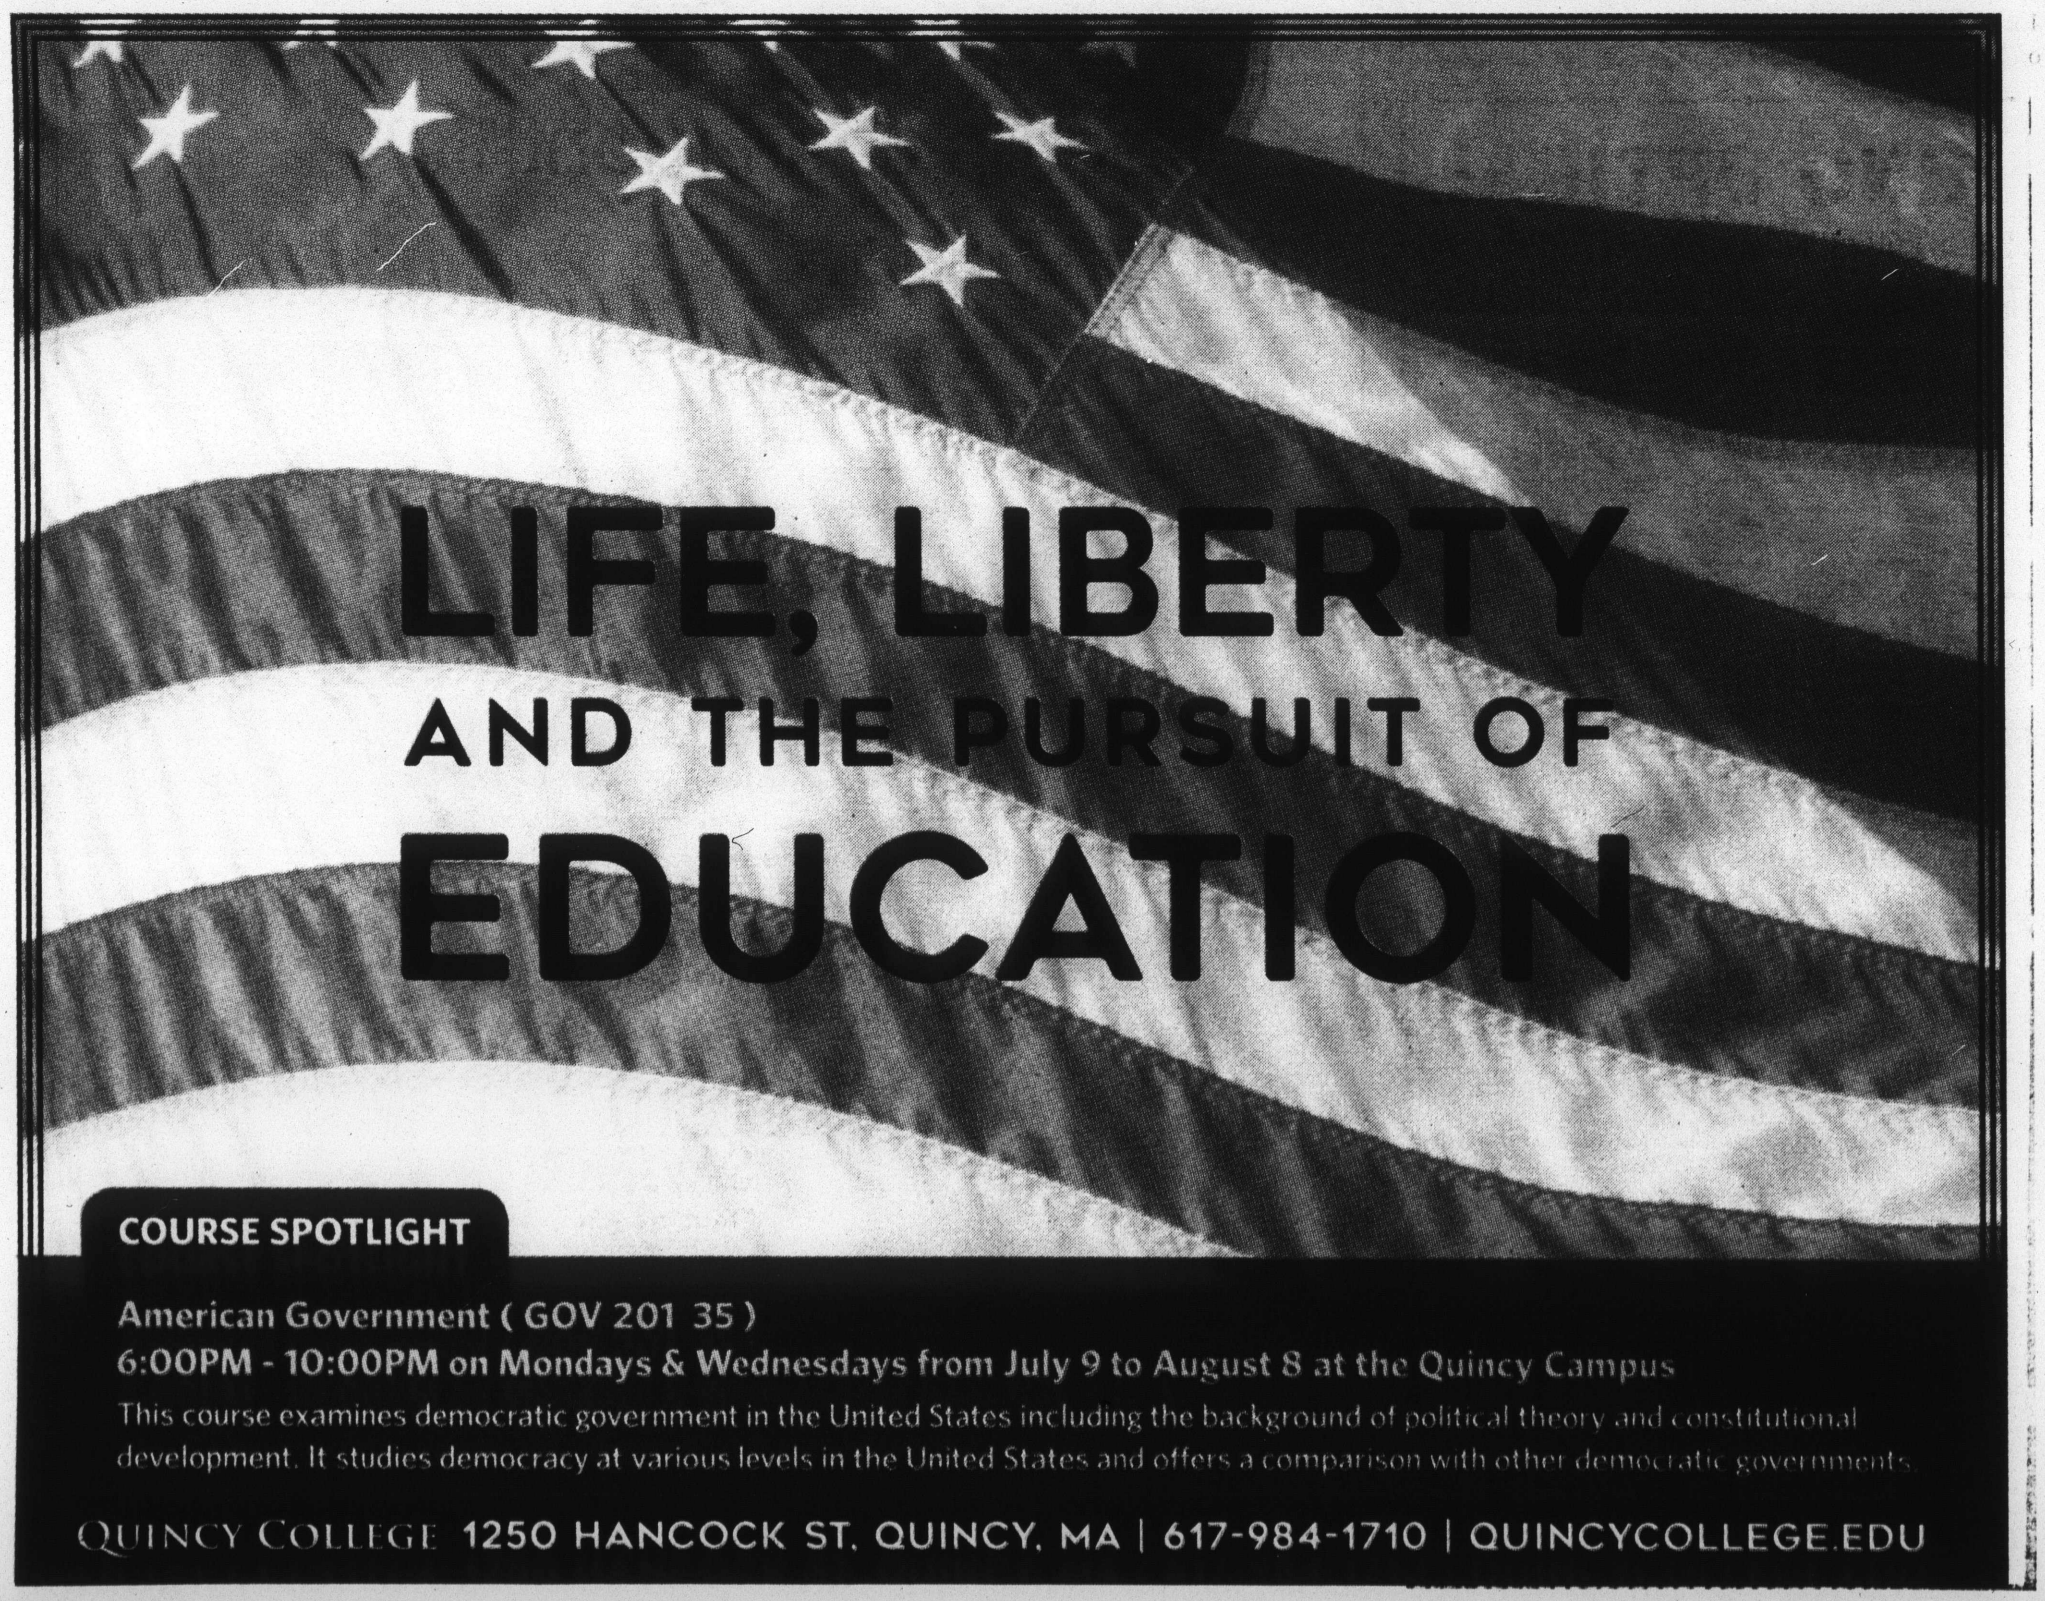

The City Council on June 18 approved Mayor Thomas Koch's request for a $17 million bond for road and sidewalk work. Grazioso told the council that money would be combined with $9 million in state and federal money to resurface 22 miles of roadway over the next five years.

In total, more than 33,300 feet – or 6.3 miles – will be resurfaced this summer.

The major roads being repaved this year will be micro surfaced, a process that does not include a full-depth reconstruction of the roadway.

The DPW is also planning on replacing the water mains beneath 16 city streets later this year. Those streets include Narragansett Road, Samoset Avenue, Kittredge Avenue, Ruggles Street, South Street, Taylor Street, Greystone Street, Hill Street McDonald Street, Westford Street, Station Street, Garfield Street, Kidder Street, North Payne Street, Payne Street, and Winslow Road.

After those water mains are replaced this fall, crews will have to wait until after the earth settles to resurface those roadways. The resurfacing is expected to take place next spring, Grazioso said.

College Budget To Fund Hiring New Provost

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy College's budget for the fiscal year that began July 1 includes funding to hire a provost, whose job would be to oversee all curriculum-related matters.

The college's Board of Governors on June 27 approved a $27.6 million budget for fiscal year 2019, which is a decrease from the fiscal year 2018 budget of $34.7 million. Quincy College is one of the few municipally owned colleges in the country, but does not receive funding from the city.

The decrease in the budget reflects the loss of the school's nursing program, though the nursing faculty is not being laid off.

"The nursing faculty is not being laid off and is being kept on board to help with the restructuring of the nursing program," said Paul Barbadoro, the chairman of the board's finance and facilities committee.

"I think that was a very positive thing."

Barbadoro said the college was able to save about $5 million "by making some prudent adjustments and moves" to non-faculty personnel; those include leaving several vacant positions unfilled. The college will also reduce the amount of space it leases.

There will be no tuition increase in the new school year, Barbadoro said.

The budget includes the

Quincy Receives John Sasso Award

Mayor Thomas Koch and Planning Director James Fatseas announce the City of Quincy was presented with the John A. Sasso National Community Development Week Award during the National Community Development Association (NCDA) 49th annual conference, recently held in Long Beach, CA. This is the seventh time the city has received the award since 2004.

The annual award is named after NCDA's founding executive director, and recognizes communities for exemplary efforts to raise awareness about the need and importance of the U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development (HUD) Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME program during the annual "National Community Development Week," most recently held April 2 – 6.

The Department of Planning & Community Development coordinated 10 events in addition to a traditional and social media campaign in collaboration with 25 local partners. Cong. Stephen Lynch participated in a private speaking program and tour of the Gavin Foundation's Quincy location, and accepted the Mayor's annual Community Service Award at the event. Some of the other local partners included Father Bill's & MainSpring, Asian American Service Association, the South Shore YMCA, Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., Quincy After School Child Care, Mass Development, and Houghs Neck Community Council.

"I am very pleased with NCDA's continued recognition of our Community Development Week activities," Koch said. "I thank Planning Director Jim Fatseas and Community Development Director Sean Glennon and their staff for their tremendous efforts in administering these federal resources for our residents, and I congratulate them on achieving this national recognition once again."

WATCHES THAT SPARKLE

Wristwatches for women with their eyes on fashion have features that bridge the gap between the merely functional and the truly opulent. Today's timepieces are awash in diamond and gemstone accents, as well as a profusion of color on straps and watch faces. When diamonds are set up intricately crafted timepieces with high-tech movements, the product is fine jewelry. Even the classic tank watch by Cartier gets this sparkling treatment. Originally designed to honor Allied troops in 1917; one version of this classic timepiece complements its elegantly tailored square face with diamonds set at the hour markers. This incarnation of the tank watch points out the most important trend in womens wristwatches-bands that resemble bracelets.

What are you looking for in a watch? A diamond-encrusted little beauty? An elegant piece of wearable art? How about a sports watch designed for special activities? Or maybe a watch that simply and accurately tells time? Today, the possibilities seem endless, with watchmakers surely creating one that will match your desires. For beautiful jewelry of fine design, we welcome you to Rogers Jewelry, 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636. We are licensed and regulated by Massachusetts State Law to buy and sell as well as offer cash loans on gold, platinum and other types of jewelry.

Don't Forget: We pay cash for Gold - Platinum - Diamonds... highest prices paid.

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly
Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you – refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still so low, lower than fixed-rate equity loans, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

Quincy Police Officers Escort Make-A-Wish Recipient

Members of the Quincy Police Department recently provided an escort for Cameron Miller, a Make-A-Wish recipient on his way to Florida, and his family.

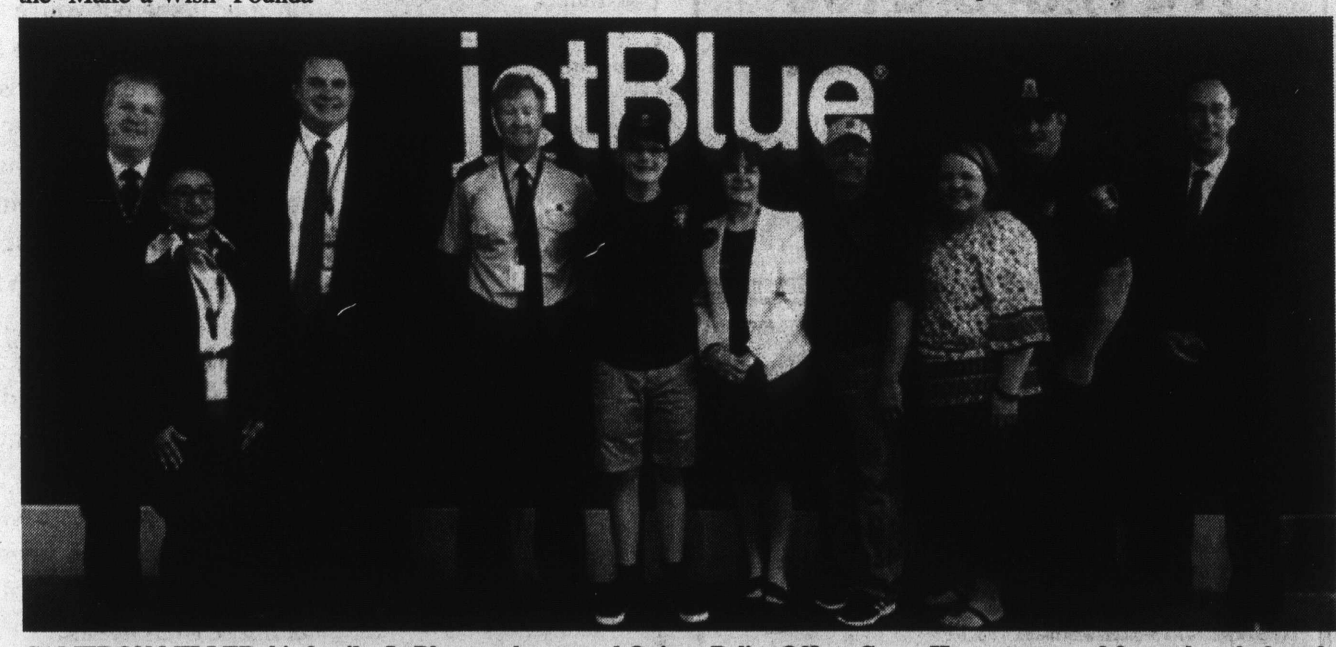

Cameron, who attends Quincy High School, was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic lymphoma when he was in the eighth grade at Central Middle School. Since reading Extreme Scientists book in Mrs. Donovan's class in the seventh grade at Central Middle School, Cam has always had great interest in science and the weather.

School Resource Officer Gregg Hartnett became friendly with Cam and his family as he battled this aggressive disease. After 2 years of treatment, Cam was recently given a clean bill of health!

Thanks to JetBlue and the Make-a-Wish Foundation, Cam and his family were headed to the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration's Aircraft Operations Center in Lakeland, Florida.

Seven Local Non-Profits Receive HPHC Foundation Grants

Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Foundation announces seven Quincy non-profit organizations were awarded a total of $3,750 from the Foundation's Community Spirit 9/11 Mini-Grant program.

The organizations receiving funds are:

• Clifford Marshall Elementary School ($500)

• Fit Kids Program ($500)

• Interfaith Social Services, Inc. ($1,000)

• Quincy Animal Shelter ($250)

• Quincy Catholic Academy ($500)

• Quincy Public Schools ($500)

• St. Ann's Parish ($500)

To commemorate those Harvard Pilgrim members who lost their lives on September 11, 2001, Harvard Pilgrim and the Foundation created the Community Spirit 9/11 Mini-Grant program. This program allows each Harvard Pilgrim and NTT Data employee to award a $250 - $500 grant, completely funded by the Foundation, to the local charity of his or her choice each calendar year.

Since this community grants program began in 2002, Harvard Pilgrim employees have directed more than $5.7 million to thousands of organizations throughout Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire.

'Louisa Catherine Adams Making History'

Program July 11 At Adams National Historical Park

Abigail Adams was not the only female political powerhouse in the family. Her daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine Johnson Adams, wife and political partner of John Quincy Adams, was an astute observer of the political scene and an adept player of "parlor politics."

LOUISA CATHERINE JOHNSON ADAMS

First Ladies expert and president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Catherine Allgor, will discuss Louisa's work and how it shapes our understanding of the political milieu of the Founding era.

The program will be held Wednesday, July 11 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Adams National Historical Park Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

Allgor's first book, Parlor Politics: In Which the Ladies of Washington Help Build a City and a Government, won the James H. Broussard First Book Prize from the Society for Historians of the Early American Republic and the Northeast Popular Culture/American Culture Association Annual Book Award. Parlor Politics will be available for purchase and a book signing will follow the lecture.

This program is free and open to the public. Limited street parking is available on Adams Street, Quincy.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of the second and sixth presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with the Old House at Peace field, home to both presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

During the open season, April 19 through Nov. 10, tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field for a two and a half hour tour. The first tour leaves at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays.

Tickets are $15 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

John Quincy And Louisa Catherine Adams Abroad Podcast Recording At ANHP July 8

Perhaps no modern medium has helped to alleviate traffic rage more than the podcast. "Stuff You Missed in History Class," hosted by Tracy V. Wilson and Holly Frey, gives its listeners half hour stories about "the greatest and strangest" stories in world history (that were most likely left out of your history text books).

One of the Top 40 most downloaded podcasts in the world, "Stuff You Missed in History Class" tells riveted listeners the stories of people and events that are frequently left out or forgotten.

On Sunday, July 8 at 2 p.m. Tracy and Holly will record a live podcast about John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams abroad at Adams National Historical Park.

This free event will take place rain or shine on the Beale Estate Lawn, 181 Adams St., Quincy. Feel free to bring a chair or a blanket, and listen to Tracy and Holly as they tell one of the more forgotten stories of the Adams Family's history. Both hosts will hang around for a while following the podcast for a question-and-answer session.

Parking is limited on Adams Street, and people attending this event are encouraged to use public transportation. Validated parking is available at the Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy, about half a mile from the Beale Estate.

Mixed Trash-Garbage Collection Off To Smooth Start

"We assume that there was garbage in the collection," said Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti. "You really couldn't tell."

It was Ricciuti's way of saying that opening day of Mayor Walter Hannon's controversial mixed rubbish and garbage collection in Quincy went off without a hitch.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, the leading critic of the mixed collections, declined to comment on the first day's operation. He said he had no reports from the route and it was too early to tell.

Shortly before collections were made, an ordinance banning the placement of rubbish outside more than 15 hours before collections, which had been introduced two months ago by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, went into effect.

OVER 1,000 APPLY FOR FOOD STAMPS

Considerably more than 1,000 people have applied for a chance to stretch their food dollars in this area as the new federal food stamp program went into effect. Eligibility depends on many factors, particularly net income, size of family and certain expenses like shelter, utilities and education.

Beechwood Knoll School Share You Career Week

Beechwood Knoll Elementary School's fourth graders recently participated in their third annual Share Your Career Week. Both parents and family members enthusiastically participated in the event.

Fourth grade teachers Laura Mulcahy, Greg Caswell and Leslie Coughlin hosted the event in their classrooms the week of June 4-8.

"It is so important to give the students the opportunity to explore different career choices while learning how education is connected to a successful future," Mulcahy said. "The response of our parents was overwhelming and the information and activities our parents presented both informed and engaged our students."

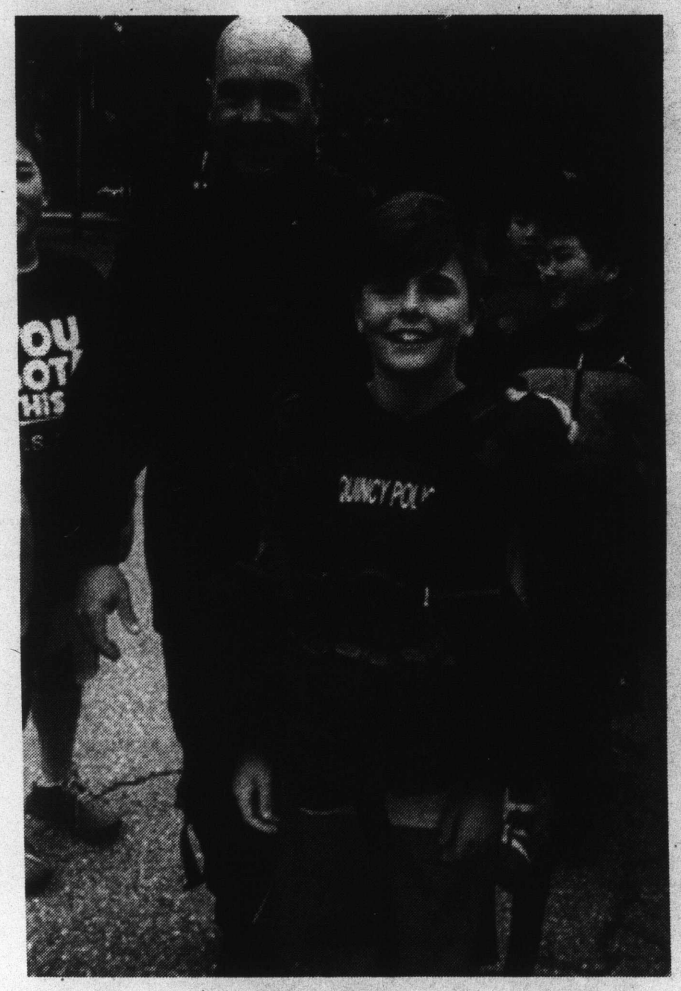

Students participated in many activities representing a broad range of careers. Boston EMT Lt. Tony O'Brien (Sophie and Isabel Hagstrom's uncle) shared with the students what inspired him to become an EMT. "When I was little I was working at a lemonade stand and someone collapsed right in front of me and there was nothing I could do. When I saw the EMT come to the rescue I knew I wanted to be in the position to help someone in the future."

Tony spoke with the students about the requirements to complete EMT training and shared with the students his favorite part of his job is being able to help people. He's even helped deliver four babies over the course of his career.

Ben Neil (Rileigh Neil's father), financial advisor for Prime America, spoke to the students about the benefits of investing their money to create a profit. He advised the students to "think about things you really like doing and try to make a career out of it. It is fun to have money and money helps you achieve your goals, but it's not the only goal in life."

her feel good knowing she is helping another person on their recovery journey. She shared with the students to "keep an open mind. For instance, math might be a challenge for you in school. but keep working hard. You may need this skill in the future."

Paul Della Barba (John Della Barba's father) from the Quincy Water Department conducted an experiment with the students testing chlorine levels in the water. Students were amazed at the many roles Quincy Water Department takes on to provide their families with clean and safe water. Della Barba brought the students MWRA workbooks, pencils and bookmarks and concluded with advice for the students to "study hard and dream big to achieve your goals."

Quincy Fire Captain George Wirtz and firefighter Michael Fitzpatrick came into the classroom and spoke of the importance of fire safety, changing batteries in your smoke alarms twice yearly and having a two ways in and two ways out family exit strategy in the event of an emergency. Wirtz and Fitzpatrick performed a "mock rescue" for the students teaching students to stay low and always call out for help if you see a firefighter.

In addition to their classroom presentation the students were able to tour two firetrucks, see the ladder extend 75 feet in the air, and each student got a turn spraying the fire hose. A memory they surely will hold onto dearly.

The Beechwood Knoll staff and students could not thank our parents enough for their support allowing this program to happen each year.

"The Beechwood Knoll community continues to be a very special resource for our school and for that we are very thankful," Mulcahy, Caswell and Coughlin agreed.

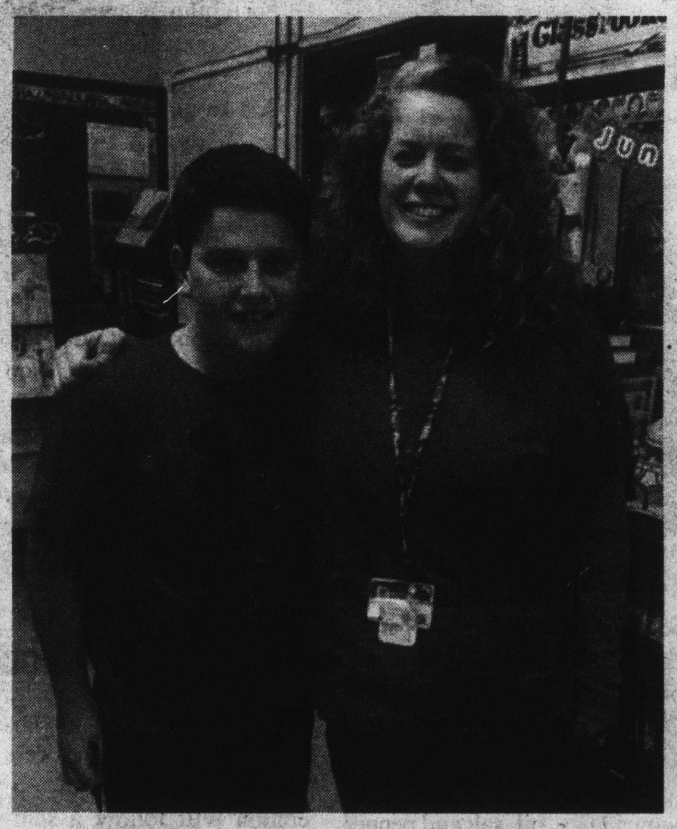

Looking forward to the 4th Annual Event next year!

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children

Online Summer Reading Challenge

This summer from July 1st through Aug. 31st track your reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading program. Sign up, log books, and complete activities. As you add books and complete activities you will earn online badges and points toward our end of summer raffle. We'll have a drawing for the raffle prizes the first week in September. We have two programs one for babies and young children up to age 6 and the other for ages 7-13. Teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

Looking for some good books to read? When you sign up for the online summer reading program you will begin receiving weekly emails with book suggestions. Parents of younger children will also receive an early literacy tip to extend your reading experience for older children these suggestions are a great way to find new books and authors to try.

Craft: Create a Summer Journal
Thursday, July 5th
at 10 a.m. – noon
Children's Room

Stop by the Children's Room and create your own blank book. Use your book as a journal to record the fun things you do this summer. Need some ideas, pick up a copy of our Summer Fun Activities sheet to get you started.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Family Board Games
Friday, July 6th
10 a.m. – noon
Ages 5+

Come drop by to play some family board games. We'll have some old favorites and some you might not have played before. Try some word association with Codenames, press your luck with Tem-Purr-A, make some wild guesses with Concept and more!

For children ages 5 and old accompanied by an adult.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 and 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

Mon., Main Library; Tues., Adams Shore; Wed., Wollaston; Thurs., North Quincy.

Drop in from 2 to 4 p.m. up to age 8.

Craft for the week of July 9th – Panpipes.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Children's Movie @ North Quincy
Enchanted
Monday, July 9th
at 2 p.m.
Rated PG

Reality and fantasy collide when a fairytale princess from another world is sent to New York City by an evil queen. Now she must find her way through the city and back to her own world, where her true love awaits.

Rated PG Run time 107 minutes.

Storytelling at the Wollaston Playground (the Tot Lot)
Tuesday, July 10th
at 10:30 a.m.
All ages

Join us at the Wollaston Beach Playground Park on the corner of Sachem St. next to the Clam Box across from Wollaston Beach each Tuesday in July for stories, songs and more.

Stop by to hear a story or two and pick up a calendar listing all of the summer events. If it is raining we will hold storytime at the Main Library on 40 Washington St.

Cosponsored by Discover Quincy.

Book Discussion – Blackbird Fly
Tuesday, July 10th
at 7 p.m.
Main Library
Children's Room
Ages 10-14 (entering grades 5-8)

Apple has always felt a little different from her classmates. She and her mother moved to Louisiana from the Philippines when she was little, and her mother still cooks Filipino foods and chastises Apple for becoming "too American." When Apple's friends turn on her and everything about her life starts to seem weird and embarrassing, Apple turns to music. If she can just save enough to buy a guitar and learn to play, maybe she can change herself. It might be the music that saves her . . . or it might be her two new friends, who show her how special she really is.

Copies of the book, Blackbird Fly by Erin Entrada Kelly will be available in the Children's Room beginning on June 13th, to be read before the group meets.

Fourth graders who will be entering 5th grade in September are welcome to join the Phoenix Book Club this summer. We can't wait to meet you!

Pajama Storytime with Denise Shaver
Wednesday, July 11th
at 6:30 p.m.
Main Library Large Meeting Room
Ages 2-5 with an adult

Join Denise Shaver for a 3 week series of pajama storytimes designed especially for children ages 2-5 and their parents. Join us for 45 minutes of interactive stories songs and rhymes. This program is designed for adults and children ages 2-5 to enjoy stories and songs as a family. This is a great time for you and your children to sing, dance, listen and talk with each other.

Sponsored by the Quincy Cultural Council and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Stuffed Pork Chops For Two

By MARIE

After cooking for a large family for years, it is still hard for me to cook for two now, or even for one. Whenever I do make an entrée for myself I try to make enough so I have leftovers.

And so it was last week when I cooked stuffed pork chops. But, of course, if you are making them for more than 2 people you can adjust the recipe accordingly

Preheat oven to 350 degrees; lightly grease a shallow baking pan

RECIPE

2 thick pork chops
½ cup panko bread crumbs
Salt and pepper to taste
½ small onion, chopped
¼ cup fresh mushrooms, finely chopped
2 tablespoons of white wine (I used Pinot Grigio)
2 tablespoons of water
1 teaspoon fresh parsley, minced
2 tablespoons of grated parmesan or Romano cheese

Cut a pocket on the side of each pork chop, wide enough to be able to fit the stuffing.

Combine all of the ingredients together and stuff each chop with the bread mixture.

Place in a lightly greased, shallow baking pan and bake in a 350 degree oven for about an hour or until tender.

I served these with sweet potatoes and fresh asparagus.

Red, White & Blue Potato Salad

By SUSIE

How about some red, white, and blue potato salad?

Blue/purple hued potatoes look quite "exotic" for sure, but taste pretty much like regular potatoes. These colorful potatoes pack a big nutritional punch by providing carotenoids, and antioxidants like "anthocyanin" that is also found in berries and pomegranets,

This potato is also very resistant to disease and are also able to withstand harsh conditions, which makes it a good environmental choice as well! Here is a delicious and simple potato salad recipe. ENJOY!

2 pounds baby potatoes, a mix of white and blue (or purple)
1/4 cup lemon juice
4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1/2-1 tsp Sea salt (I love Redmonds Real Salt)
Freshly ground pepper to taste
3/4 cup chopped roasted red peppers, rinsed
5 scallions, thinly sliced
1 large clove of garlic, minced
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley

1. Place potatoes in a large saucepan or Dutch oven and cover with salted water. Bring to a boil and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. Drain and rinse with cold water. Transfer to a cutting board. Let cool for 20 minutes.

2. Whisk lemon juice, oil, salt and pepper and garlic in a large bowl. Cut the potatoes in half, add to the bowl and toss to coat.

3. Just before serving, add peppers, scallions and parsley to the salad and toss gently.

What Are Thyroid Nodules?

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

The thyroid gland is located low in the front of the neck, below the Adam's apple. The gland is shaped like a butterfly and wraps around the windpipe or trachea.

The term thyroid nodule refers to any abnormal growth that forms a lump in the thyroid gland. A thyroid nodule can occur in any part of the gland. Some nodules can be felt relatively easily, while others can be concealed deep in the thyroid tissue or located very low in the gland, where they are difficult to feel.

Modern imaging techniques, such as ultrasound, computerized tomography (CT), and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), have exposed more thyroid nodules incidentally. This means that nodules are being discovered during studies that were performed for reasons other than examination of the thyroid.

Approximately 4% to 8% of adult women and 1% to 2% of adult men have thyroid nodules detectable by physical examination alone; while closer to 30% of adult women have nodules detectable by ultrasound. Moreover, diagnosis of a thyroid nodule is the most common endocrine problem in the United States.

Although the majority of thyroid nodules are benign (not cancerous), about 10% of nodules do contain cancer. Therefore, the principal purpose for evaluating a thyroid nodule is to determine whether cancer is present. The vast majority of thyroid nodules do not cause any symptoms. However, if the cells in the nodules are functioning and producing thyroid hormone on their own, the nodule may generate signs and symptoms of too much thyroid hormone (hyperthyroidism).

A minute number of patients complain of pain at the site of the nodule that can travel to the ear or jaw. If the nodule is exceptionally large, it can result in difficulty swallowing or shortness of breath by compressing the esophagus (tube connecting the mouth to the stomach) or trachea (windpipe). In rare instances, a patient may complain of hoarseness or difficulty speaking because of compression of the larynx (voice box). The causative factor of most thyroid nodules is unknown. In certain cases, insufficient iodine in the diet can cause the thyroid to develop nodules, but this is no longer common in the U.S. Particular genes also may be a contributing factor to development of thyroid nodules.

Diagnosis typically begins with the healthcare provider taking a detailed history, evaluating both past and present medical issues. If the patient is younger than 20 or older than 70 years, there is increased likelihood that a nodule is cancerous. Similarly, the nodule is more likely to be cancerous if there is any history of radiation exposure, difficulty swallowing, or an alteration in the voice. Even though women tend to have more thyroid nodules than men, the nodules found in men are more likely to be cancerous.

A physical examination is the next step to determine if there is only one nodule or multiple nodules, and what the remainder of the gland feels like. The probability of cancer is greater if the nodule is fixed to the surrounding tissue (unmovable). In addition, the physical exam should investigate for any abnormal lymph nodes in close proximity that may imply the spread of cancer. In addition to evaluating the thyroid, the physician should also ascertain any signs of gland malfunction, such as thyroid hormone overproduction (hyperthyroidism) or underproduction (hypothyroidism). Blood tests, such as T3, T4 and TSH, will be done initially to assess thyroid function.

A physician will usually order an ultrasound examination of the thyroid to detect nodules that are not easily felt, determine the number of nodules and their sizes and verify if a nodule is solid or cystic. Radionuclide scanning with radioactive chemicals is another imaging technique a physician may use to evaluate a thyroid nodule. Fine needle aspiration (FNA) of a nodule is a type of biopsy and the most customary, direct way to determine what types of cells are present. The needle used is very thin and the procedure is relatively simple being performed in an outpatient setting.

Benign thyroid tissue (non-cancerous) can be consistent with Hashimoto's thyroiditis, a colloid nodule, or a thyroid cyst. This result is reported from approximately 60% of biopsies. Cancerous tissue (malignant) can be consistent with diagnosis of papillary, follicular, or medullary cancer. This result is reported from approximately 5% of biopsies. The majority of these are papillary cancers. Suspicious biopsies can show a follicular adenoma. Though generally benign, up to 20% of these nodules are found ultimately to be cancerous.

Follicular nodules, other nodules highly suspicious for cancer, and definite cancer should be treated by surgery. Most thyroid cancers are curable and rarely cause life-threatening problems. However, any nodule not removed needs to be watched closely through a follow-up with the physician every 6 to 12 months. If a nodule causes hyperthyroidism, it is usually considered non-cancerous, and treatment is aimed at averting the signs, symptoms, and complications of hyperthyroidism, such as heart failure, osteoporosis, and elevated heart rate.

Treatments include destroying the gland using radioactive iodine (131-iodine), blocking production of thyroid hormone with medications, or conservatively following the patient with mild hyperthyroidism. Treatment is individualized based on age, presence of other medical conditions, and patient preference.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

College Budget Funds Hiring Provost

creation of a new provost position, at salary of $245,000. Mayor Thomas Koch, the college's principal executive, said the provost would be responsible for "any and all curriculum-related" matters, leaving the president in charge of business operations.

"The provost handles the curriculum and the president handles the business, the endowment, the development, the real estate," Koch said.

The mayor said college officials have already reached out to potential candidates for the new job.

"We've had some discussions already with a couple really good candidates," he said. "We'll have more to say very soon."

The college previously had a vice president of academic affairs, a position with a budgeted salary of $142,000 the last two fiscal years. Koch said the person who most recently held that position, Mary Burke, has been re-assigned to a new role where she will oversee the college's campus in Plymouth, replacing the two administrators who previously oversaw that campus.

The mayor said the decision to hire a provost was made for two reasons: a state board's withdrawal of approval for the college's nursing program and the college's transition to a four-year school.

"We had a major academic failure at this college that is putting this college at risk – greatly at risk – we still don't know what the collateral damage is going to be come the fall," Koch said.

"We are looking at becoming a four-year institution, so in my opinion we need to really boost up the academic side for both of those reasons. It will bring great credibility to this college when the word gets out that we are being serious on the academic side bringing the provost on board."

The governors approved the budget in an 11-1 vote.

Barbara Clarke cast the lone dissenting vote. She said the salary for the new provost is too high compared to the national median pay for the position, $165,000.

"It appears as if what is presented as the provost salary is quite expanded for what the national median is," Clarke said.

Mary Jo Brogna, another member of the board, said the national median should not be considered because of the number of competing colleges and universities in the area.

"I think you can't do medians and you can't do national averages when you're in New England," she said. "I think the cost in salaries in New England – and the Boston area in particular – are higher than the rest of the country. Look at all the competing academic institutions."

Barbadoro said the salary was needed to hire the best possible candidate for the provost position.

"If you want to turn the academic side of this college around, you need the best and I don't want to pay the national average for a national, mediocre provost," he said. "I want to pay them at a competitive level for our region…to entice them to make them excited about turning the academic part of this around."

The Board of Registration of Nursing on May 9 withdrew approval for the college's associate degree in nursing and practical nursing programs. As part of that decision, students in the associate degree in nursing program who complete their degree requirements during the spring 2018 semester will still be able to take the national licensure exam. Students in the practical nursing program who complete their degree requirements prior to Aug. 1 will likewise be eligible to take the national licensure test.

The Board of Registration in Nursing had placed the college's nursing programs on approval with warning status in June 2017 with the school's graduates passing the national licensure exams at the lowest rate of all schools in the state.

Koch was named the school's principal executive on May 15, following the resignation of Peter Tsaffaras, the school's president since 2011. Tsaffaras' resignation was effective June 1, but the board on May 15 placed him on administrative leave. Tsaffaras had agreed to resign during a closed-door meeting with the governors on May 3.

Two hundred sixty-four students were impacted by the loss of the school's nursing program. Of those students, at least 194 were able to re-enroll elsewhere as of June 27, Koch said.

Koch said 60 full-time students and 36 part-time students were able to enroll at Labouré College in Milton and Mount Wachusett Community College will be able to enroll up 30 students at its Fort Devens campus.

The mayor on May 22 had said he was exploring a deal that would have allowed Mount Wachusett to operate a satellite campus in Quincy for Quincy College nursing students. Koch on June 27 said that would not be happening.

"They just don't think they can handle it with their bandwidth, with their personnel, at this time," Koch said of Mount Wachusett.

The board on May 22 granted Koch permission to provide up to $4.5 million in reimbursements from the college's reserve fund to nursing students unable to find accommodations elsewhere.

Lisa McBirney, who Koch named his point person to oversee day-to-day operations at the school, said administrators are making every effort possible to reach out to students who could be eligible for a refund, including emails, phone calls and text messages. Administrators are now in the process of meeting with students, and McBirney said the process could be completed by the end of July.

Social Security Matters

Working While Collecting Social Security Disability

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My husband started getting Social Security disability in 2016 at the age of 61; he is now 63. Did it automatically switch over to regular Social Security? Also, he is feeling bored and would like to have a little job. Is he allowed to work just so many hours per week, or does it go by how much you make per month? Is it just reported at tax time next year? Signed: Helpful Wife

Dear Helpful: Your husband's SS disability (SSDI) will automatically switch to his retirement benefits when he reaches his full retirement age (66 years and 2 months if he was born in 1955). Regarding his working while still collecting SSDI benefits, Social Security encourages those on disability to attempt to return to the workforce, so your husband should consider enrolling in the Social Security "Ticket to Work" program, which will provide him the chance to test his ability to work for at least nine "trial work months" during a 60-month time frame. During this trial work period he'll receive his full SSDI benefit regardless of how much he earns.

Briefly, any month he earns more than $850 (for 2018) counts as a trial work month (if he earns less than that it doesn't count as a trial work month). After he has reached nine trial work months, he can still receive his SSDI benefits for another 36 months, except that he won't receive benefits for any month that his earnings exceed what Social Security considers "substantial gainful activity," or "SGA," which for 2018 is $1180. If his benefits stop because his earnings regularly exceed "SGA," and within 5 years he is once again unable to work due to his disability, his disability benefits can be restarted (without having to re-apply). You can get full details about Working While on Disability and the Ticket to Work program by going to this link: https://www.ssa.gov/pubs/EN-05-10095.pdf .

The Ticket to Work program should allow your husband to work and test his physical limits without having a negative impact to his Social Security disability benefits. As for reporting his earnings, your husband must notify Social Security when he starts to work and must, as well, report his monthly earnings to Social Security at 1-800-772-1213. Once he has entered the Ticket to Work program, he should also report to Social Security if he stops working. And, of course, once his disability benefits convert to regular retirement benefits at his full retirement age, there is no restriction on how much he can earn.

NQHS Senior Stay Out 2018 says, "Thank You!"

On May 11th, and into the wee hours of the morning of May 12th, the NQHS Senior Stay Out Committee hosted its' 22nd FUN and SAFE after prom party for the senior class and their guests. It was an amazing night of casino games, bouncy obstacle courses, race cars, a photo booth, food and lots and lots of prizes... all of which came to be from your donations including our community businesses, local schools and organizations, as well as the NQHS parents, and alumni! EVERY PERSON; student, parent, worker, volunteer, had an AMAZING TIME that night and returned home safe and sound! Not only are we appreciative of the monetary and gift donations, but we are thankful to those who contributed tireless hours of time and energy fundraising and preparing the details that make the Stay Out happen for this one night. We also want to THANK the Class of 2018... you are a class act!!! You not only showed appreciation to those who were there for you, but you demonstrated true KINDNESS to the community and to each other throughout. You left your mark on North Quincy High School and beyond! To everyone who made this event happen as it does each year, the NQHS Senior Stay Out Committee graciously thanks you...!

Housing Authority Milestone: All Units Fully Occupied

tor of facilities, he said 40 units would be vacant on a regular basis.

"The housing authority has reached a major, major milestone. We have zero vacant units – none. One thousand, five hundred and sixty units. Everyone of them is occupied," Marathas said in a recent interview.

"When I first came to the housing authority there were over 40 vacant units as a norm, but now we have zero."

He credited the agency's 80 employees for that turnaround.

"It's absolutely to the efficiency of the housing authority," Marathas replied when asked what he attributes full occupancy to.

"The entire staff is working together as just an incredible team. All the wheels are turning in the same direction…you can't really point your finger at one thing and say this is what it is. We've improved the entire operation, so it's everybody working together. A unit comes up and we're attacking it. Everyone is in there. They're doing their jobs and what they're supposed to be doing."

The housing authority has two waiting lists – one for elderly and disabled housing, and the other for family housing.

The waiting list for elderly and disabled housing has 5,000 to 6,000 people on it, Marathas said. He urged Quincy residents to take the length of waiting list into account if they plan on moving into a housing authority unit in the next several years.

"If you are a Quincy resident, on the elderly side you're probably looking at five to eight years, so planning for that is critical if you're an elder and you're planning and you're planning on trying to get into the Quincy Housing Authority," Marathas said.

"As a Quincy resident, you're given a preference, but in order for you to take advantage of that preference, you have to plan. So they should be getting on that waiting list now in anticipation of a five- to eight-year wait."

Residents of other communities can also sign up for the waiting list, but Marathas said it could take decades for them to move to the top of the queue.

"If you're a non-Quincy resident, it's 20 plus years – if ever – to be housed, and the reason why is because preference is given to local Quincy residents," he said.

The housing authority has plans to add six units – three at Sawyer Towers on Martensen Street and three at Snug Harbor – using funds from the Quincy Affordable Housing Trust Fund.

"The real exciting thing is we just received a grant from the Affordable Housing Trust Fund through the city of Quincy through the mayor's office to fund three new fully accessible handicap units, which are going to be built this year at Sawyer Towers," Marathas said.

"We also received a grant to renovate three family units down at Snug Harbor that used to be a daycare facility and used to be office space. They were offline for like the last 20 years. We're going to be rebuilding them as three new family units.

"So we're going to be putting six brand new units back online this coming year."

The housing authority receives funding from the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Marathas said the agency cannot rely on DHCD or HUD to provide funding for more units at this time.

"Unfortunately, with the way our funding works from DHCD and from HUD, we have a set number of units that we can own and we're at our max," he said. "We don't have really the capacity – unless we did something like a mixed-finance deal or a partnership with a private developer, and we're looking into the options, because the need for housing and the rents are just skyrocketing."

Marathas did note, however, that Gov. Charlie Baker in May signed a new bond bill that provides up to $1.8 billion for the creation of new housing units statewide for low- and moderate-income households.

"The good news is the state has just passed a bond bill that's releasing a large amount of money for the development of new units and for that kind of development. It's something that we definitely want to pursue," Marathas said.

In addition to the properties it owns, the Quincy Housing Authority is also responsible for administering Section 8 vouchers. Marathas said the agency manages Section 8 vouchers for 1,200 households who rent from private landlords, many of which are in Quincy. The rising rents seen in Quincy and elsewhere in the region impact the number of Section 8 vouchers the housing authority is able to grant.

"As landlords increase their rents, that increase comes to us – the housing authority," Marathas said. "We're basically one big, giant tenant with 1,200 homes out there that are being rented, so if these landlords start raising these rents, we can no longer service 1,200 people. So, as people attrition

FLOORING INSIDE the community room at O'Brien Towers has been recently replaced. The Quincy Housing Authority spent $400,000 to replace one-and-half square miles of flooring inside the high-rise building in Germantown. James Marathas, the QHA's executive director, said more residents are using community rooms in their properties. "The community space is vibrant," he said.

WINDOWS AT O'Brien Towers will be replaced this year. The project will be funded by a $3.5 million bond, which will also pay for a new roof at O'Brien Towers, Pagano Towers and Drohan Apartments.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TREATING A TOOTHACHE AT HOME

If a toothache lasts more than one to two days, it is important to schedule an appointment with the dentist. If left untreated, the abscess, tooth decay, cracked tooth, or lost filling that prompted the pain is likely to pose even greater problems (infection and worse pain). In the meantime, over-the-counter pain medications such as acetaminophen and ibuprofen may be used to reduce the pain and discomfort while waiting to see the dentist. There are also over-the-counter dental gels available that contain local anesthetics that numb pain. This treatment, however, is not suitable for children under the age of 12. In addition, while clove oil is an age-old treatment for toothaches, there is insufficient evidence to recommend its use.

The best way to zero in on a temporary home remedy for a toothache is probably through trial and error. Considering the abundance of products on the market today, we'll be happy to make recommendations so that you can make an informed decision. Since patient education is an important part of our practice, we're always ready to answer your questions about dental care. Please call us (617 479-6220) if you are concerned about any aspect of your dental health or if you would like to make an appointment at 44 Greenleaf Street. Learn more about us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

HEAT PUMPS have been installed at Quincy Housing Authority's high-rise buildings: O'Brien Towers (pictured), Pagnano Towers, Sawyer Towers and Tobin Towers. The heat pumps replaced electrical heating systems that were original to the buildings, all of which were built in the 1960s and '70s, and they can also provide air conditioning.

off the Section 8 program, we can't put new people on because we get a set amount of money.

"So if landlords are raising rents, something has to give. What's going to give is the number of people we're going to be able to serve."

During Marathas' first year as executive director, the housing authority completed more than $15 million in capital improvements, and more are in the pipeline.

The electrical heating systems at the authority's high-rise buildings – O'Brien Towers, Pagnano Towers, Sawyer Towers and Tobin Towers – were replaced with high-efficiency heat pumps that also provide air conditioning. The electrical heating systems were original to those buildings, which were built in the 1960s and '70s.

"They had extremely inefficient heat systems," Marathas said. "We've cut down over a half million dollars in energy usage in a year."

Another project the housing authority completed was the installation of new kitchens with stone countertops and bathrooms with walk-in showers at Crowley Court, the oldest housing stock the agency oversees.

"Beautiful," Marathas said of the newly renovated units. "The waiting list would be 80 years long if people saw what the product is."

The housing authority also completed a years-long effort to plant 630 trees throughout Snug Harbor.

"You've got to go down and see it – it's very impressive," Marathas said. "It looks like a forest down there now."

New wood-carved signs have been installed outside all QHA properties. The new signage says "The Residences At," followed by the name of the property, and is meant to give the residents there something to be proud of.

"You can't even tell you're in public housing when you drive down there," Marathas said. "It's trying to give them something to be proud of so that they feel differently about where they live."

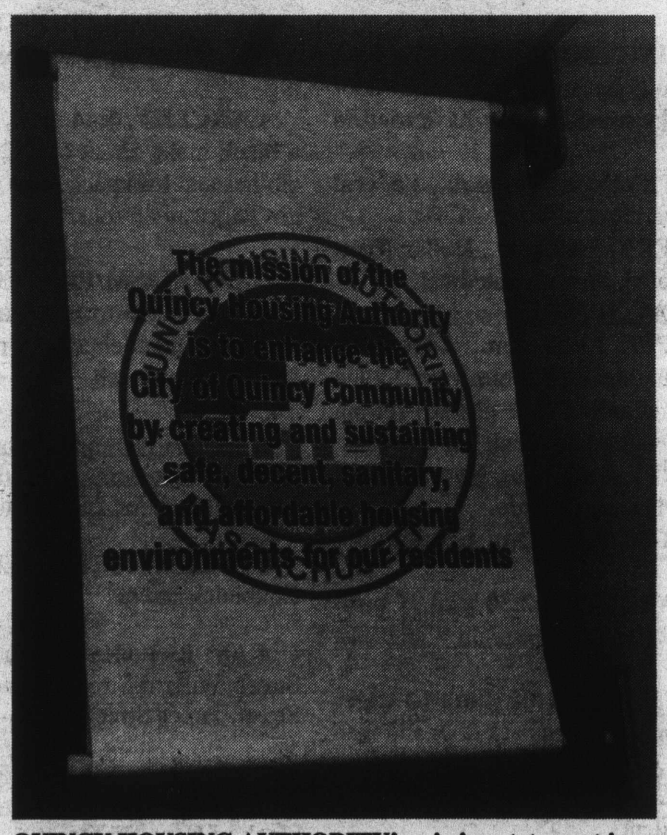

Marathas said the housing authority plans to replace the roofs on three buildings, as well as the windows at one of those properties, this year at a combined cost of $3.5 million.

"We're going to bond our federal properties and we're going to be putting new roofs on Pagnano Towers, Drohan Apartments and O'Brien Towers, all this year," he said. "We're going to be taking on another $3.5 million project and putting on all-new roofs on the buildings and new windows at O'Brien Towers, which is huge."

The Quincy Housing Authority was recently awarded $900,000 by Kurt Gaertner of the Massachusetts Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs for two new playgrounds in Snug Harbor. Construction is slated for August, Marathas said.

The Jean Kennedy Playground will be replaced with a half basketball court and a brand-new playground area. A new splash pad and bas-

QUINCY HOUSING AUTHORITY's mission statement is on display at the agency's main office inside Tobin Towers. "The team that's down there is working together and working so hard and we're doing incredible work," James Marathas, the head of the housing authority, said of the agency's 80 employees.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, June 24, at approximately 4:15 p.m., Captain Gregory Goyette was on patrol in the area of Squantum Point Park when he observed three males digging clams. He radioed to Officer James Silcox, who was working the Police boat to respond to the area. Area car Officer Kevin DiMattio also responded to the area.

Captain Goyette watched as these males dug up the clams they took from the mud flats and then put them into a bucket. Once they finished clamming, the males brought the clams up into the parking lot and placed them into the trunk of one of their vehicles. Captain Goyette took several photos for court purposes.

Contaminated clams are very dangerous for humans to eat if they haven't been through a purification plant. They hold high levels of bacteria causing serious illness and in some cases death.

One of the clammer's three vehicles was unregistered due to having a suspended registration. Captain Goyette took two pitchforks, a gardening tool and a bucket as evidence.

The three males, two from Quincy and one from Medford, were charged with digging shellfish From contaminated area. Two males were arrested at the scene and the third one was summonsed to court because he had his two young children with him. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Sunday, June 24, at approximately 12:30 a.m., Officers James Goldrick, Kenneth Wood, James Cassidy and Sgt. Steve DesRoche were dispatched to a Centre Street apartment complex for a male/female disorder.

The caller reported his girlfriend got into his apartment, opened his gun locker, and armed herself with a gun. He said he was able to get the gun away from her and stored it in a closet.

Upon arrival, the officers were met at the door by a male who was placed in handcuffs for safety purposes by Officer Wood and then the apartment was searched and secured. The male, who was the caller, stated his girlfriend fled the apartment. He added the girlfriend was actually an ex-girlfriend because they had broken up.

LT. DAN MINTON

The male said that on March 6, 2018, she was arrested by the Quincy Police Department for indecent assault and battery and assault and battery on a family household member. That case is currently open in Quincy District Court and the court also granted a restraining order against the girlfriend but according to him closed it so they could reconcile as friends. The male said he and his ex girlfriend had dinner together tonight and that she drank too much which led to a verbal argument.

The male said he stepped outside into the hallway of the apartment building to stop the argument and when he did this the ex girlfriend grabbed a double locked gun case holding a Smith and Wesson Shield 9mm. He stated that although the gun and magazines were unloaded, she took his keys to unlock one lock and guessed the combination on a second lock. She then loaded a magazine and then the gun.

When the male tried to reenter the apartment, she leaned up against the door to keep him out. He was able to get inside and saw that she had a loaded gun which she was holding to her head. He told her to put the gun down which she refused to do at first. Moments later, she dropped the gun so he rushed into the apartment and grabbed it. She went for the gun too and a scuffle broke out with the ex girlfriend biting him on the hand. She then fled the apartment.

Multiple Quincy Police units scoured the area and found her in a nearby parking lot with her dog. She appeared intoxicated, was unsteady on her feet and slurring her words. She said she was upset because of the open court case.

Due to her actions with the gun and intoxication, an ambulance was dispatched to the scene. She was transported, while under arrest, to Quincy Medical Center for an evaluation.

Due to the involvement of the firearms in this incident, Sgt. DesRoche ordered the firearms seized as a safety precaution. A total of three guns (which were all unloaded and locked), magazines and ammunition were seized and placed into the QPD Evidence Room.

The ex girlfriend, a 29-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with possession of a firearm without FID, breaking into a depository and assault and battery on an intimate partner. Nice Work!

SCAM PHONE CALLS – DO NOT RETURN PHONE CALLS!

Citizens are letting me know about the recent rash of scam calls; especially the IRS and they are instructed to call a number to avoid prosecution. Any initial call from the IRS is a scam.

Do not call the telephone number back! If you do, you will most likely get a recorded message stating that the number is not accepting calls. Actually the scammer is making note of your telephone number and you can expect numerous return phone calls from the scammer.

You are telling the scammer that you are a potential victim.

Harborview Residents Hosting Family Fun Day

Event Aug. 18 From 1-6 P.M. Open To The Public

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Harborview Residents Committee, a group of Quincy Housing Authority residents, will host a family fun day next month.

The event, which is open to the entire community, is set for Saturday, Aug. 18, from 1 to 6 p.m. at General Palmer Field at 53 Bicknell St.

"The day is going to be an amazing display of what community looks like when we have fun and unite together to spread love, hope and encouragement to one another," Karen Flaherty, the chairperson of the residents committee, said in a recent interview.

The Quincy Housing Authority is working with the residents' group on the event.

"It's going to be nonstop music, entertainment, games – all kinds of stuff going on," housing authority executive director James Marathas said.

"The main theme behind the event is to promote a drug-free, alcohol-free and violence-free Quincy community. It's an incredible, incredible event they've put together."

The event will include performances from musical acts, water slides, an inflatable obstacle course, a dunk tank and a snow cone bus. Food will also be available at the event.

Local community organizations are expected to participate in the event as well, setting up tables with information on their services for residents. Residents who are in recovery from opioid addiction have also been invited to participate in the event and share their stories.

"We have hearts for the community," Flaherty said. "We want to see people rise by bringing resources of help."

The event will also include a raffle of items donated by local business. Shylo Schuboth, the treasurer for the residents committee, said the Boston Red Sox have agreed to gift items to be raffled. Other area sports teams have been contacted as well.

Flaherty said she hopes the event will help develop a sense of community for the residents living in the area.

"We're kind of isolated down there in Germantown, so we want to build community," she said. "That's our goal…we're trying to build community and bring positive attention down there."

Marathas said the Harborview Residents Committee has been working hard to make a difference for the residents it represents.

"They are an unbelievable group of people," he said. "They are working so hard to change the idea of living down there."

At United First Parish Church

Ceremony July 11 For President John Quincy Adams

The History and Visitors Program at United First Parish Church, Church of the Presidents announces the annual Presidential Wreath-Laying Ceremony for John Quincy Adams, Sixth President of the United States, will be held Wednesday, July 11 at noon at the church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Commander Julia Lasleur of the Navy Operational Support Center Quincy will serve as President Donald Trump's representative for the official ceremony.

Just over 190 years ago, President John Quincy Adams wrote a letter to a group of men who were responsible for planning the construction of a new meeting house for the First Parish in his home town of Quincy, Massachusetts. Today, that meeting house is the United First Parish Church, Quincy, the fourth home to an active congregation that has been in continuous operation since its founding 1639. It is also the Church of the Presidents, burial site of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams, and the only building in the United States to house the final resting place of two Presidents and Two First Ladies.

This year's ceremony commemorates the 251st birthday anniversary of the President with a celebration of the Church of the Presidents past and present. This year's ceremony will highlight the church's spiritual and historical identities, with a specific focus upon the important and exciting processes are happening both inside and outside the Church today, from its first ever Master Plan and the construction project to make the lower level of the building accessible, to the final stages of completing the Hancock-Adams Common.

The ceremony's speakers will be Mayor Thomas Koch; Douglas Adams, direct descendant of John and Abigail Adams; Dr. Ed. Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society; and William Galvin, secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Music for the ceremony will be provided by the Quincy Choral Society and Norman Corey, music director at the United First Parish Church.

A reception following the ceremony will feature a special exhibit on the Quincy Granite used to build the church presented by representatives from the Quincy Granite Workers and Quarry Museum and a birthday cake supplied by Konditor Meister, Braintree.

Admission to the wreath-laying ceremony, the Adams Crypt and Church Sanctuary are free. Donations to support the History and Visitors Program are appreciated.

It's Now 'Hamel-Lydon Chapel & Cremation Service OF MA'

Two Well-Known Local Funeral Homes Merge

Two of Quincy's most established funeral homes have merged, as Hamel Funeral Care & Cremation Service and Lydon Chapel for Funerals combined to become one company.

Effective June 25, the two firms officially became "Hamel-Lydon Chapel & Cremation Service of Massachusetts." The new funeral service will be based out of the current Lydon Chapel located at 644 Hancock St. in Wollaston Center. Hamel Funeral Care's longstanding building at 26 Adams St. in Quincy Center will be sold.

"It's an exciting time to see these two well-respected funeral homes merge," said Christopher P. Goulet, Sr., current partner and managing director for Hamel Funeral Care. "The Hamel and Lydon families have served generations of local families in times of need, and working together, that legacy will continue for years to come."

Through the merger, Goulet becomes president of Hamel-Lydon Funeral Care, while Lydon Chapel Funeral Director Michelle Lydon will serve as the new firm's vice president.

"We are thrilled to be joining with Hamel Funeral Care," Lydon said. "We've known each other and worked together for years, and this merger will enable us to continue the tradition of compassionate care and service for which we are both known."

Already, Lydon noted, the benefits of the merger are being felt, as the existing Lydon Chapel is being renovated and expanded to offer new facilities, including greater handicapped accessibility.

"The Hamel and Lydon names are both known for personalized care and service," Lydon said, "and we look forward to building on that reputation."

Both funeral homes have a strong family connection. Hamel Funeral Care was founded in 1932 by Charles Wickens and for many years was known as Wickens & Troupe. The firm then became known as Hamel, Wickens & Troupe, with Charles Wickens' son-in-law, Roger Hamel, overseeing operations for 45 years. Until recently, the funeral home was operated by Hamel's son, Scott Hamel, who worked alongside his father and mother, Judy Hamel, for 28 years.

"It's really been a family business," Roger Hamel said, adding that family health concerns convinced the Hamels that the time was right to transition away from day-to-day operations of the funeral business. Scott Hamel will continue to be involved in operations as a consultant/funeral director to Goulet, he said.

"Chris (Goulet) is a great funeral director," Roger Hamel said, "and it's nice to know the Hamel-Lydon Chapel will continue the funeral home's tradition."

Lydon Chapel, meanwhile, has served local families for more than 60 years, with Michelle Lydon carrying on the tradition from her father, John "Jack" Lydon. In recent years, Lydon Chapel also began hosting wedding ceremonies in its chapel.

Plans are underway, Michelle Lydon said, for a formal ribbon-cutting ceremony to mark the merger and opening of the new business at the Wollaston location.

Norfolk Register O'Donnell Hosts Computer Seminar

As part of an ongoing effort to provide outreach to Norfolk County communities, Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell recently hosted a free informational seminar on computer assisted land record research.

At the seminar, attendees learned how to navigate the Registry's online research page www.norfolkdeeds.org and to access documents such as deeds, mortgage discharges, Homesteads and other land related materials. The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds state-of-the-art computer system has more than 6 million land document images available for viewing, dating back to 1793.

"We have put a great deal of effort into ensuring our land documents are online and are accessible within 24 business hours of recording," O'Donnell said. "The feedback we have received from attendees indicates these computer seminars are very helpful whether or not the attendee is a real estate professional, genealogical enthusiast or simply an interested member of the general public."

For those attending the seminar, computer skills were not required. Each attendee received free reference materials, which they took home with them. Additionally, there were several staffers on hand, including Register O'Donnell, who were available to assist and answer questions.

"Those attending our recent spring seminar learned how easy it is to look up land related documents. With this knowledge, they can do this research from the comfort and convenience of their home or work computer," O'Donnell said.

"Computer seminars are held by the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds twice each year in the fall and the spring. The dates are advertised in local papers throughout the county as well as through the Registry's social media outlets. For further information, you can contact Alicia Gardner at 781-461-6104 or at agardner@norfolkdeeds.org," O'Donnell said.

What You Can Do About Ticks: Solutions & Treatment

By JIM DOYLE, Hartney Greymont, a Davey company

Ticks and tick-borne diseases are continually rising in the United States. In fact, the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) just found that tick-borne diseases have more than tripled in the last 12 years.

Each year, there are more Lyme cases than the year before! This untreatable disease accounts for 82 percent of all tick-borne diseases, according to the CDC.

As someone who works outside (and loves to be outdoors when I'm off work), that makes me very cautious.

While ticks are most active at the beginning of fall, immature ticks emerge in late spring and summer. At this stage in their life, they're only the size of a poppy seed, which makes them easy to miss. Plus, the CDC says most humans are infected through the bites of these immature ticks.

Right now, they inhabit our lawns and gardens–and love hiding along the edges of stone walls or in shady, moist spots on the ground.

Try these simple solutions to minimize the tick population surrounding your home.

Solutions and Treatment

Hartney Greymont arborists like me recommend the following steps to help reduce your home's tick population. Remember: no natural, vegetated area can be considered free of ticks. Instead, the goal is to give ticks fewer places to hide.

Here are a few ways to do that:

1. Take away the places ticks love. Ticks prefer damp, humid locations and are extremely susceptible to dehydration. Have a certified arborist prune your trees and shrubs. When done correctly, this reduces your property's humidity by improving light and air circulation. Also, ticks do not like to cross barren, sunny areas, so place a mulch border that's four to six feet wide around your property's perimeter.

2. Clean it up! Get rid of brush piles or areas with lots of green debris. If you see any other overgrown areas of your garden, cut those back as well.

3. Deter deer. Add a physical barrier, like a fence if practical, to keep deer and other tick-carrying animals out of your yard. Deer repellant spray may also be applied onto plantings around your home.

4. Keep birds far away. Birds, too, can carry ticks. It's smart to move bird feeders and bird baths away from areas where you and your family congregate in the yard.

5. Protect yourself. Wear long pants if you'll be outside for an extended amount of time and apply a tick spray that contains either DEET or Picaridin every four to eight hours. Tick repellent clothing is also available and can repel ticks and other biting insects through multiple washings.

6. Treat your yard. Just like you spray yourself with a tick spray, you can do the same to your yard. At Hartney, we apply an EPA-approved treatment to the ground level of your yard, which covers all the spots ticks or hosts would gravitate. Within 30 minutes, the treatment is dry, so you can be outside (and have fewer ticks to worry about)!

For more information on reducing ticks on your property contact a certified arborist from Hartney Greymont by calling 781-444-1227 or visiting www.hartney.com.

Commissioners Celebrate Norfolk County's 225th Anniversary

For Glenn Carew, Chris Perry and Russell Metcalf of Norfolk County's Engineering Department, Wednesday, June 20, 2018 was a day like many others. Similar to their efforts in other Norfolk County communities, the trio was performing an existing conditions survey on Washington Street in Franklin, at the request of town officials in the community, which included an analysis on the street's topography, boundaries, utilities and easements.

A few miles up the road in Dedham, however, the Engineering Department's work on that Wednesday, the 20th day of June meant even more to the Norfolk County commissioners. The commissioners had just signed a proclamation celebrating the 225th anniversary of Norfolk County, which was established on June 20, 1793, and the Engineering Department's efforts that same day was a testament to the County's continued commitment to each of the County's 28 constituent communities.

"Today's Norfolk County Commissioners take great pride in the rich history of Norfolk County and its diverse communities, and we are excited to lead efforts to help celebrate the County's 225th anniversary," said Chairman Francis W. O'Brien, of Dedham, one of the County's three elected commissioners. "It remains an honor for Norfolk County to continue partnering with local communities to provide a range of valuable services. We very much appreciate the dedication of the many County employees who work to ensure that our constituents are served with the highest levels of service, competency and respect."

NORFOLK COUNTY commissioners with a proclamation marking the 225th anniversary of Norfolk County. From left: Joseph Shea, chairman Francis O'Brien, and Peter Collins.

The County's 225th Anniversary Proclamation, as approved by Chairman O'Brien and Commissioners Peter Collins, of Milton, and Joseph Shea, of Quincy, highlighted the County's enabling legislation signed into law by then-Governor John Hancock in 1792. It also referenced Norfolk County's reputation as the "County of Presidents" due to four U.S. presidents having been born in the County: President John Adams, from Quincy; President John Quincy Adams, also from Quincy; President John F. Kennedy, from Brookline; and President George H.W. Bush, born in Milton.

The Proclamation also underscored the continued success of the County's seven departments, including the Commissioners' Office, the Engineering Department, the Facilities Maintenance Department, the Norfolk County Agricultural High School, Registry of Deeds, the Norfolk County Treasurer's Office and the Wollaston Recreational Facility.

A full copy of the Proclamation can be read by visiting the County's website at: https://www.norfolkcounty.org/news/norfolk-county-commissioners-celebrate-the-countys-225th-anniversary-72.

Hancock Lot Closes Monday, Foster Street Lot Available Thursday-Saturday 5-10 PM

The remaining 100 open parking spaces in the Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center will close starting on Monday, July 9 to make way for the construction of a new 712-space public parking garage, a new civic space and public park, and a 15-story mixed-use tower in the Hancock Parking Lot.

At the same time, the City will partner with Quincy Mutual Insurance to open that company's parking lot accessed via Foster Street to gain 100 free parking spots on Thursday through Saturday evenings from 5-10 p.m. This is the gated parking lot used primarily by Quincy Mutual employees. The gate will be lifted to allow the public access to the lot from 5 to 10 p.m. from Thursday to Saturday.

City officials also noted there are 200 free spaces available every evening at the Bellotti Courthouse – directly across from the Chestnut Street entrance to the former Hancock Lot.

Parking "ambassadors" will be working Thursday thru Saturday on behalf of the City to guide drivers to both the Courthouse lot and the Quincy Mutual lot. If those lots are full, visitors will be directed to the nearby Ross parking area – where there are more than 400 total free evening parking spaces connected to the downtown's restaurant hub by a renovated and newly lit pedestrian walkway.

A new signage and branding campaign will accompany the implementation of the parking changes.

During day-time business hours, paid hourly parking will also be available at the Ross Lot. A free valet service manages the lot during the day to maximize available space. There will be no change to the existing provisions of the parking plan for monthly pass holders.

Through a combination of new lots and maximizing existing parking, the City has made available more than 700 free parking spaces at peak hours, not including on-street parking, in the immediate vicinity of the Quincy Center core to access shops and more than 40 restaurants and bars in the area.

Construction on the full project is scheduled to take between 18 to 24 months to complete.

Wollaston Intersection Named For Korean War Hero

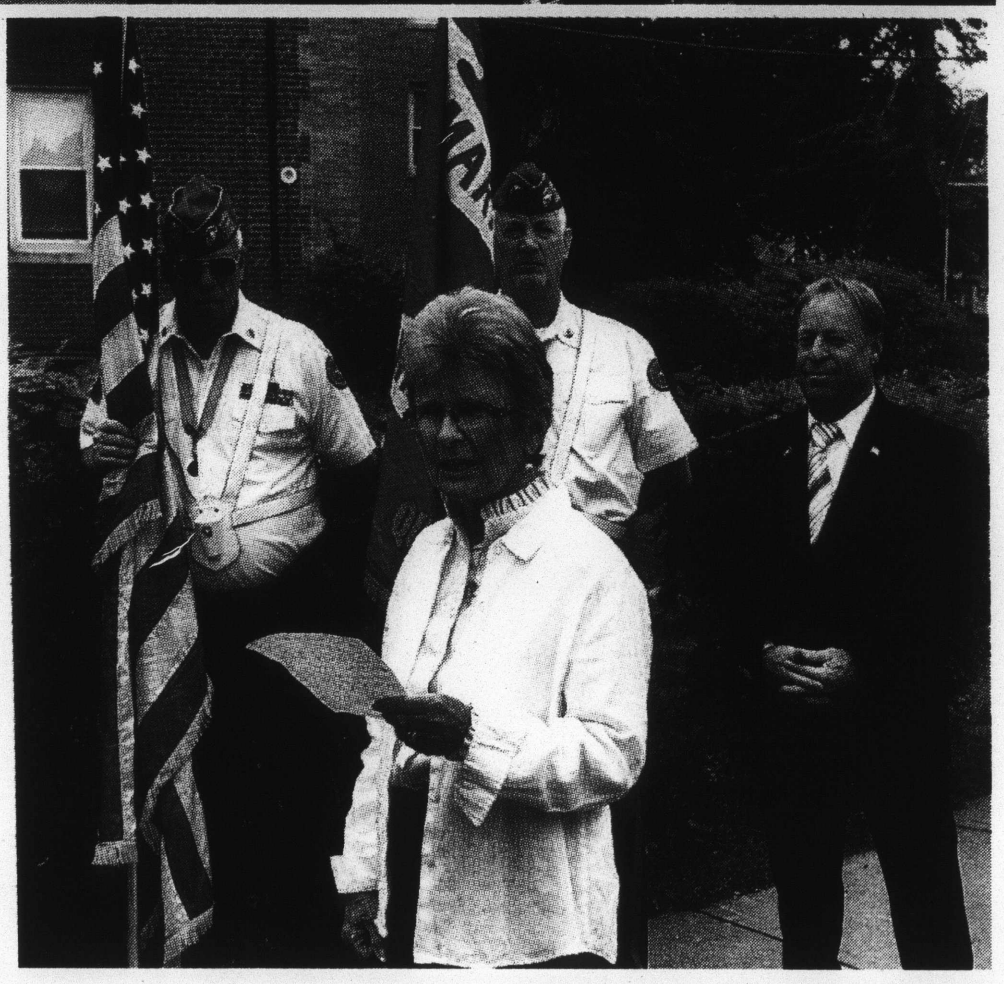

USMC 2nd Lt. Harry R. "Buddy" Worth Jr., Memorial Square At Eastabrook Rd. And Fenno St.

THE CORNER OF Fenno Street and Estabrook Road has been named in honor of Marine 2nd Lt. Harry R. "Buddy" Worth Jr. who was killed serving in the Korean War era. Worth grew up on Estabrook Road.

By TOM GORMAN

Judy (Worth) O'Connor was 13 years old when her family received a Western Union telegram that her brother, Marine 2nd Lt. Harry R. "Buddy" Worth Jr., was killed while piloting a jet during a 1955 training mission in Korea.

Sixty-three years later, she was joined by family and friends at the corner of Fenno Street and Estabrook Road to name the intersection in his memory – just several houses down from their Estabrook Road childhood home.

"There is no better way to remember that individual, for everybody in the neighborhood, present, past and future, to know that that he walked these streets and he was part of the community," Quincy Veterans Services Director George Nicholson told the gathering that included a Marine Corps League color guard. "He paid the ultimate sacrifice while serving his country."

The June 27 ceremony honored the 22-year-old Korean War Marine pilot for his heroic actions on April 8, 1955. Second Lt. Worth was flying his F-J-2 Fury when the oxygen system failed causing him to lose control of the aircraft. As the disabled plane was plummeting toward a village, he was able to recover enough control to steer it away. The aircraft, however, was too close to the ground, and crashed into a field.

O'Connor credits her brother's actions in preventing the plane from crashing into the village.

"It would have landed right in the village and killed many people," she said.

After graduating from Quincy High School, 2nd Lt. Worth attended Northwestern University in Illinois before joining the Navy. He later joined the Marines to study jets and was assigned to the 232nd Red Devil Squadron, the oldest continuous aviation squadron of the Marine Corps.

"He loved flying, the service and his country," said O'Connor.

Mayor Thomas Koch said that if it weren't for the sacrifices of people such as 2nd Lt. Worth, "we wouldn't have the freedoms we enjoy today."

Koch said 2nd Lt. Worth's life was cut too short.

"What could have been, his story, his life," said Koch. "This is a small measure that we as a city can do to show our care, concern and gratitude to the life of Buddy Worth."

O'Connor said that her childhood friend, Mary Jane Martin, often chummed

Point Webster Middle School Celebrates Clean Energy Day

Point Webster Middle School recently hosted a Clean Energy Day for approximately 200 seventh and eighth grade students after they were awarded $8,000 in grant funding through the Massachusetts Clean Energy Center (MassCEC).

The event, took place on June 5th in Point Webster's school gymnasium and featured hands-on science, technology, engineering and math activities for students. Through the Mass CEC program, local clean energy businesses were invited to partner with Point Webster and five other schools across Massachusetts and Boston Solar and Holly Hill Farm participated in the event.

The hand-on experience in clean energy had a focus on solar energy and organic material to energy process. As part of the kickoff ceremony, students heard about clean energy innovations and careers from Shelly Dein, City of Quincy Director of Energy and Sustainability.

The City of Quincy believes it is important to be good stewards of the planet and works hard to minimize its"environmental footprint" so we can live in a safe and healthy world. Reducing use of fossil fuel energy is not always obvious and Clean Energy Day enabled Point Webster students to learn about what can be done locally using solar and organic material energy.

Quincy Public Schools is partnered with Holly Hill Farm to educate students about fresh, healthy food and local food producers by changing food purchasing and education practices at schools. Through this relationship, students gain access to healthy, local foods as well as educational opportunities such as school gardens and farm field trips. Linking Food Production, Waste Production and Energy Production gives students a multi-faceted learning experience that connected topics like the hydrological cycle and crop management with an understanding of the energy density of organic materials and the role that beneficial microbial communities have digesting the waste to create methane as biogas or creating electricity directly.

The City of Quincy recently installed large solar, photovoltaic, arrays on 13 of the City's public schools which now generate ~ 10% of the electricity that the City government uses each year, with clean solar energy, instead of fossil fuels. Point Webster Middle School also partnered with Boston Solar who gave students the opportunity to better understand what solar photovoltaic (PV) technology is all about, and how it contributes to changing the way we generate electricity. Boston Solar had a number of volunteers who facilitated workshops at Clean Energy Day and provided sample solar arrays, solar spinners, and an interactive presentation on home energy qualifications.

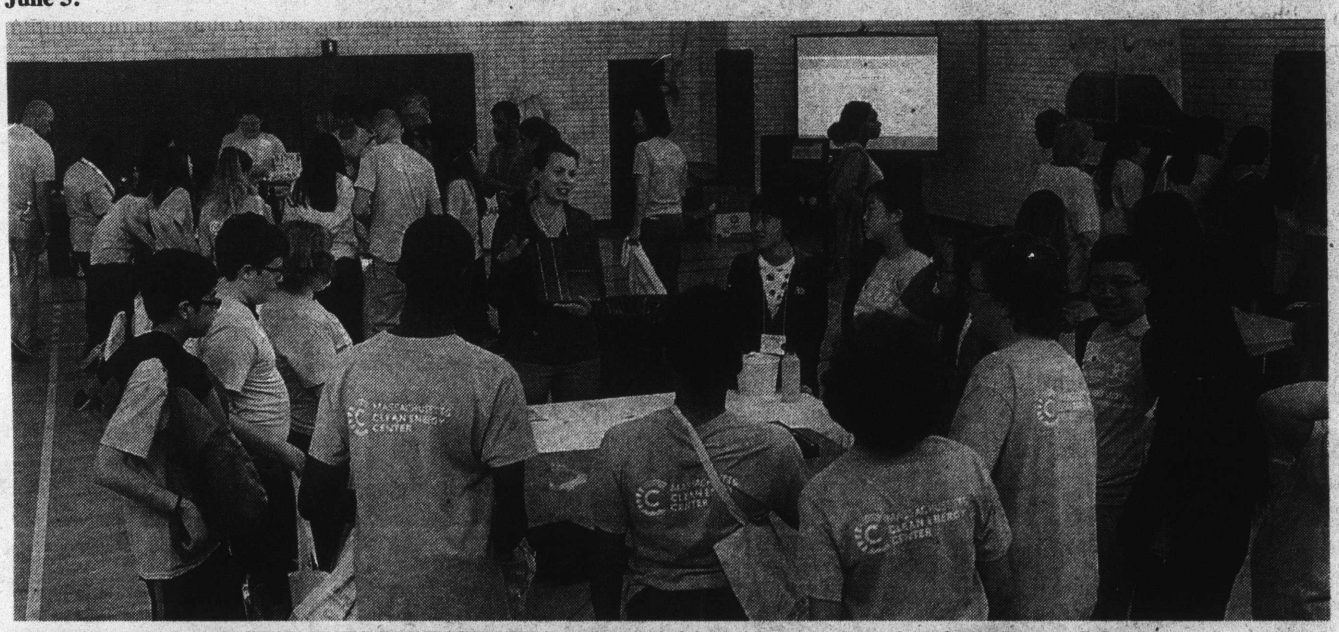

In preparation for Clean Energy Day, Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) education specialist, Meg Tabacsko visited with Point Webster Middle School students on May 14th and discussed the wastewater treatment process and how sludge is now processed into fertilizer pellets for gardening and landscaping. The MWRA provided a large water (filter) fountain so all students could fill their water bottles during the activity day. In the fall, all eighth grade students will also participate in a field trip to Deer Island.

Volunteers for the event included: Dana Goodman and a team of representatives from Boston Solar, Elicia Trello and a team from MassCEC, Janice McPhillips from Holly Hill Farm, Ms. Krieger, Mr. Swanson and the Students from Quincy High Schools Advanced Placement Environmental Science class, Point Webster Science, Technology and Engineering Teachers, and Sarah Dufour and the Quincy Public Schools food services department who provided lunch for the entire school on June 5th.

Students met in the gymnasium at the start of each Clean Energy Day workshop, heard from school and city officials and were then organized into two large groups, both starting at interactive stations/projectors for a workshop overview of either solar energy or organic material to energy presentations . At this starting point, representatives from MassCEC distributed gift bags which included a water bottle, colored pencils and markers, and a few other goodies.

In order for every student to participate in every activity, after rotating through three stations, students switched from composting to solar starting again as a large group at the projectors. The entire workshop (6 stations) was 2 hours and 15 minutes in length.

• Station 1: Hands-on composting bin activity. Oxygenation techniques were discussed while students explored various soil samples and were able to plant seeds of their own to take home in yogurt containers.

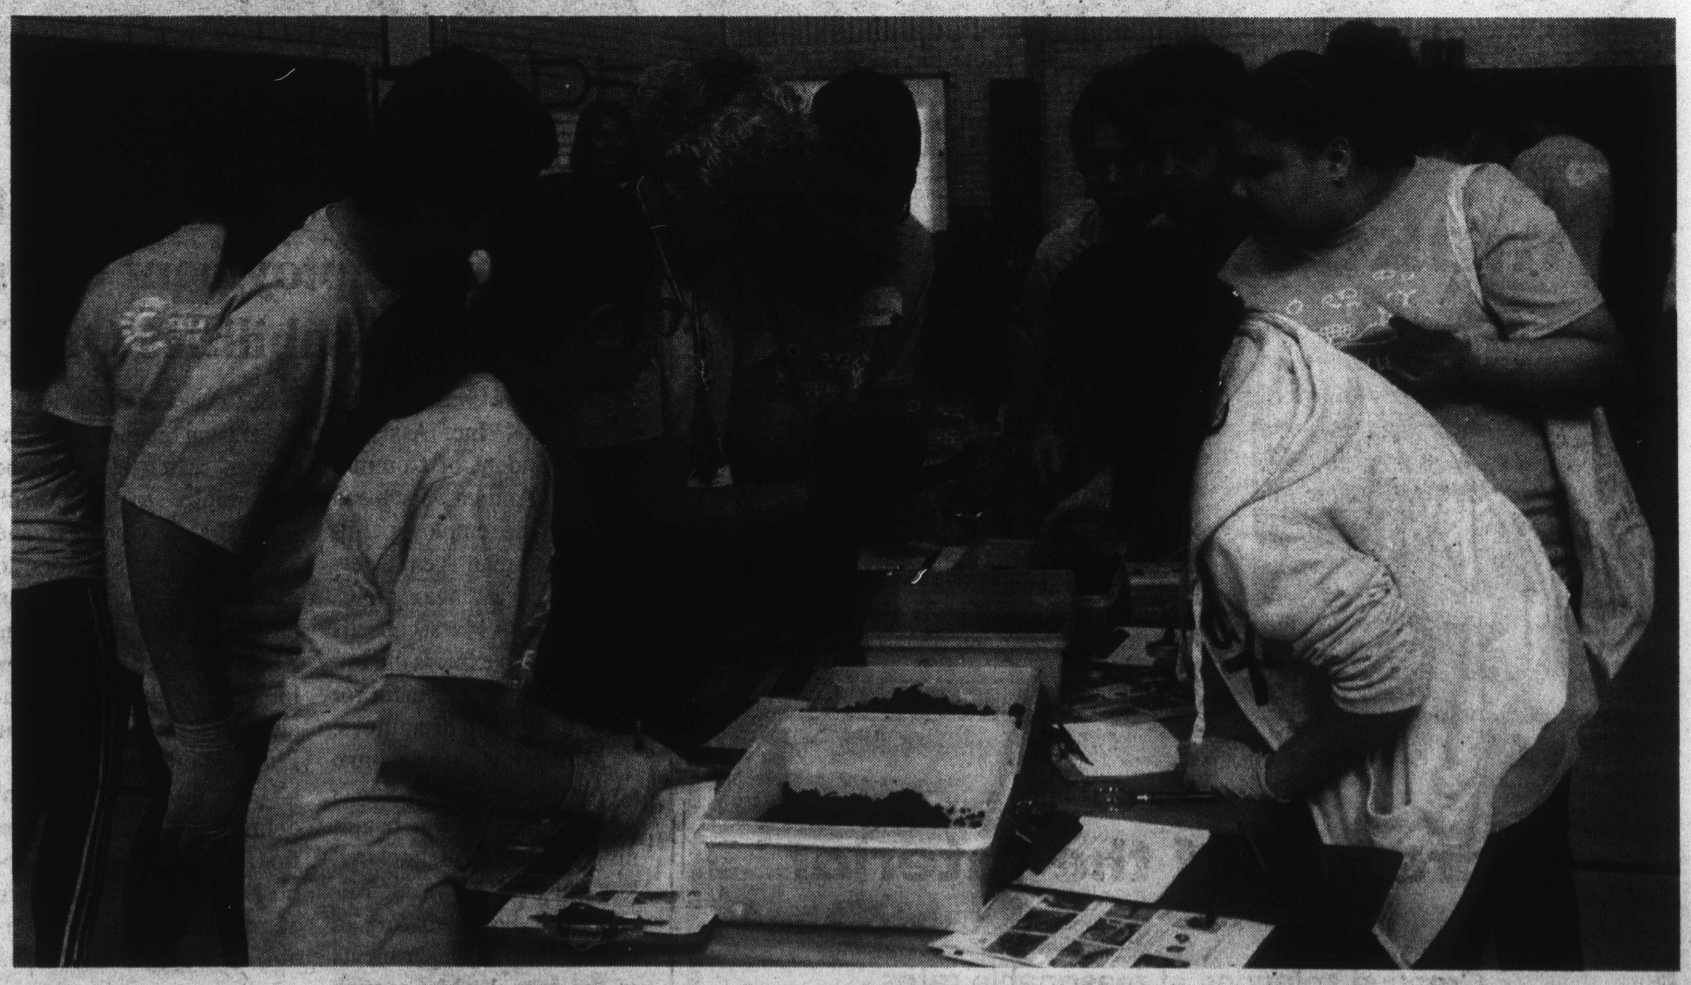

• Station 2: - Compost material and insect search, using microscopes to see microorganisms in the compost. At this station we raffled one $10 gift certificate to frozen freddies during each rotation.

• Station 3: - Interactive lesson tying composting/ organic material to energy to energy lesson using mudwatt student kits.

• Station 5: - Students walked through what was necessary to have solar installed on a home and had time to research whether or not their own home qualified for an installation

PhRMA, Rep. Ron Mariano Support STEM Programs

At Point Webster School

MASSACHUSETTS REP. Ronald Mariano of Quincy recently joined Laura Perloff, senior director of Advocacy and Strategic Alliances of the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA), to announce a new educational grant for Point Webster Middle School to support the school's science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) programs.

Massachusetts Rep. Ronald Mariano of Quincy recently joined Laura Perloff, senior director of Advocacy and Strategic Alliances of the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA), to announce a new educational grant for Point Webster Middle School to support the school's science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) programs.

In addition to announcing the new funding support, Perloff and Rep. Mariano met with students to talk about furthering their STEM education and the many opportunities to apply those skills in the biopharmaceutical sector.

"I am proud to be here at the school I attended as a boy to support the STEM leaders of the future," Rep. Mariano said. "Point Webster Middle School is working hard to ensure their students are prepared with the STEM skills they need to succeed in the classroom and in their future careers. Many thanks to PhRMA for recognizing Point Webster Middle School and investing in our students."

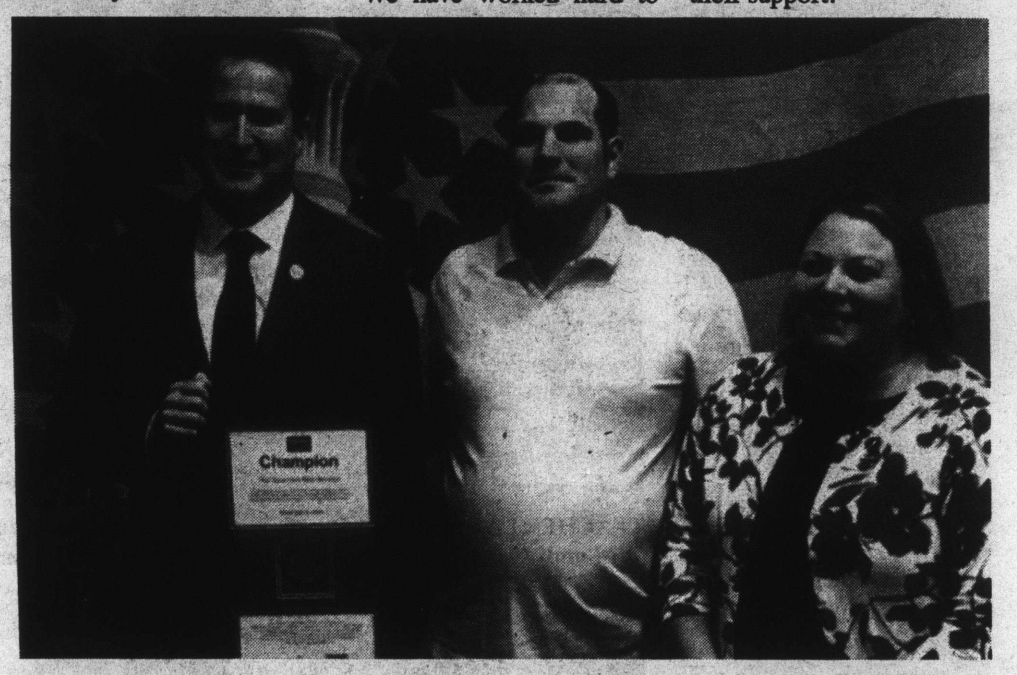

"PhRMA is proud to support the future innovators at schools like Point Webster Middle School, who have worked hard to provide an array of robust after-school programs for their students." Perloff said. "These programs allow students additional time outside of the classroom to explore their interests and even greater exposure to STEM."

Point Webster Middle School is a public school located in Quincy serving grades 5-8. Point Webster Middle School has over 335 students. Point Webster Middle School offers several different after-school STEM activities for their students. Their after-school programming includes Robotics (introductory and advance levels), Space Club and a new program, Q-GEMS (Quincy Girls Empowered, Motivated and Successful).

"Point Webster Middle School is thrilled to have been selected to receive a STEM Talent Pipeline Grant," said Principal Christine Barrett. "We have worked hard to provide unique extracurricular STEM opportunities for our students to participate in. This grant will help us continue to provide opportunities for our students to explore their interests. Point Webster Middle School thanks PhRMA for their support."

Young Man With Disabilities Advocates For Employment Of Individuals With Disabilities On Capitol Hill

During the week of June 11, WORK Inc. Assistant Vice President of Communications Andrea Mitsch and Ability One employee Michael Buckman spent a few days in Washington D.C. meeting with Massachusetts legislators to express the importance of employment for individuals with disabilities.

Michael is a long time employee of WORK Inc.'s AbilityOne program beginning right out of high school. For the past 17 years, Michael has been working in the custodial departments of the John W McCormick Building, Volpe Transportation Building and currently at the Capt. John F. William U.S. Coast Guard Station.

During his time in Washington, Michael had the opportunity to meet with members of Congress and Massachusetts Senators to discuss his experience of having a job through the Ability One program and the importance those individuals with disabilities have the same opportunities.

"My disability does not define me, I am a person first." By having the opportunity to work and earn a paycheck, Buckman is able to support his wife and son and create a life that he wants them to have.

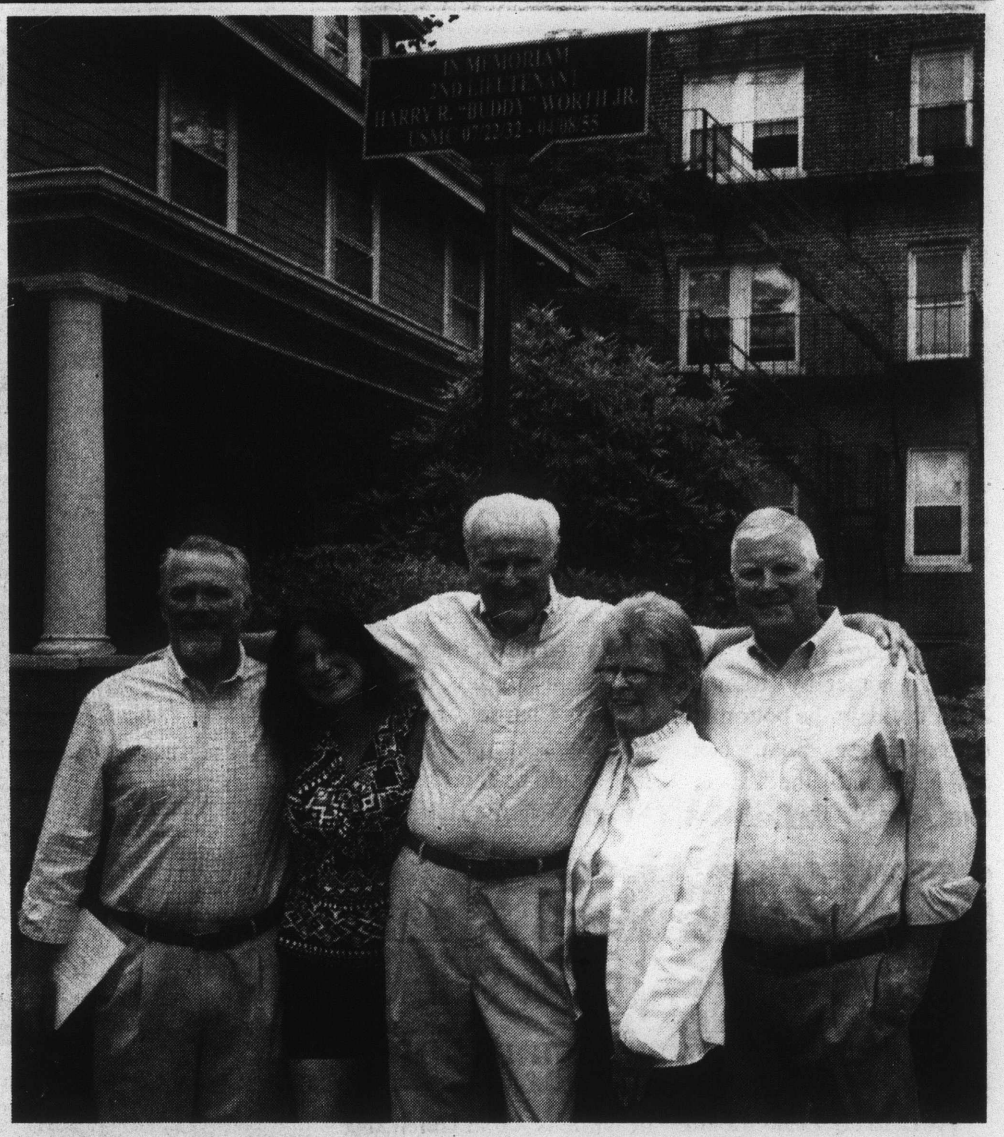

Buckman also expressed to the legislators that he was not only advocating for himself and the gratitude he has for having a job through the AbilityOne program, but he wants to make sure that his son, who also has disabilities, will have employment opportunities when he is older.

"I am laying down the roadway to ensure my son has employment opportunities. People with disabilities are people first and should not be treated differently," Buckman said.

After his day on the Hill meeting with various members, Michael stated, "I was here to make some noise and that is what I did."

around with Buddy Worth.

"You keep reminding me of the things we did with Bud," she told Martin.

Martin remembered the day they got word that 2nd Lt. Worth was killed in Korea.

"It was a Saturday and Judy and I were going out shopping," she said. "A Western Union telegram was brought to the house. It was very sad, very overwhelming."

O'Connor unveiled the memorial – a sign atop a post that reads: "In Memoriam, 2nd Lt. Harry R. "Buddy" Worth, USMC, 7/22/32 - 4/8/55."

The Marine's name is also inscribed on the city's Korean War Memorial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery where he is buried.

Nicholson noted that the ceremony was just two days after the nation observed the 68th anniversary of the beginning of the Korean War. He said that Second Lt. Worth's sacrifice will always be remembered.

> 'Buddy died a hero. He gave his life saving lives.'

"It's sad that he died in training," he said. "What gets lost to people is that Buddy died a hero. He gave his life saving lives. That's a precious memory. As long as we live, his memory will always be there."

Nicholson added that it is also sad that no one will know what future he had.

"We'll never know what he could've done had things gone another way," he said. "The one thing that will last along with this (memorial) is the lifetime of memories of him and with him that will endure forever."

Rotary Defeats MacDonald Insurance For Cal Majors Crown

8-7 In Extra Innings

Rotary defeated MacDonald Insurance 8-7 in extra innings under the lights at Quarry Hills on June 22nd to capture the Cal Majors championship.

Rotary was led by Zach Taylor and Andrew Novak who combined for seven innings of work on the mound.

MacDonald went up early with a 1-0 lead but was answered quickly on a two-run homer by Rotary's Zach Taylor in the bottom of the first inning. Rotary held a 4-1 lead until the fifth inning when hits by Joe Bates, Sean Toland and Pat Fox put MacDonald in front 5-4. MacDonald would add another run in the sixth inning to take a 6-4 lead.

Rotary was down to their last strike with two outs in the bottom of the sixth inning when a base hit by Tommy Wirtz knocked in Shea Winters and Andrew Novak to even the game, 6-6. MacDonald regained the lead in the top of the seventh inning on key hits by Sean Toland, Charlie Ambirault, and Keira Murphy but that lead would be short lived, as Rotary's Charlie Baker hit a line drive with two outs in the bottom of the seventh to knock in Emmett Gurwitch and Adrian Alviarez for the walk-off win.

Rotary had outstanding performances at the plate by Joe Lencki (3-3) and Nate Hall (2-3) and strong defensive play by Patrick Bryan, Shea Winters, Emmett Gurwitch, Adrian Alviarez, Jack Greene and Miles Hastings.

Love, Support At First Quincy Pride Day Was Remarkable

As LGBTQ Pride month comes to a close, I want to thank my fellow Q citizens and the City of Quincy.

June of 2018 will go down in history for hosting the first ever LGBTQ Pride day in our fair city, Quincy. The love and support that was present at Q Pride Day was remarkable. About 1,500 people of all ages, races, sexual orientations attended the celebration at Pageant Field. Seeing the rainbow flag flying at Pageant Field was one of the most moving things I have ever had the chance to witness.

Tremendous gratitude and honor is due Councillor-at-Large Anne Mahoney for gathering together a group of various Q citizens and creating a team, the Q Pride Committee. Personally, I am honored to be part of the Q Pride Committee and thankful to them: Veronica Bertrand, Pam Green, Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mahoney, Joseph Moya, Garrett Nichols, Nolan O'Brien, Alicia Rinaldi-Boyd, David Taylor, and our chairperson, Frank Taylor.

Now is the time to reflect on what we, as a city, gain from our diversity. Some June to come, may the rainbow flag fly at Quincy City Hall as it does in Boston and many other cities.

'Christianity and the 12-Steps' Summer Sermon Series At Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Quincy, daily opens its doors for Recovery Group meetings.

A minimum of 12 separate groups meet in the church building. The Recovery groups meeting at QCUMC include: AA, Al-Anon, GA, AWOL groups as well as men's groups and women's groups.

As in many local churches offering space for these important gatherings soon discover, the parishioners are not fully aware of the history of 12-Steps nor its principles and traditions. Many who attend these meetings are not fully aware of the history and activities of the church in which they meet. "There is a strong intersection between Christianity and 12-Step programs," said the Rev. Becky Baumann, the church pastor. "Alternatively, we recognize that persons of all faith backgrounds as well as the agnostic are accepted, embraced and honored within the Recovery programs."

This program is held during the worship time at 10:30 each Sunday morning and will follow the regular order of worship. The sermon series will look at each of the 12-steps while also equating relevant scriptural passages from the Bible for each of the 12-Steps.

"Our desire in holding this series is to support Recovery in our local community and to inform all who come to worship with us," Rev. Baumann said.

"We began our series on June 24th with an Introduction to AA and the 12-steps recognizing and discovering that its origins were rooted in Christian thought and the Oxford movement. AA and 12-step Recovery programs do not align with any specific religion or ideology. Our intention is to help the local church members more fully understand the mission of the church as it opens its doors in welcome to many Recovery groups and to the countless individuals who attend these meetings," Rev. Baumann added.

The public is invited to join in this journey of understanding throughout the summer months.

"This week, July 8th we will look at Step 2: 'Came to believe that a Power great than ourselves could restore us to sanity.' The culmination for our series will be held on Sept. 23rd with our annual Recovery Weekend and Worship Service," Rev. Baumann said.

For more information, contact Rev. Baumann at the church office by calling 617-773-3319.

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will host a set of comprehensive workshops designed for first time homebuyers.

The two-day workshop will be held Thursday, July 19 from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, July 21, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at QCAP, 1509 Hancock St., 4th floor, Quincy. Attendance at both sessions is required to receive a Certificate of Completion.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the home buying process. Real estate professionals will present information on topics from mortgages to home insurance. Participants may also use their Certificate of Completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnerships. Free individual counseling is also available.

Registration is underway and ends July 17th. For more information about the program and/or to register for the workshop, contact Peter Mullen, QCAP's homeownership counselor at 617-657-5315 or pmullen@qcap.org. To register, visit qcap.org.

Future 2-day workshops will be held on the dates below, and are also available via qcap.org.

- Aug, 23 & 25
- Sept. 6 & 8
- Sept. 20 & 22

Founded in 1965, QCAP is the leading non-profit organization dedicated to reducing poverty by providing educational and economic opportunities to residents. QCAP also provides Head Start and Early Head Start, access to quality and affordable early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance and weatherization, homebuyer education, mortgage foreclosure counseling, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, and housing services.

Restore Christian Church Relocates To 180 Old Colony Ave.

Restore Christian Church will no longer be meeting at 20 Greenleaf St. in Quincy Center.

As of Sunday, July 1, their new location is at 180 Old Colony Ave., Quincy.

According to Jeff Oakes, lead minister at Restore, the church is very excited for the move as they believe it will give them a chance to grow, do more for the community, and really establish themselves in the community. Restore exists to Restore Hope and Change Lives and their desire is to see both spiritual and physical hunger eliminated in Quincy and the South Shore.

The public is invited to come check out their new space at 180 Old Colony Ave. The worship gathering begins at 10:30 a.m., but everyone is invited to come early for donuts and coffee.

OBITUARIES

Effie Kalantzis, 72

EFFIE KALANTZIS

A funeral service for Effie (Efthimia Passalis) Kalantzis, 72, of Quincy, was held June 29 in St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church, Braintree.

Mrs. Kalantzis died suddenly June 25.

Born in Mytilini, Greece, she was the daughter of the late Elias and Elpis (Arampatzis) Passalis, also of Quincy.

Mrs. Kalantzis immigrated to the United States with her sister and parents as a teenager. She graduated from North Quincy High School, received her Bachelor's Degree from Eastern Nazarene College and then began working as a Spanish and French teacher. Following her passion for education, she earned her Master's Degree in library and information science from Simmons College. She retired as vice president of information systems at Eaton Vance Management, where she enjoyed her time working in the heart of Boston.

In addition to her full-time job, Mrs. Kalantzis taught Greek school for decades, first at St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church of Quincy and then at the Annunciation Greek Orthodox Cathedral of New England.

She was the beloved wife of Constantine Kalantzis. The two celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary last August. Devoted mother of Laura Menadue and her husband Derek of Braintree, Christina Kalantzis of Manhattan, NY, and Maria Weber and her husband Mark of Franklin. Cherished Yiayia of Constantine "Costa", Katrina, Arianna, Nicholas "Niko", Alexander "Alex", Charles "Charlie". Sister of Lily Disciullo of Tampa, FL. Aunt of Paul and Vincent Disciullo also of Tampa. She also leaves behind her extended family in the Boston area and in Greece.

Mrs. Kalantzis was an active and devoted member of St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church in Braintree and was a member of the Philoptochos Society. She was a member of the American Librarian's Association and enjoyed reading and listening to audiobooks. Mrs. Kalantzis was fluent in four languages; Greek, English, French, and Spanish. She enjoyed flowers, gardening, shopping and visiting the beach. She took great pride in her home, and truly loved her Quincy neighborhood. The biggest joys in Mrs. Kalantzis' life came from spending time with her family, especially her grandchildren.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Catherine Greek Orthodox Church, 119 Common St., Braintree, MA 02184.

Carol A. Carrera, 83

CAROL A. CARRERA

A celebration of life service for Carol Ann (Crooker) Carrera, 83, of Quincy, will be held Sunday, July 8, at 4 p.m. in Christ Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Carrera died unexpectedly June 21.

She was the beloved wife of the late Gildo Carrera.

Born in Quincy Dec. 25, 1934, she was a daughter of the late William E. and Stella Crooker.

Much loved mother of her seven children: David Shepherd, US Army (Ret.), wife Barbara of Pollock Pines, CA, Mark Shepherd, Quincy Firefighter (Ret.) wife Celeste, of Kingston, Charles Shepherd, wife Tracey, of Kingston, Susan Williams of Kingman, AZ, Bonnie Messina, husband John, of Medfield, Linda Shepherd Webb, husband David, of Attleboro, and Heather Gregory, husband Glenn, of Marshfield. Proud "Grammie" to her 18 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

Cherished "Aunt Carol" to many nieces, nephews, and cousins. Loving sister of the late Nancy Fortnam, William E. Crooker II, of Quincy and Deborah Russell of Danielson, CT.

Mrs. Carrera was a lifelong active member of Christ Church Quincy all her life and was proud of her family's 5 generations of attendance. She sang in the choir since the 3rd grade, was a member of the Women's Guild and also met weekly for other church gatherings until her sudden passing. Her faith was strong and her presence at Christ Church was monumental; not only to the church community, but to all of her friends and family.

Mrs. Carrera was a graduate of Quincy High School class of 1952, and a longtime election warden for the City of Quincy Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel-Lydon Chapel & Cremation Service of Massachusetts, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Christ Church Quincy, Carol Carrera memorial fund, 12 Quincy Ave, Quincy, MA 02169.

Louise A. Ceriani, 87

LOUISE A. CERIANI

A funeral Mass for Louise A. (Ceriani) Schwemin, age 87, of Hanover, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Monday at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Ceriani died unexpectedly June 13 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

She was born in Quincy to the late Joseph and Pierina (Puricelli) Ceriani. She was raised in Quincy and was a graduate of Quincy High School. She had lived in Hanover for twelve years and previously in Quincy.

Mrs. Ceriani was an amazing homemaker. She was a master seamstress making custom men's suits and woman's apparel as well. As a sales associate for Lady Grace, a woman's fashions store at the South Shore Plaza, she enjoyed helping her customers find exactly what they wanted and to ensure their satisfaction.

Mrs. Ceriani enjoyed arts and crafts and was also a talented cook and baker. She was well known for crafting Faberge custom design wedding and holiday eggs.

Mrs. Ceriani was a "regular" at her favorite breakfast establishment, Joe's Coffee Shop, located in Hanover. She made many friends there and had a unique way to make the people she met there, feel special.

Most of all, Mrs. Ceriani was dedicated to her family and especially to her grandchildren and great grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved wife of the late Paul D. Schwemin. Devoted mother of Daniel P. Schwemin of East Bridgewater, Roy P. Schwemin and his wife Cynthia of Hanover. Loving grandmother of Dan Jr. and his fiancée Hanh, Brandi, Katie and her husband Bobby, Melissa, Laura and Cathi. Cherished great-grandmother of Michaela and Haley.

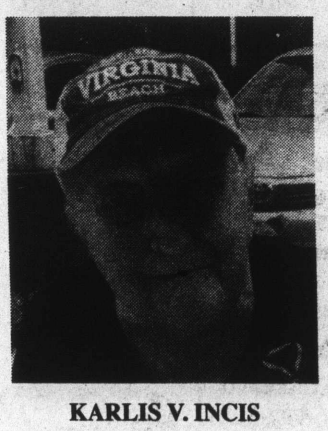

The last of four siblings, she was the dear sister and predeceased by Louise Ceriani, Rose Miano, and Primo Ceriani. She is also survived by nieces, nephews and many beloved family members in Italy.

Interment at Saint Mary's Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 309 Waverley Oaks Rd., Waltham, MA 02452 or to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Karlis V. Incis, 93

KARLIS V. INCIS

A private celebration of the life of Karlis V. "Karl" Incis, 93, of Quincy is being planned for a future date.

Mr. Incis died June 23.

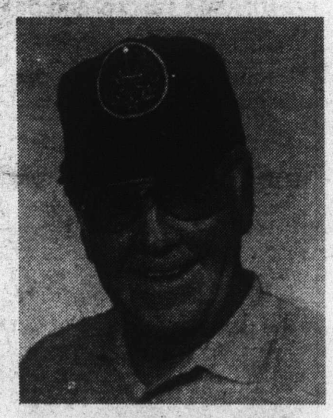

Son of the late Karlis and Aleda Incis. Beloved husband of the late Maria (Holl) Incis. Stepfather of the late Carl H. Holl. Uncle of Talivaldis Friebergs and his wife Helena, and Laimdota Berkis-Bergs, all of Latvia. Great-uncle of Artur and Eric Friebergs, and Anna Valmere and her husband Harold of Latvia. Close friend and neighbor for many years of Kathy Murphy, Judy Macauley, and Ginger Bellerose, who for many years helped care for Mr. Incis.

It was not uncommon to see Mr. Incis sitting in his front yard with a big smile and a joyous hello for his neighbors and friends. His lively, generous spirit left a mark on the hearts of all those who knew him.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Disabled American Veterans, State House, Room 546, Boston, MA 02133.

Joseph R. O'Connor, 88

JOSEPH R. O'CONNOR

A funeral Mass for Joseph R. O'Connor, age 88, of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester, was celebrated Monday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. O'Connor died at home on June 28 surrounded by his loving family.

Born in Boston, he was raised in S. Boston and Dorchester and attended Dorchester High School. He went on to serve in the Army during WWII and worked as a self-employed contractor for many years before retiring. He also was the manager of Eddie's Tavern in Dorchester for many years and worked as a starter at Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton after retirement.

Mr. O'Connor was an avid golfer and a member and past president of American Legion Post 114 in Milton. He was also a member of the Quincy Elks and the past commissioner of the American Legion Baseball League.

Beloved husband of the late Jeanne E. (Susan). Father of Joseph D. O'Connor and his fiancé Lutie M. Lucas of Quincy, Michael W. O'Connor and his wife Margaret of Holbrook, Sean J. O'Connor of Quincy and the late Patrick J. Brother of the late Irene Wiley and Francis O'Connor. Also survived by 4 grandchildren and 1 great-grandson.

Interment at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Arleen Flanigan, 94

A memorial service for Arleen Flanigan, 94, of Plymouth will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday in Community Baptist Church, Weymouth.

Mrs. Flanigan died June 28.

One of seven siblings, she was born and raised in Quincy. She is survived by her brother Bruce Nogueira of Canton. She lived in the Plymouth area and worked in accounts payable/receivable until she was 91 years old.

Daughter of Hermogenes and Eleanor (Wright) Nogueira, she loved and was cherished by, Thomas, her husband of 73 years, her children and spouses, Jane and Ed Brennan, Gale and Jim Martell, Gary and Laurie Flanigan, 8 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren, and many nieces and nephews.

Special thanks to the staff at NE Sinai Hospital for their attentive, compassionate care.

Funeral arrangements were made by Shepherd Funeral Home, Kingston.

Norman Greenfield, 74

Graveside services for Norman Greenfield, 74, of Braintree, formerly a longtime Quincy resident, were held at 1 p.m. Tuesday in Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Mr. Greenfield died June 28. He was surrounded at his home by his loving family and his beloved dogs Lilly and Delilah.

Always a goofball, Mr. Greenfield enjoyed sharing inappropriate jokes with anyone that would listen. He was always the funniest one in the room, just ask him, he would be sure to tell you. He was always ready for a road trip and there wasn't a roller coaster in the world he wouldn't ride. He adored spending time with his family, particularly traveling and enjoying all the food he could along the way. A professional in the all-you-can-eat buffet circuit, he was always up for seconds... and thirds. In his free time, he also enjoyed fishing and bowling, but aggravating Judi (usually about her singing) was his favorite pastime.

He is survived by his loving wife of 53 years, Judith (Koss) Greenfield, of Braintree, and his two daughters, Beth Lanigan and her husband Geoffrey, of Braintree and Rachel Greenfield of Jacksonville, Florida. He is also survived by his five grandchildren, Amanda, Marissa, Victoria, Alexis and Patrick, as well as his brother Alan Greenfield of Attleboro and many extended family members.

Mr. Greenfield loved animals and they loved him. Memorial donations may be made to Sweet Paws Rescue, sweetpawsrescue.org/donate/ or the animal rescue of your choice.

His family would like to extend their thanks to his dedicated team at Kindred Hospice Services, for supporting his desire to end his life the way he lived, at home watching TV. A special thanks to Sonia, Ednive, Cathy, Dr. Rippberger, Mary and Rabbi Alan for their never ending kindness.

Funeral arrangements by Schlossberg & Solomon Memorial Chapel, Canton.

Holocaust Remembrance Service Aug. 19

The public is welcome to attend a Holocaust Remembrance Service Sunday, Aug. 19 at 6 p.m. at Fort Square Presbyterian Church, 16 Pleasant St., Quincy.

The service will include a media presentation portraying Jewish Life in Europe both before and during the Holocaust, as well as the guest speaker, Angelika Cisewski.

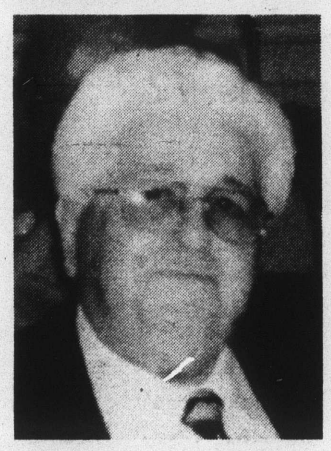

Cisewski was born on Sept. 17, 1927 in Tangerehute, Germany near Berlin. She will share her story of life in Germany under the Nazi regime, her eye witness account of the tremendous persecution and trouble during that time, the Russian invasion, and her family's eventual escape from Germany.

He was born in Athens, Greece, on Nov. 4, 1931, and came to the U.S. in 1965. He worked for 12 years. as a supervisor at Jordan Marsh Company. Later he owned his own business, Art Tailoring and Cleaning in Quincy. He was a devoted Greek Orthodox Christian whose beliefs showed in his actions. He devoted many volunteer hours to his beloved church, St. Catherine Greek Orthodox Church in Braintree, serving as Parish Council member and helping the secretary.

EVANGELOS V. PETRAS

Mr. Petras was the son of Vasilios and Marianthe (Yiannoulis) Petras. He leaves behind "the love of his life" of 48 years Pauline (Droutsas) Petras. His brother Demitrios and his wife Helen of Medford, the late Eleftherios and his wife Angelike of Athens, his sister Nektaria and her late husband Mathew Macrionites of Athens, his sister Victoria and her late husband Dr. Pano Yiamarellos of Athens, Nickolaos and his wife Mary of West Yarmouth. He also left 9 nephews and nieces and many great nieces and nephews and 15 Godchildren.

Visiting hours were 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday at the church.

Interment at Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan Funeral Services.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Catherine's Building Fund, 119 Common St., Braintree, MA 02184.

Barry G. Miller, 51

Visiting hours for Barry G. Miller, age 51, were held Tuesday from 2 to 5 p.m. in Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Mr. Miller died suddenly June 30.

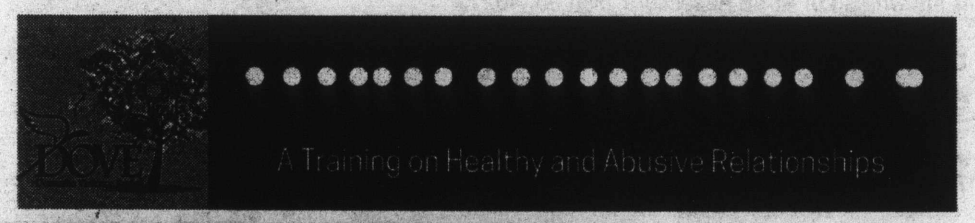

He was born and raised in Quincy and had lived in Weymouth for 16 years. Mr. Miller was a truck loader for Pepsicola Company in Allston. He belonged to the loyal order of Moose, Lodge 413 in Quincy.

Beloved son of Charles and Dorothy (Nee) Miller of Weymouth. Beloved brother of Keith C. Miller of Weymouth, and Christopher C. Miller of Quincy Loving uncle of Nicholas Stillman, Nicole and Jaymi Spano. Loving brother-in-law of Shirley Spano of Weymouth. Nephew of Roberta Nee of Quincy and Walter Coe of South Boston. He leaves many cousins.

YI LIN

Yi Lin Participating In Bank Of America's Student Leader Program

NQHS Senior Interning At Father Bill's & Mainspring

Bank of America announces that five high school juniors and seniors from the Boston community have been selected as Student Leaders (#BofAStudentLeaders).

Among the students is Yi Lin, a Quincy resident and rising senior at North Quincy High School, Lin is interning at Father Bill's & MainSpring.

Bank of America's philanthropic program offers young people who are passionate about improving the community an opportunity to build their workforce and leadership skills through a paid summer nonprofit internship and participation in a national leadership summit in Washington, D.C.

Today, approximately 8.8 percent of young people ages 16 to 24 are unemployed, and the rate is often in the double digits for African-American and Hispanic youth from underserved communities. Paid youth employment programs that connect young adults to education, training and the job market can help them build workforce skills while also enabling at-risk youth to avoid juvenile delinquency.

Through Student Leaders, Bank of America helps young people gain work experience, broaden their perspective on how nonprofits achieve their mission, and advance their civic engagement. Bank of America Student Leaders also develop better money habits by working with bank volunteers to increase their financial literacy skills, from building a budget to creating a savings plan. At the leadership summit in Washington, D.C. (July 8-13), Student Leaders from Boston will join over 220 Student Leaders from across the country to build advocacy and inclusive leadership skills and develop a peer network that can advance their future career success and contribute to economic progress in Boston. In addition to discussing civil rights and the value of cross-sector partnerships, they will meet with members of Congress on Capitol Hill and participate in a service learning project at the American Red Cross.

"We recognize that connecting young people to meaningful early employment can help them chart a path for career success and advance the long-term success of our community," said Miceal Chamberlain, Massachusetts president, Bank of America. "The Student Leaders program offers youth in Boston a unique opportunity to build their resume while also learning more about how to shape positive community change that will result in a more sustainable community for us all."

Quincy Homestead Open For Tours July 7

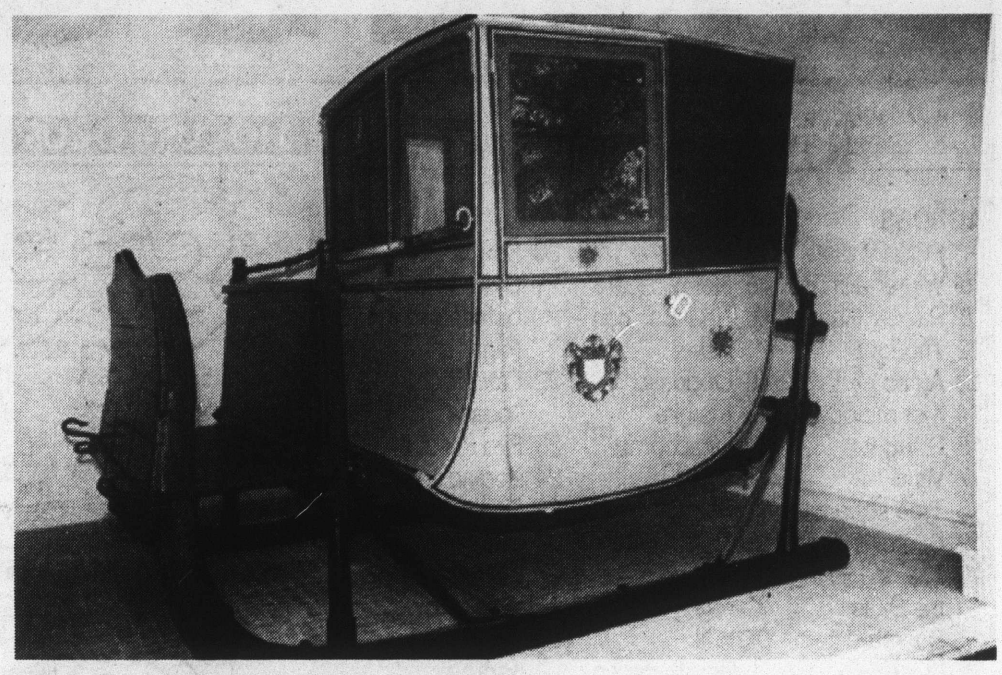

11 A.M. To 3 P.M. - John Hancock's Restored Chariot On Display

The Quincy Homestead, originally built in 1686 and later modified to become the beautiful Georgian mansion it is today, was home to generations of the Quincy Family.

The Homestead, located at 34 Butler Rd., Quincy, will be open to the public at no charge on Saturday, July 7th between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Free tours through both house and history will begin on the half hour, with the last tour starting at 2:30 p.m. Come, walk where they walked, see what they saw, and hear how the historic Quincy Family influenced our nation.

Visitors will experience the patriotic spirit of Independence Day and visit John Hancock's chariot which has a history of its own. Captured by privateers in 1777 on its way from England to the Caribbean, this splendid vehicle was given by the ship's captain to John Hancock in honor of his contributions to the cause of Freedom. Donated in 1920 to the National Society of Colonial Dames in The Commonwealth of Massachusetts (NSCDA-MA) by a Hancock descendant, the Chariot was beautifully restored in 2014 thanks to funding approved by the City of Quincy's Community Preservation Committee.

JOHN HANCOCK'S restored chariot will be on display Saturday, July 7 at the Quincy Homestead, 34 Butler Rd., Quincy. The historic homestead will be open for public tours between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Photo Courtesy National Society of Colonial Dames

The Quincy Homestead is listed as a National Historic Landmark and is on the National Register of Historic Places. It is owned by the MA Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) and is operated in public/private partnership with the NSCDA-MA. The Homestead is run by volunteers as a not-for-profit, 501(c)(3) organization. Its grounds are open to the public daily from dawn to dusk and are situated at 34 Butler Rd., on the corner of Butler Road and Hancock Street, just south of the Furnace Brook Parkway.

For more information on private tours, the season's calendar of public historic tour dates and/or how to donate, go to www.nscdama.org or friend us on Facebook at Quincy Homestead 1686.

Quincy Point Congregational Church

All are welcome to come celebrate the Lord's day on Sunday, July 8th at 10 a.m. in the air-conditioned sanctuary at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Quincy Point's new full-time pastor, Rev. Kimberly Murphy is here and will be preaching God's word.

The building is accessible to all via the Abbey Road side of the building with designated parking and an elevator. After worship fellowship hour takes place in the social hall, all are invited to join for some light refreshments and sparkling conversation. While you are there sign the birthday, and "thinking of you" cards.

Summer "One Room" Sunday school is available during worship during the summer months.

Bring children to the classroom adjacent to the kitchen (on the basement level) before worship.

The summer curriculum is by Deep Blue Kids.

See www.deepbluekids.com for more information.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your persistence pays off as the information you demanded starts to come through. The pace is slow at first, but it begins to speed up as the week draws to a close.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unwelcome bit of news jolts the Bovine, who would prefer that things proceed smoothly. But it's at most a momentary setback. A Leo brings more welcome tidings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to pay close attention to the details before making a commitment. Don't accept anything that seems questionable, unless you get an answer that can be backed up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations on getting that project up and running. But as exciting as it is, don't let it carry you away. Make sure you set aside time to spend with family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be sure you are part of the discussion involving your suggestions. Your presence ensures that you can defend your work, if necessary. It also helps gain your colleagues' support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding needs to be dealt with, or it can grow and cause more problems later on. Be the bigger person and take the first step to clear the air.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Set some strict guidelines for yourself so your heavier-than-usual work schedule doesn't overwhelm the time you need to spend relaxing with loved ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel a little uncomfortable being among people you hardly know. But remember that today's strangers can become tomorrow's valuable contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Reward yourself for all that you've accomplished despite some annoying situations that got in your way. Enjoy a well-earned getaway with someone special.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Realizing that someone else is taking credit for what you did is bound to get anyone's goat, but especially yours. Be patient. The truth soon comes out.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Forget about opposites attracting. What you need is to find someone who thinks like you and will support your ideas, even if others say they're too radical.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace problems can affect your financial plans. Be prudent and avoid running up bills or making commitments until things begin to ease up by the 27th.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your intuition helps you communicate easily with people and understand their needs.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Talks are on between "Roseanne" producers (who include actress Sara Gilbert) and ABC to breathe new life into the recently canceled "Roseanne." The main catch is that ABC says it would only proceed with a spin-off if Roseanne Barr has absolutely no involvement creatively, financially or otherwise. Barr has always had a creative credit and ownership of the original series. Now lawyers have to figure out if she has creative or financial entitlement of spin-offs because the show is based on the titled character she created. In anticipation of working this out, ABC is holding the timeslot open for the spin-off, which probably will be called "The Connors."

At the end of "Wonder Woman," we were led to believe that Steve Trevor, played by Chris Pine, had died. However, now that "Wonder Women 1984" is in production with Gal Gadot, Kristen Wiig and possibly, as rumored, TV "Wonder Woman" Linda Carter, Chris Pine is returning, and you can be sure not in flashbacks or as a ghost. It's set for a November 2019 release.

Tim Burton -- who gave us such classics as "Beetlejuice" (1988), "Edward Scissorhands" (1990), three "Batman" films, "Planet of the Apes" (2001), "Charlie & the Chocolate Factory" (2005) and the epic "Alice in Wonderland" (2010) -- is unveiling his live-action epic remake of "Dumbo," with Danny DeVito, Colin Farrell, Michael Keaton, Eva Green and Alan Arkin, in March. One of the major changes made to the classic animated film was shifting the crowning moment, when Dumbo makes his first flight, from the end of the film to the beginning. Sure sounds like fun.

Barbra Streisand was nominated for an Emmy for her recent Netflix special "Barbra: The Music ... The Mem'ries ... The Magic!," which she now says could well be her last live concert ... EVER! She has been working on her memoirs for more than three years and is five songs into completing her next album. She has not given up on starring in a remake of "Gypsy," which she feels would be the perfect way to bookend her movie career, having starred in "Funny Girl," which was written by Jule Styne, who also composed the music for "Gypsy." So what would the 76-year-old superstar do besides being Mrs. James Brolin, a star in his own right as one of the leads of the hit CBS series "Life in Pieces"? "Well," she says, "I just want to direct," and as the only female director to win a Golden Globe as best director, why not?

Finally, Ben Affleck's next film is called "The Has Been," which he almost became after the colossal flop "Gigli," with Jennifer Lopez, which cost $75 million and made only $7 million!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Weather Vane --- Tennis started in the 12th century and was played without a racquet. The ball was hit with the hand. It was not until the 16th century that the game was called "tennis" and players used a racquet. By the 1960s, important tennis matches were open to both amateurs and professionals, and winning players got a large sum of money as a prize. But there are many collectibles from early tennis events as well as equipment from the past 100 years.

Since about 1870, some steins, vases, plates and even figurines pictured players and other tennis scenes. Old balls and racquets, even appropriate tennis clothing, are wanted. One of the most unusual tennis items sold recently is a pre-1950s tennis-racquet weather vane. It was made of copper and included copper-wire racquet strings. The racquet was attached to a mounting rod with a tennis-ball top. The weather vane sold at a James Julia auction for $1,815. It probably will be installed near a tennis court.

Q: I have a tiny bisque doll, which is about four inches tall. It has molded hair, painted brown eyes and rope joints. Marked on the back is "Sarah S. Putnam, Germany." I'd like to know who this is and the age of the doll. It is in perfect condition.

A: Your doll was designed by Grace (not Sarah) S. Putnam. Born in California, Grace Storey Putnam (1877-1947) was divorced and trying to earn some money when she started designing dolls' heads. In 1922, she copyrighted a wax doll's head designed to look like the head of a 3-day-old infant. Within a couple of years, the doll, called "Bye-Lo Baby," went into production, distributed by George Borgfeldt & Co., a New York importer.

The first dolls' heads were bisque and made in Germany. Bodies were cloth, made by the K & K Toy Co., a subsidiary of Borgfeldt, which also assembled them. They came in several sizes. Later, heads were composition, wood, vinyl, wax or celluloid, made in Germany or the U.S. Other dolls were all bisque, all composition or a combination. They were sold until 1952. Your doll's value depends on size, condition, age, and head and body type. Your doll was made sometime after 1925 and is worth about $200.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was pop art icon Andy Warhol who made the following sage observation: "It's the movies that have really been running things in America since they were invented. They show you what to do, how to do it, when to do it, how to feel about it, and how to look when you feel about it."

* Those who study such things say that by the year 2020, more data will be created in a single hour than had been created in the entire world over the 30,000 years leading up to the 21st century.

* A woman in Tennessee was once arrested for biking while intoxicated -- she was on a stationary bike at the gym at the time.

* When the Coca-Cola Company first started marketing its product in China, the advertisements used Chinese symbols to spell out the brand's name phonetically. It was only after the ads had been published that the marketers learned that those symbols spelled out the phrase "bite the wax tadpole."

* Earthquakes occur at a rate of about one every minute around the world. About eight of those each year are considered to be major, registering above 7.0 on the Richter Scale.

* Velcro came to market in 1957, after a Swiss inventor named George De Mestral spent nearly 10 years developing the idea. His inspiration came to him in 1948 on a hike, when he had difficulty removing tenacious little burrs from his clothes. He reasoned that if he could create synthetic burrs, they could be used as fasteners.

* When Great Britain's current Queen Elizabeth -- then Princess Elizabeth -- wed Prince Philip, their wedding cake weighed a whopping 500 pounds.

by Jo Ann Derson

* Road-trip organization: Put items you'll need along the way into a laundry basket or two, which can be easily accessed during your trip. There's no need to undo the Tetris-like organization job of the other items, because everything you need to have at hand is in the basket.

* "I love to work in the yard, and I always wash my hands before coming in. I put a bar of soap inside a piece of mesh from a potato sack and tie it with a string; then I tie the string to my water faucet outside. Now I can easily wash my hands with soap before coming in. The sack kind of works as a scrubber as well." -- F.A. in Texas

* "If you want a lighter foundation for summer and sun protection, try mixing a little foundation with a sunblock. It might take a bit of experimenting to find the right ratio for the coverage you want, but I find that the sunblock helps the foundation to glide on, and my face feels moisturized as well." -- T.L. in Georgia

* "I moved to a much smaller house and have very little storage, so now everything I keep must be necessary. I had several banker's boxes of old papers that I had been storing for years. I still think there's a chance I'd need to access the information in them, but I didn't want to devote a lot storage space to boxes of documents. I bought a small scanner that you feed paper into, and I have used it to scan in all my papers. I'm down to a small box of keepsakes and originals that are important, and the rest is there digitally in case I ever need it." -- A.D.F in Florida

PARKING LOT at Tobin Towers in Wollaston was recently expanded. The $700,000 project raised the parking to enhance drainage and included the addition of 15 new parking spaces.

JEAN KENNEDY Playground on Doane Street will be renovated in August. All-new playground equipment will be installed along with a half basketball court. The Quincy Housing Authority received $900,000 grant from the state to pay for the Jean Kennedy Playground and Taffrail Road basketball court work. Pictured is QHA head James Marathas with plans for the Jean Kennedy Playground.

ketball court will also be installed on Taffrail Road, where a basketball court is now located.

In addition, $100,000 will be spent to redo the Palmer Street rotary, including a new illumination system for the monument there.

Marathas was no stranger to Quincy when he was hired three years ago. Before becoming the Quincy Housing Authority's director of facilities in 2015, Marathas was the director of facilities management for DHCD and helped QHA fix widespread maintenance issues identified during inspections in the spring of 2014.

Marathas called the changes he has witnessed at the Quincy Housing Authority and its properties since that time "unbelievable."

"You go by the old theory, 'would you want your mother and your father to live there?' My answer today would be 'absolutely.' There is no question about it. It's a place that they could be proud of living in," Marathas said.

"It's a massive asset for the city of Quincy. It's a place where residents can feel…dignity and have a place where they can go retire and still be in Quincy and be on Hancock Street or be down at Pagnano down by the water or you could be at O'Brien right on the water."

Marathas said the agency has also eliminated the bed bug problem that persisted at O'Brien Towers in recent years.

"The bed beg issue that we've had is dead. That is gone. We've managed that to the point of practically zero," he said.

"It's always going to be a routine maintenance issue because it's in society. It's like saying you have no mosquitoes – it's impossible – of course you have mosquitoes because they're everywhere, just like bed bugs are everywhere, but it's managed now. We don't have any infestation problems. We don't have any of that stuff."

The usage of community spaces in Quincy Housing Authority properties is also up, Marathas said.

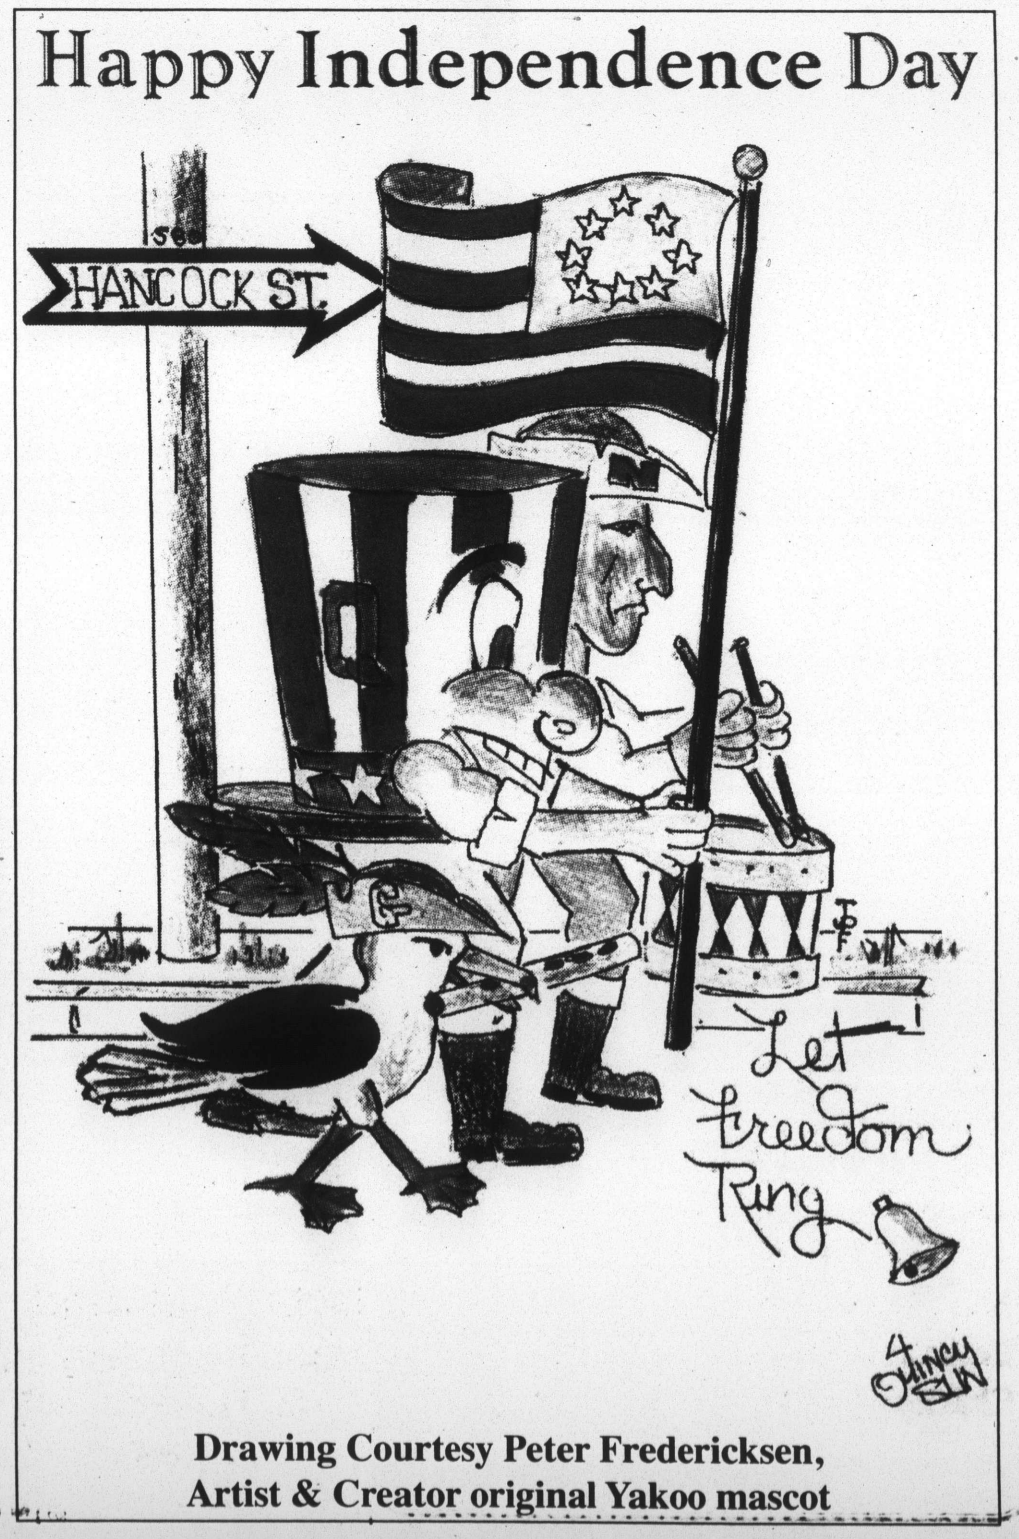

"You know what's incredible to me to see?" he said. "The use of community rooms…people are coming out and using the community rooms. It's vibrant. The community space is vibrant.

"We're working with different organizations. We have the food bank – we get free meals delivered to every one of our high-rise buildings once a month, so our residents all line up, the 18-wheeler comes in and they get free bags of groceries.

"That day is incredible." Marathas continued. "They're lined up in the lobby. The employees are down there and they're giving out food for the month. Forming those relationships and bringing in the services to them is kind of going above and beyond just providing them with housing. Now it's trying to bridge the gap and providing them with services too."

TREES – 630 of them – have been planted throughout Snug Harbor to help beautify the area. The Quincy Housing Authority has also installed new wood-carved signage at its properties, such as the one seen at left. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Friends, Colleagues In Tribute To 27th Mayor

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and SCOTT JACKSON

Walter J. Hannon, Sr., the city's 27th mayor, is being remembered by government colleagues and longtime friends as a dedicated public servant, foresighted leader and true visionary who helped lay the groundwork for modern day Quincy.

Mr. Hannon died July 7 in Maine surrounded by family. He was 86 years old.

The former mayor, state representative and ward 5 councillor is widely credited with creating a blue-

New Fire Chief Seen In August

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's next fire chief could be appointed as soon as the middle of August, Mayor Thomas Koch said in a recent interview.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron will be retiring Sunday, ending a 40-year career with the department. The 63-year-old Barron was named acting chief in July 2008 and chief in November 2009.

Koch, in the recent interview, said the city has hired an assessment center to evaluate the candidates for the chief's position. The assessment center was hired at the recommendation of the state's Civil Service Commission, in lieu of a written exam.

"It would be a year away before they took the exam because you've got to give them so many months of study time, etc.," Koch said "I don't want to wait another year, so [Civil Service] sanctioned what's called an assessment center."

The assessment center will interview the candidates for the chief's position, and

Quincy College Could Have Interim Leader This Fall

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch, who has served as the principal executive at Quincy College for the past two months, expects the school to have a new interim president this fall.

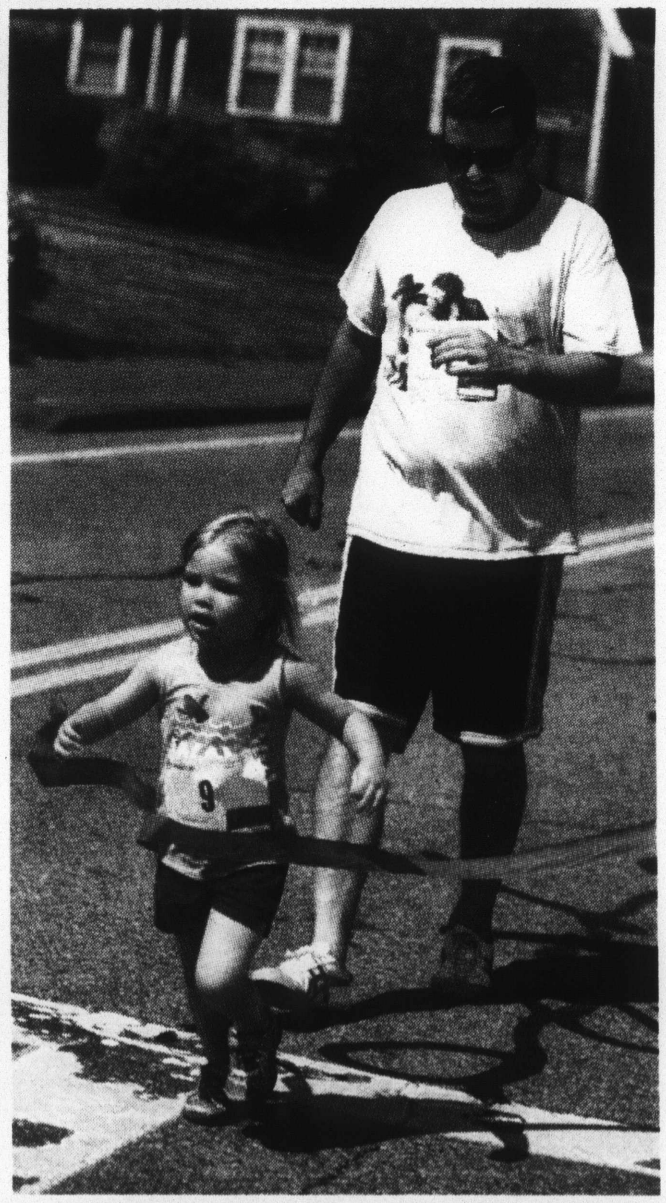

The college's Board of Governors designated Koch principal executive of the school on May 15, following the resignation of Peter Tsaffaras. Tsaffaras had served as the school's president since 2011.

Koch, during a recent interview, was asked when a new president could be hired. The mayor said an interim president could be named as soon as September, though the college's governors will make that call.

"The Board of Governors is the group that will appoint the interim and ultimately the permanent president," Koch said. "I would hope by sometime in September they will have an interim president named and I can kind of slide back out. I will always be helpful to the college – I think it's an important part of who we are as a city – but I've got a lot on my plate."

Quincy College has a number of challenges to get through before hiring a permanent president, Koch said.

Jacob Gordon Cleans Crusher For Eagle Scout Project

Boy Scout Leads Effort To Remove 1,500 Pounds Of Trash From Former Quarry

JACOB GORDON

THE CRUSHER in Houghs Neck was formerly used as a trap-stone quarry. Jacob Gordon, a member of Boy Scout Troop 6, oversaw a cleanup of the area for his Eagle Scout project. The project also included the installation of trail signs and an informational board at the main entrance to the area. Photo Courtesy Michael T. Cheney

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy boy scout led an effort to remove some 1,500 pounds of trash from the Crusher in Houghs Neck, installed new trail signs there and started a website with information on the former quarry.

Jacob Gordon, a member of Boy Scout Troop 6, oversaw the project this spring. He and a team of some 30 volunteers began the cleanup at the Crusher on April 28. The project was completed on May 26 and capped off with the installation of a sign at the Pawsey Street entrance to the former quarry that includes information on the site.

Gordon, age 15, said he was inspired to clean up the Crusher because of the time he spent there when he was younger.

"I went down there quite a bit as a kid on my bike and I always thought it was a really cool area and I didn't know a lot about it," he said. "So I started out researching the area to find out some history on it, and I decided to incorporate that into my Eagle Scout project."

To research the history of the site, Gordon said he searched through documents at the Thomas Crane Public Library and reached out to local historians Tom Galvin and Patti Williams.

"They helped me out a lot," Gordon said.

Through his research, Gordon learned trap stone, which is used for street construction, was quarried from the site a century ago.

"It was a trap stone quarry. That's stone that is used in street construction," Gordon said. "It was in use in the early 1900s – around 1910. It was operated for about seven years and it was discontinued because they could only get stone out of there on high tides."

Information Gordon learned through his research effort was included on the new entrance sign to the Crusher, and is also available online at a website he created, which can be found by going to troop6quincy.com/crusher.

With the project completed, Gordon will have his project vetted by a review board to determine if he should be awarded the Eagle Scout, which is the Boy Scouts' highest honor.

Gordon is aiming to become a third generation Eagle Scout. His father, Robert Gordon, earned the Eagle Scout award for cut-

FoxRock LDA Due Before Council In September

Development Of Ross Lot Seen In Phases

By SCOTT JACKSON

A land disposition agreement for the Ross Parking Lot could be sent to the City Council for review in September.

Mayor Thomas Koch said his legal team continues to negotiate the deal with the area's designated developer, North Quincy-based FoxRock Properties. The company, which is owned by Granite Telecommunications founder Rob Hale, has pledged to build up to 1 million square feet of commercial space on site.

The LDA must receive approval from the City Council before going forward.

"I do expect in September to be before the council with an LDA. The teams are working very hard this summer and we're pretty much there on the terms, so it's a matter of putting the language together," Koch replied when asked about the FoxRock talks during a recent interview.

The mayor said there is no particular issue that has stopped the two sides from reaching an agreement for the sale of the lot.

"When you're dealing with a developer who is dealing with private entities who don't want to talk in public about terms and leases it gets tricky, because when you're trying to nail the deal down you need to have enough meat in the deal. Yet, the private sector doesn't want to see their name in the paper, doesn't want to be negotiating in the public over the lease," Koch said.

"So there are complexities here that we're just trying to massage and finesse."

FoxRock plans to de-

TURNING DIAMONDS UPSIDE DOWN

As diamond-jewelry fashion trends explore more radical territory, it has become quite popular to set white diamonds so that the "cutlet" (the facet that is the lowest place on the diamond) faces outward. This irreverent positioning of "inverted" diamonds is particularly effective when several gemstones are mounted side by side with their "pavillion" (the lower portion of the diamond beneath the "girdle," the thin perimeter of the diamond) pointed outward. In short, an inverted diamond is one that is worn upside down. This decidedly uncommon positioning of diamonds is made all the more spectacular when the field of inverted diamonds surrounds a single diamond set in the normal position with the "crown" (the top portion of the diamond) facing outward.

Allow the experienced jewelers at Rogers Jewelry to show you the different ways of setting diamonds and other beautiful gemstones. Serving Quincy since 1944, our goals are the same as yours - beautiful jewelry of quality craftsmanship, the finest stones, and creative design. That's all you'll find here at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. And paired with our staff of trained, knowledgeable personnel who can be counted on to offer service with a smile, you'll be so glad you came for a visit. "VISION IS A great word," former Mayor Walter Hannon said at a ceremony dedicating the new Quincy Center cross-town connector roadway in his name Oct. 2, 2012. "But you need commitment. We dedicate this road because we're serious about a new downtown." Mr. Hannon, the city's 27th mayor, passed away July 7. He was 86.

Koch has directed that all flags in the City of Quincy be lowered to half-mast on Thursday and Friday, the days of Mayor Hannon's services, of this week. print for future development downtown and beyond. For his vision and commitment to public service as an elected official, the new Quincy Center cross-town connector was dedicated to Hannon in October, 2011. The name Walter J. Hannon Parkway was recommended by Mayor Thomas Koch, a longtime friend who once delivered campaign flyers for Mr. Hannon during his bids for mayor.

"Mayor Hannon was a true visionary, and his legacy remains all around us in countless ways," Mayor Thomas Koch said in tribute Tuesday. "He never stuck his finger in the air to see which way the political winds were blowing – he made decisions and he stood by them. He was a doer and a leader, and Quincy is a far better place today because of his leadership.

"People who worked with him during his time as mayor often mention to me that not only did they accomplish a lot, but that they had the most fun of their lives doing it. To me, that is the essence of Walter Hannon.

"I cherish the time I was able to spend with him, listening to his stories and soliciting his advice. I will always be deeply grateful for his mentorship and friendship over the years.

"On behalf of our entire community, I extend my sincerest condolences to Mayor Hannon's family and my gratitude for a lifetime of service to the City we all love so much."

Mayor Koch has directed that all flags in the City of Quincy be lowered to half-mast on Thursday and Friday, the days of Mayor Hannon's services, of this week.

A memorial wreath will also be placed on the marker for the Mayor Walter Hannon Jr. Parkway at the intersection of the parkway and Hancock Street.

The Honorable Walter J. Hannon Parkway has been a catalyst for the redevelopment of the downtown since it opened nearly seven years ago this fall. The $18 million four-lane roadway connects the Paul Harold Memorial Bridge and Burgin Parkway to Revere Road and McGrath Highway.

At the parkway's dedication, Mr. Hannon was given the honor of being the first motorist to travel on the new roadway in a 1951 Mercury One with one of his old mayoral campaign signs affixed to the car door.

"Vision is a great word," Mr. Hannon said as he offered some remarks at the dedication. "But you need commitment. We dedicate this road because we're serious about a new downtown."

He was joined at the ceremony by members of his family. The group gathered at a granite marker at the corner of Hannon Parkway and Hancock Street. The inscription reads: The Honorable Walter J. Hannon Parkway. Mayor of Quincy, Businessman, City Councillor, Member of the Great and General Court, Director of Planning. Dedicated October 2, 2011 to a man whose vision and service to the economic growth of his native City laid the foundation of prosperity for all of its citizens.

Mr. Hannon thanked his wife, Pat for helping raise their children and grandchildren. He told city officials they should have named it the Pat Hannon Parkway for her support. Mrs. Hannon passed away Dec. 6, 2017.

The former mayor concluded his comments with this advice for today's public officials:

"First, don't ever give in to the naysayers. Second, failure is not an option. And in the end, no one's going to thank you . . . but at the end of the day you're going to say 'I was on the team and I won the fight.'"

Walter Hannon was born Sept. 4, 1931 in Quincy. He grew up in Houghs Neck and was the first graduate of North Quincy High School elected mayor of Quincy. Prior to being elected mayor, he operated his family tire business in Wollaston for many years.

Mr. Hannon had served eight years as a ward 5 councillor and also served three terms as a state representative before winning the mayor's seat in 1971. He was re-elected in 1973 but lost a bid for a third term to Joseph LaRaia in 1975.

In his book, Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History 1889-2000, former mayor and political historian Francis McCauley wrote of Hannon's foresight for making Quincy an affordable city to live, work and raise a family, the city needed a strong business, commercial and industrial base.

"Walter Hannon was never one to shy away from espousing a cause in which he believed, no matter how unpopular that cause," wrote McCauley. "He led the fight to allow construction of the State Street South complexes in the Montclair section of Quincy. As mayor, he supported the construction of the South Quincy M.B.T.A. station was well as the combined pick-up of rubbish and garbage. His support of these two issues was largely responsible for his defeat for re-election for a third term in 1975," McCauley said.

McCauley and Hannon were boyhood friends who grew up in Houghs Neck playing baseball and serving as altar boys at Most Blessed Sacrament Church.

"He was my oldest friend," McCauley said after learning of Walter's passing. "Walter faced some big issues. They were all controversial and that cut short his career as a politician. One of them was the mixing of rubbish and garbage and one was the expansion of the South Quincy MBTA station.

Hancock St. A Mall For Sidewalk Bazaar

The seventh annual Sidewalk Bazaar kicked off on Thursday, July 15 with Hancock Street turned into a pedestrian mall for three days.

The event is sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. Some 30 booths, gaily striped and canopied, dot both sides of Hancock Street, displaying the wares and programs of downtown merchants, civic groups and fraternal organizations. Music will be provided by Baron Hugo and his pageant orchestra, and the Quincy High Alumni Band.

Highlight of the festivities will be the selection and crowning of Miss Quincy Bay Friday evening.

$25,000 REHABILITATION PROGRAM FOR SOUTHWEST AREA

A comprehensive community rehabilitation program will get underway shortly in the Water Street - Southwest Quincy area, it was announced by the Department of Planning and Community Development.

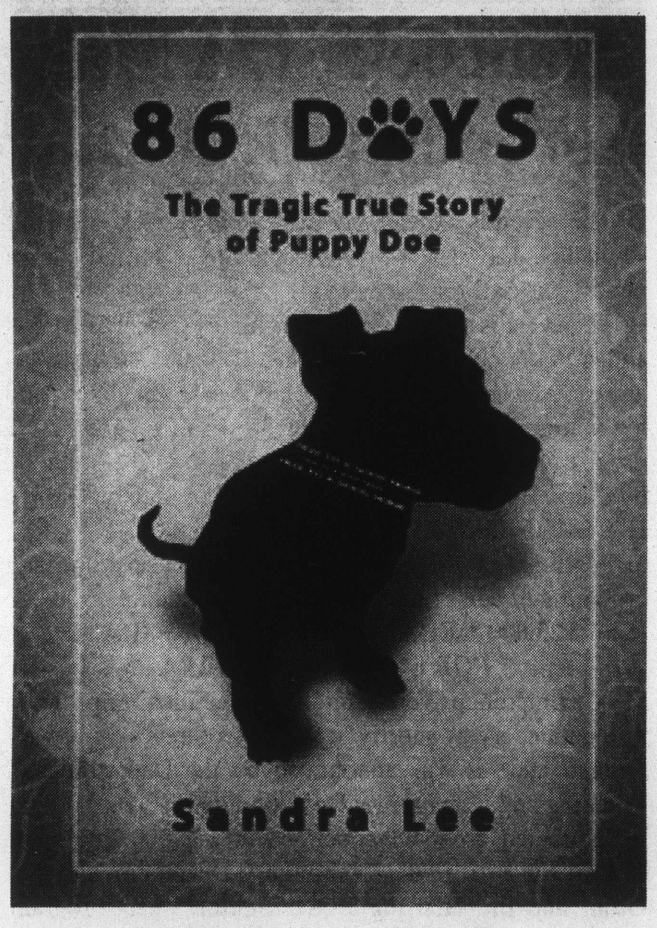

Estimated costs were pegged at $25,000, including federal funds from the Community Development Block Grant and the Housing Rehabilitation Loan Program. Planning Director Lars N. Lundin said the immediate objective of the program will be to correct those conditions, which exist in the neighborhood, which endanger the health and safety of the residents.

'Puppy Doe' Tale Told By Quincy Crime Writer

The 2013 discovery of a brutally and mortally-wounded puppy on Carrols Lane in Quincy sparked nation-wide outrage.

While police searched tirelessly for the individual(s) responsible for the heinous injuries inflicted upon the female pit bull terrier mix then known as Puppy Doe, lawmakers worked with citizens to update Massachusetts animal cruelty laws. At the time, the state's laws were dubbed by some as "ancient history".

In October of that same year, Polish national, Radoslaw Czerkawski, here on an expired visa, was arrested for the crimes to the dog and charged with larceny against then 95-year-old Quincy resident, the late Janina Stock of Whitwell Street. Czerkawski was serving as Stock's in-home caretaker when he stole over $150,000.00 of her assets. It was on the same day when police received a call about Stock's death that the motionless dog was found by a motorist on a small road behind Stock's home.

While Czerkawski was found guilty of larceny charges against Stock and later, pled guilty to larceny charges against a New Bedford church, the animal cruelty trial would not occur until four-and-a-half years later. Czerkawski's original defense attorney retired after the larceny trial for Stock, while another court-appointed attorney moved out of state shortly after being assigned to the case.

Attorney Larry Tipton eventually tried the animal cruelty case which occurred in March of this year and culminated in a guilty verdict. Czerkawski was sentenced to 8-to-10 years in prison to be followed by a two-year probation term for twelve counts of animal cruelty. Because this sentence would not run concurrently with his two larceny sentences, the earliest he will begin to serve time for the animal cruelty charges will be in the spring of 2019.

Sandra Lee, a Quincy-based crime writer, attended all of the court proceedings relating to this case and has documented gavel-to-gavel coverage in her new book "86 Days: The Tragic True Story of Puppy Doe." In addition to taking readers into the courtroom, Lee shares details about the case previously unknown to the public, and spells out the updates to state animal cruelty laws directly resulting from this case. She hopes the book will encourage citizens to continue to work with legislators to improve upon those laws and cause other states to follow suit.

Lee elected to self-publish her debut true crime work in order to donate sales proceeds to one or more animal welfare agencies. For her charitable and community work, Lee was nominated by state Rep. Bruce Ayers in 2016 to receive the unsung heroine award later presented to her by the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women.

Released on May 26 by "Booklocker", Lee's book can be purchased on their website or from any other bookseller.

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children.

Online Summer Reading Challenge

This summer from July 1st through Aug. 31st track your reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading program. Sign up, log books, and complete activities. Book Discussion – Last Kids on Earth
Thursday, July 12th
at 7 p.m.
Main Library
Children's Room
Ages 8-10 (entering grades 3-4)

Ever since the monster apocalypse hit town, average thirteen year old Jack Sullivan has been living in his tree house, which he's armed to the teeth with catapults and a moat, not to mention video games and an endless supply of Oreos and Mountain Dew scavenged from abandoned stores.

But Jack alone is no match for the hordes of Zombies and Winged Wretches and Vine Thingies, and especially not for the eerily intelligent monster known only as Blarg. So Jack builds a team: his dorky best friend, Quint; the reformed middle school bully, Dirk; Jack's loyal pet monster, Rover; and Jack's crush, June.

With their help, Jack is going to slay Blarg, achieve the ultimate Feat of Apocalyptic Success, and be average no longer! Can he do it?

Copies of the book, Last Kids on Earth by Max Brallier are available in the Children's Room to be read before the group meets.

Bubble Time
Friday, July 13th
at 10 - 11:30 a.m.
Main Library Lawn
All Ages

Join us on the lawn outside the children's room to blow some bubbles! We will have tubs of bubble solution and plenty of bubble makers to experiment with. Can you make giant bubbles? Little tiny bubbles? Can you make bubbles with your hands or do you need a bubble wand?

Find out if a square bubble wand makes square bubbles and grab some bubble solution recipes to try out at home. Parents this is sure to be loads of soapy, soaking fun so make sure your children are dressed to get messy.

This program must take place outdoors so in case of bad weather we will blow our bubbles on July 20th.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. BID-Milton Awards $7,780 In Health Grants

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) recently awarded four community health grants totaling $7,780 to Quincy organizations that help support programs that meet the hospital's community health priorities.

A $2,000 grant was awarded to EACH, Inc. (Enhance Asian Community on Health) for "Health Empowerment Leverage Program – Prediabetes and Type 2 Diabetes Prevention." The grant will help fund health education programs that will increase awareness of diabetes and provide "Prevent T-2-A Proven Program to Prevent or Delay Type 2 Diabetes" workshops for the Chinese community.

The City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development received a community health grant in the amount of $1,990. The grant will help send 250 Quincy Public School students to Holly Hill Organic Farm and conduct farm-connected teacher training and on-site school garden lessons at three schools.

To help prevent falls among seniors, BID-Milton provided a $1,790 grant to Asian American Service Association at Wollaston Senior Center. The grant will help fund the evidence-based, eight-week Matter of Balance program to help seniors over the age of 60 avoid falls which could lead to hospitalizations. The program will be targeted to the Chinese community.

A $2,000 grant was also awarded to the Germantown Neighborhood Center for a "Couch to 5k" wellness program, in collaboration with South Shore Mental Health, which will provide health and wellness education to women from the center while encouraging them to work up to either walking or running 5 kilometers.

"Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton believes we have a vital role to play in addressing health needs outside of the hospital, and we are committed to improving the health of our communities," said Rich Fernandez, president and CEO of the hospital. "These community health grants will provide additional valuable resources to the work already being done as well as fund new programs, particularly those targeting Quincy's Asian community."

The $7,780 in grants were funded through BID-Milton's Community Benefits Program. During the last eight years the hospital has awarded an estimated $95,000 to 37 local non-profit organizations to help support programs that meet the hospital's community health priorities.

A comprehensive community health needs assessment undertaken by the hospital every three years identified the priorities. Current priorities include elder health and well-being, chronic disease, behavioral health and cancer.

FIFTY EMPLOYEES from BlumShapiro, New England's largest regional business advisory firm, participated in the Massachusetts Society of CPAs (MSCPA) Day of Service June 15th, in Hanover. MSCPA united members of the CPA profession give back to their local community through volunteerism projects. BlumShapiro employees partnered with South Shore YMCA based in Quincy to help construct a fence, rain garden, and plant native flowering plants in their new Harvest Community Farm. The farm plans not only to engage the YMCA community, but also to grow all food for donations to local pantries.

New Babycakes Owner Comes Full Circle

By ANNE COMBER

Mahriah Harrington thought she had found her dream job in 2009 when she began working at Babycakes, a legendary cupcake shop on Beale Street. She loved the cupcakes, the vibe of the small shop, and the fanatic loyalty of the customers. After working there for seven years, she left to pursue other interests, but kept a soft spot in her heart for the place.

When the owner put the bakery up for sale in 2015 to start her own restaurant, she reached out to Harrington to see if she was interested in buying it. Harrington was tempted, but the timing wasn't right. When the bakery went back on the market this spring, though, Harrington didn't hesitate. She bought the shop and had a Grand Opening in May. Harrington certainly isn't changing any of the popular cupcake recipes, but she is planning to add coffee to the menu, as well as offering kids' birthday parties. "When I first began working at Babycakes, I had no idea about the love I had for baking," Harrington said. "I have the perfect job!"

Babycakes is located at 163 Beale St. and is open Tuesday-Saturday. The website is www.babycakesshop.net.

Clam-Stuffed Artichokes

By MARIE

I enjoy cooking all kinds of food – although some recipes I shy away from if they are either too long or have unknown ingredients.

I found artichokes on sale last week and since they are usually a bit expensive I bought four of them. I usually like a bread-crumb stuffing for my artichokes, but for today's recipe I added minced clams. These were unique, delicious and everyone loved them!

Preheat oven to 350 degrees – Prepare a baking dish with a mixture of tomato sauce and water

RECIPE

4 artichokes (fewer if you like)
2 slices of bread soaked in water (squeeze out excess)
½ cup seasoned bread crumbs
6 ounces of fresh minced clams (canned can be used but fresh tastes better)
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
¼ cup grated cheese – use any kind, parmesan or Romano
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons of olive oil
Extra sauce for the bottom of the baking pan

DIRECTIONS

Place artichokes in a large pan of water, cover, bring to a boil and cook for about 10 minutes.

While the artichokes are boiling, soak and squeeze the bread, place in a bowl and add all of other ingredients except the oil. Blend until mixture is the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Cool the artichokes, clip sharp edges off of the tops of the leaves with scissors, and after removing the stems they should sit well in a baking pan.

Open the top of each artichoke and place the stuffing between the leaves. I usually place the stuffing in each layer of the leaves and then close and tighten them by hand.

In a baking pan put a cup of water and some tomato sauce on bottom.

Arrange artichokes side by side on top of each one and sprinkle a bit of olive oil. Cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for 45 or 50 minutes or until leaves are tender.

They can also be cooked on top of the stove in a large pan for the same amount of time.

When served they can be either cut in half or enjoyed as whole. Better have something on table for all of those leaves.

P.S. The stems of artichokes can be cut up after par boiling and added to the stuffing mixture. (This step is optional.)

Chicken And Salad

By SUSIE

Salads are everyone's go to meal on a hot day. A freshly made homemade one is so much better than the ones you can get at a restaurant, or takeout.

Here is a recipe that has everything you need and is a "chopped" style salad which makes it easier to eat as well. With chicken and bacon, a nice creamy Italian style dressing homemade dressing and lots of colorful crunchy vegetables, this is sure to be a favorite.

Great for leftover chicken and just make some extra bacon during the week so you have it on hand in a jiffy.

DRESSING

¼ cup Greek Yogurt (Full fat is best when purchasing Greek yogurt)
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chopped basil
1 tablespoon chopped fresh Italian parsley
1 tablespoon minced shallot (or red onion is fine)
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
1 teaspoon raw honey

CHICKEN AND SALAD

1 lb leftover or freshly cooked chicken chopped (it can be grilled, baked, however you prepare it is fine.)
4 cups chopped romaine lettuce
3/4 cup finely chopped red cabbage
3/4 cup diced red bell pepper
1/2 cup diced red onion
1/2 cup assorted cherry tomatoes, chopped
1/2 fennel bulb, halved again, thinly sliced
1 avocado, diced
2 slices cooked chopped bacon

To prepare dressing: Puree the dressing ingredients in a food processor or blender until smooth. You can also whisk if you are feeling like doing it the old school way.

Combine lettuce, cabbage, bell pepper, onion, tomatoes, fennel, avocado and bacon in a large bowl. Add the chicken and dressing and toss well. Season to taste. Enjoy!

Colman Gillis of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School, recently spent a week working at the Blessed Oscar Romero, S.J. Center in Camden New Jersey, one of the poorest and most racially isolated cities in the nation.Gillis with eight 8 of his classmates and under the guidance of BC High English teacher, Kevin McLain and Mrs. Mary Sullivan of the BC High Student Affairs staff, built relationships with the poor of Camden.

Their service took many conventional forms: volunteering at the South Jersey food bank, boxing buffer ingredients for poor people recently recovering after being discharged from the hospital; supervising, assisting, and engaging with dementia patients of the Abigail House.

One day they travelled to the Cathedral Kitchen to serve meals to the homeless and hungry. The boys also set up bowling lanes for wheelchair-bound, sport enthusiasts at the Inglis House; they gave hand massages to some very grateful, and often subsequently very sleepy, seniors at Mercy Neighborhood Ministries; and played dominos against some ruthless sharks at the STARS Adult Medical Day Care Center.

"With the boys' comfort infringed upon," said McLain, " I am pleased to report that their reliance on each other and, more importantly, the peoples we have engaged with has bolstered all spirits and turned our hesitation into something productive and something good."

Quincy YouthWorks Pilots Culinary, Restaurant Program

Eight youngsters recently participated in the Quincy Youthworks Culinary & Restaurant Skills training program.

The youngsters, all from Quincy, are: Mandy Ng, Taylor Fenton, Taco Luzardo-Zelis, Joe MacMillan, Kyle Chua, James Keenan, Kyle Cabezas and Raheim Leathers.

YouthWorks is a state-funded employment program administered by the Commonwealth Corporation that helps teens and young adults (ages 14-21) get the skills and experience they need to find and keep jobs. Enrollees participate in "Signal Success," a hands-on work readiness training where they learn about job expectations, how to relate to supervisors and co-workers, and how to take the next steps in obtaining a job on their own.

The program, run by the South Shore Workforce Development Board and the South Shore Career Center in Quincy, partnered with the South Shore YMCA who offered the use of their kitchen at the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

During this 12-week pilot program, participants learned about various cooking techniques, practiced knife skills and explored nutrition fundamentals, restaurant etiquette and industry terminology. Participants learned about the varied career pathways in the restaurant industry and were trained in proper food storage and handling as well as restaurant safety. They all became ServSafe and CPR/First Aid certified.

Students engaged in group dining events where they observed and evaluated the food, service, atmosphere and overall restaurant experience. They were shown how to "shop the perimeter" of the grocery store for less processed and healthier food and embarked on a nutrition-based scavenger hunt at Star Market in Quincy.

One of the highlights of the program was assisting at the South Shore YMCA's annual Taste of the South Shore event at Lombardo's. Students helped with loading, unloading and set-up and networked with local restaurant owners and managers. They enjoyed sampling the fine cuisine as well.

Much appreciation and gratitude go out to the amazing local businesses and restaurants who never hesitated to engage, excite and invest in our youth. They include:

• Roy and Gary Kandalaft and Karen Djerf at Tony's Clam Shop on Wollaston Beach(www.tonysclamshop.com) who served as work experience hosts and showed a great deal of patience and encouragement.

• Abby Gray (www.cookingwithabby.com) who invited the youth to her home/cooking school in Norwell and spoke about her personal experiences and journey to becoming a culinary entrepreneur while also sharing valuable cooking tips and tricks.

• Hull's Kitchen owners Jane and Jeff & Chef Ben Wicks (www.hullskitchen.com) who gave participants a tour of Hull's Kitchen and HK Too, demonstrated the preparation of their beer batter recipe that is used for their popular and delicious fresh fish tacos, and shared their wisdom and experiences as restaurant proprietors.

• Head Chef Richard Daniels of STARS on Hingham Harbor (www.starshingham.com) who embraced the youth from the moment he met them and facilitated tours of STARS, Tosca, and Caffe Tosca, provided lunch, and inspired them with personal anecdotes of hard work and perseverance. Richard also provided job shadow and employment opportunities to participants.

• William Yoo and Terrol Stark from Charley's Philly Steaks at South Shore Plaza (www.charleys.com) invited youth to tour their store and provided lunch while they recounted their personal career pathways and emphasized how work ethic and passion for what one does are the keys to success.

• Greg Acerra, owner of Fireking Baking Co. in Braintree (www.firekingbaking.com) who entertained with his infectious energy and tales of the grind as he escorted participants through his state of the art baking facility and plied them with fresh baked carbs.

Those interested in learning more about job training and education programs for young people can contact Deb LaFavre, Youth Career advisor at the South Shore Career Center, Quincy at dlafavre@pqcc.org.

Swimmer's Ear: Signs, Symptoms, Prevention

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Swimmer's ear is an infection in the outer ear canal, which extends from your eardrum to the outside of your head. It's typically caused by water that remains in your ear after swimming, creating a moist environment that aids bacterial growth.

Swimmer's ear is also known as otitis externa. Timely treatment can help prevent complications and more serious infections. Putting fingers, cotton swabs or other objects in your ears also can lead to swimmer's ear by damaging the thin layer of skin lining your ear canal.

Swimmer's ear symptoms are usually mild at first, but they worsen if your infection is left untreated or spreads. Doctors often classify swimmer's ear according to mild, moderate and advanced stages of progression.

Mild signs and symptoms

- Itching in your ear canal
- Slight redness inside your ear
- Mild discomfort that's made worse by pulling on your outer ear (pinna, or auricle) or pushing on the little "bump" (tragus) in front of your ear
- Some drainage of clear, odorless fluid

Moderate progression

- More intense itching
- Increasing pain
- More extensive redness in your ear
- Excessive fluid drainage
- Discharge of pus
- Feeling of fullness inside your ear and partial blockage of your ear canal by swelling, fluid and debris
- Decreased or muffled hearing

Advanced progression

- Severe pain that may radiate to your face, neck or side of your head
- Complete blockage of your ear canal
- Redness or swelling of your outer ear
- Swelling in the lymph nodes in your neck
- Fever

Swimmer's ear is usually caused by bacteria commonly found in water and soil. Infections can be caused by a fungus or a virus, but are less common. Your outer ear canals have natural defenses that help keep them clean and prevent infection.

Protective features include:

- Glands that secrete a waxy substance (cerumen). These secretions form a thin, water-repellent coating on the skin inside your ear. Cerumen is also marginally acidic, which helps to discourage bacterial growth. Additionally, cerumen collects dirt, dead skin cells and other debris and assists in transporting these particles out of your ear. The waxy clump that results is the earwax you find at the opening of your ear canal.
- Downward slope of your ear canal. Your ear canal slopes down somewhat from your middle ear to your outer ear, facilitating drainage of water.

If you have swimmer's ear, those natural defenses may have been overwhelmed. Conditions that can weaken your ear's defenses and promote bacterial growth include:

- Excess moisture in your ear. Heavy perspiration, prolonged humid weather or water that remains in your ear after swimming can generate a favorable environment for bacteria.
- Scratches or abrasions in your ear canal. Cleaning your ear with a cotton swab or hairpin, scratching inside your ear with a finger, or wearing headphones or hearing aids can cause small breaks in the skin that allow bacteria to grow.
- Sensitivity reactions. Hair products or jewelry can cause allergies and skin disorders that promote infection.

Factors that may increase your risk of swimmer's ear include:

- Swimming
- Swimming in water with elevated bacteria levels, such as a lake rather than a well-maintained pool
- A narrow ear canal, such as in a child, that can more easily trap water
- Aggressive cleaning of the ear canal with cotton swabs or other objects
- Use of certain devices, such as headphones or a hearing aid
- Skin allergies or irritation from jewelry, hair spray or hair dyes

Swimmer's ear usually isn't serious if treated promptly, but complications can occur.

- Temporary hearing loss. You may experience muffled hearing that usually improves after the infection clears up.
- Long-term infection (chronic otitis externa). An outer ear infection is usually considered chronic if signs and symptoms persist for more than three months. Chronic infections are more common if there are conditions that make treatment difficult, such as a rare strain of bacteria, an allergic skin reaction, and an allergic reaction to antibiotic eardrops, or a combination of a bacterial and fungal infection.
- Deep tissue infection (cellulitis). Rarely, swimmer's ear may result in the spread of infection into deep layers and connective tissues of the skin.
- Bone and cartilage damage (necrotizing otitis externa). An outer ear infection that spreads can cause inflammation and damage to the skin and cartilage of the outer ear and bones of the lower part of the skull, causing increasingly severe pain. Older adults, people with diabetes or people with weakened immune systems are at increased risk of this complication.
- More widespread infection. If swimmer's ear develops into necrotizing otitis externa, the infection may spread and affect other parts of your body, such as the brain or nearby nerves. This rare complication can be life-threatening.

To prevent swimmer's ear:

- Keep your ears dry. Dry your ears thoroughly after exposure to moisture from swimming or bathing. Dry only your outer ear, wiping it slowly and gently with a soft towel or cloth. Tip your head to the side to help water drain from your ear canal. You can dry your ears with a blow dryer if you put it on the lowest setting and hold it at least a foot away from the ear.
- Swim wisely. Watch for signs alerting swimmers to high bacterial counts and don't swim at those times.
- Avoid putting foreign objects in your ear. Never attempt to scratch an itch or dig out earwax with items such as a cotton swab, paper clip or hairpin. Using these items can pack material deeper into your ear canal, irritating the thin skin inside your ear or tearing the skin.
- Protect your ears from irritants. Put cotton balls in your ears while applying products such as hair sprays and hair dyes.
- Use caution after an ear infection or surgery. If you've recently had an ear infection or ear surgery, talk to your doctor before you go swimming.

Teacher Lorie Hammerstrom Honored For Commitment To Science Education

Merrymount School 4th grade teacher Lorie Hammerstrom received a presidential citation for her commitment to science education during a trip to Washington, D.C.

The elementary school science teacher was able to reap the rewards of a two-year application process when she accepted a Presidential Award for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching in Washington, D.C.

Established in 1983, PAEMST is the highest award kindergarten through 12th grade mathematics and science teachers can receive from the U.S. government.

Nominees complete a rigorous application process that requires them to demonstrate their excellence in content knowledge, and their ability to adapt to a broad range of learners and teaching environments.

A panel of distinguished mathematicians, scientists and educators at the state and national levels assess the applications before recommending nominees to the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Teachers are selected based on their distinction in the classroom and dedication to improving Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) education.

At the awards ceremony at the National Portrait Gallery on June 26th, Michael Kratsios, Deputy Assistant to the President for Technology Policy said, "On behalf of the White House, I am honored to express the Nation's gratitude for the tireless dedication that these men and women bring to educating the next generation of scientists, engineers, and mathematicians. Each day more and more jobs require a strong foundation in STEM education, so the work that you do as teachers and mentors helps ensure that all students can have access to limitless opportunities and the brightest of futures."

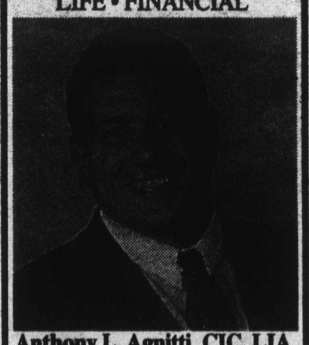

During her four-day stay in our nation's capital, Hammerstrom attended the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy's first-ever Science, Technology, Engineering and Math summit to provide feedback for a federal five-year STEM Education strategic plan.

Mrs. Hammerstrom said, "It was wonderful to be acknowledged in this way, and to be able to participate in this crucial federal STEM summit. There were so many great people involved, and there is such important work to be done. I was humbled to be asked to be a part of it."

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – Benefits For Disabled Adult Son

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: You were so kind to answer my recent questions about Social Security and I really appreciate how quickly and accurately you accomplished it. Now I would like to ask for your help again for my son (age 61) who has been battling throat cancer for about six months and had to have his voice box and larynx removed so is unable to speak. He is a handyman, so it is difficult to communicate with customers or potential customers. One of the medical people suggested he sign up to get help from Social Security so he tried communicating with them on the computer but couldn't get through to someone who could help him. He tried the local office and there were over 100 people waiting! We have been helping him financially, but he doesn't like taking aid from us. You answered my questions before in a few days that I had been trying to get done with others for over 3 months, so I was really impressed! Consequently, I thought of you when thinking about my son's medical problems, and the difficulty communicating with Social Security. Any advice or assistance you can offer will be greatly appreciated. Signed: Concerned Father

Dear Concerned Father: I'm sorry to hear of your son's battle with throat cancer, and I'm happy to help however I can. From what you've described to me and assuming your son has worked in Social Security covered work long enough, he should apply for Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits because he is unable to work in his trade due to his throat cancer and permanent vocal disability. Since he's lost his ability to speak your son can apply for SSDI benefits online, and the best place to start is at this web address: www.ssa.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits_adult_eng.htm. This will take him to a "disability starter kit" which includes a checklist of information your son will need to have available to complete the online application (including and especially his medical information) as well as a link to fill out and submit the application online. When starting the online application, he'll be given a "reentry" number, so he can start/stop and re-enter as many times as necessary before finally submitting the application. Once the application is received by Social Security they will review it and notify him either by mail, electronically or by phone to arrange an interview. On the application, your son should specify that he is unable to speak and request an in-person interview.

When submitting the application, be sure to use a phone number for someone who can speak with the SSA agency representative and explain your son's situation - that he needs an appointment for an in-person interview. Don't be discouraged if the application is at first denied, because about 2/3rds of all initial applications are. If initially denied, appeal the decision immediately, multiple times if necessary, including appealing to an independent Administrative Law Judge.

You may even want to consider engaging an attorney who specializes in SSDI cases. SSDI attorney's fees are governed by Federal law so they cannot charge you a fee (except a small administrative fee) unless they win the disability case, and even then, their fees are limited to only a portion of any back SSDI benefits they are able to secure for you. To find an SSDI attorney in your area, do a Google search for "SSDI Attorneys in my area."

By using the online process your son can submit the disability application and get the process started without needing to speak to anyone at Social Security, and he can also have someone accompany and represent him with Social Security, if needed.

Finally, depending upon your son's financial situation, he may also be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI). SSI provides financial assistance for disabled people with few assets and low income. You can find out more about SSI at https://ssa.gov/ssi/text-apply-ussi.htm.

Koch Names Educator, Administrator To Lead College Nursing Program

Roxanne Mihal Directed Post-Graduate Practical Nursing Department At Blue Hills Regional High School

Mayor Thomas P. Koch has appointed a long-time nursing educator with a two-decade record of building and maintaining successful nursing education programs across the state to spearhead the effort to resurrect the nursing program at Quincy College.

Koch on Tuesday annouced Roxanne E. Mihal as the new dean of nursing for Quincy College. Mihal most recently directed the post-graduate Practical Nursing Department at Blue Hills Regional Technical School, where students passed a critical licensure examination at among the best rates of any school in the Commonwealth, the mayor said.

It will be the second stint at Quincy College for Mihal, whose prior tenure as Dean from 2011 to 2015 saw test scores that helped the college maintain and grow its reputation as one of the best programs of its kind in Massachusetts. She is also a former Dean of Nurse Education and Health Professions at Bunker Hill Community College, and she built a post-graduate nursing program from scratch at the Tri-County Regional Vocational School in Franklin.

In total, Mihal, who holds a Doctorate in Nursing Practice from Regis College, has more than 20 years of experience teaching and directing nursing programs at a wide range of institutions in Massachusetts.

"I'm thrilled that Roxanne has agreed to come back to Quincy College to restore the program that was very successful under her tenure and through her leadership," said Mayor Koch. "She has an extraordinary track record at every institution she has led or taught at; she understands exactly what we need at Quincy College; and she's passionate about implementing a program and working with regulators as partners to once again make nursing the gem of what Quincy College offers.

"Quincy College has the bones for a great nursing program – it always has. We want to produce good nurses; we want nurses that we'll want to care for us and our families; and we want nurses who can be successful. To do that, we need to create a level of rigor in this program. We can do it, and I'm looking forward to the challenge."

Mihal said that she is "by the book," and noted that the accrediting agencies and regulators that monitor nursing programs are there to help, not to be adversarial. That's the strategy she plans to take as the school works to regain its accreditation.

velop the vicinity of the Ross Lot in phases, Koch said, and the first phase could include 200,000 square feet of commercial space. One of the buildings on site could be the tallest in Quincy, surpassing even Peter O'Connell's planned 15-story Chestnut Place in height.

A public parking garage will also be built in the area of the Ross Lot. Koch said that garage would feature more spaces than the 712-car garage planned for the Hancock Lot.

The Ross Lot, the mayor added, will not close until the new garage on the Hancock Lot opens next year.

The last remaining spaces in the Hancock Lot closed on Monday. The city is relying on several other parking lots in Quincy Center, including the Ross Lot, to accommodate holders of monthly passes and transient parkers.

Two private developments – Chestnut Place and LBC Partners' Nova Residences – are planned for portions of the Hancock Lot. Those two developments include a total of 295 residential units and 19,200 square feet of retail space. The 712-car garage will be constructed between those two buildings; plans for the lot also include new civic space and a public park along Cottage Avenue.

Two other areas of the Hancock Lot will be developed in the future.

Koch said he has designated LBC as the developer for the piece of the lot near the corner of Revere Road and Hancock Street behind a stretch of buildings that are home to several businesses, including Napoli Pizzeria and Paddy Barry's. LBC was designated the developer for that area because the company owns other land nearby.

"They've got the land right up to it, so we've designated them developer," Koch said. "They have not come back with a plan yet. We've got to figure all that out – whether they're going to acquire all that property, are we going to be able to move the sidewalk back like we've consistently been trying to do with these projects.

"They're the ones right next to it. They own the property right next to it. It makes sense, because it's too small to get into another entity. You couldn't do much with it."

The other parcel is at the corner of Revere Road and Dennis Ryan Parkway.

Koch said there are no plans yet for that section of the lot; the land there will be used a staging area for construction nearby.

"It's going to be used for a lay-down area for while anyway; it's not going to be available for a bit, and it's not a big lot," he said.

"There is so much going on right now, I think an interim would be fine," he said.

"There are still some challenges we've got to get through – we've got to get this nursing program up and running again…I'm negotiating zero percent raises for the two unions for the year. I'm at the table – that's my ask – we have a ways to go in getting that accomplished.

"We made a lot of changes over there, created some efficiencies. We've frozen some openings. We've frozen overtime. So we've done all those things you need to do business-wise to manage the revenue issue that we're facing now.

"I don't know that they're ready for a permanent president right now, honestly. I don't think it would be fair for that person. I think we're righting the ship. I think once it's in a better place it's something they can tackle."

When asked what qualifications he would like the school's next president to possess, Koch identified leadership skills and management ability.

"Mount Ida was run by a higher ed person. Mount Ida is out of business today and a mess. Curry College is run by a non-higher ed person. When Ken Quigley was appointed he was an attorney by background. Look at what he's done to put Curry on the map," Koch said.

"It's really about the individual's abilities – leadership skills, management abilities – that's what it comes down to."

Koch said he anticipates hiring two new officials at the college – a provost and a dean of nursing – later this month. The provost will be tasked with overseeing curriculum-related matters, freeing up the president to manage the business side of things.

"I do think there will a different perspective on the president's role, because of the new position of provost," Koch said. "This is going to be a very high-end person in the academic world. I think that takes enormous pressure off of the president to allow the president to do the business side of the college – manage the budget, handle the endowment, make those community connections and be the face of the college and deal with all those other aspects of running a college."

The position of provost, which has a $245,000 salary, was added to the budget for the school's current fiscal year that started on July 1. The school previously had a vice president of academic affairs, with a $142,000 salary.

The school's budget also includes the newly created position of chief operating officer, which has a budgeted salary of $165,000.

Koch said Lisa McBirney, who had previously been his chief of staff at City Hall, has been hired as the school's COO; she was formerly the head of the Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the U.S. Senate. Chris Walker, who had been the mayor's director of policy and information, was named Koch's new chief of staff. Lisa Aimola, who was the city's community preservation administrator, was selected as Koch's communications director.

The Board of Registration of Nursing on May 9 withdrew approval for the college's associate degree in nursing and practical nursing programs. As part of that decision, students in the associate degree in nursing program who completed their degree requirements during the spring 2018 semester will still be able to take the national licensure exam. Students in the practical nursing program who complete their degree requirements prior to Aug. 1 will likewise be eligible to take the national licensure test.

Koch said the nursing program could be restored at the start of the fall 2019 semester at the earliest. At the latest, he said it would be restored for the start of the spring 2020 semester.

The Board of Governors had to cut the college's budget from $34.7 million in the last fiscal year to $27.6 million in this one – following the loss of the nursing program, because of the anticipated drop in revenue. Koch said it could be up to two years before revenue exceeds expenses.

Quincy College is currently based out of leased space in Presidents Place. Koch said he would like to see the school find a permanent home elsewhere in Quincy Center.

"It's my opinion – the Board of Governors will have to weigh in and certainly if I go to the City Council for money, they're going to have to weigh in – the college needs a permanent location to put its roots down," Koch said. "That doesn't mean anything has to be in that one location, but it means that at that one location you could say 'that's Quincy College.'

"They're at Presidents Place now. They were at Kemper Insurance. They were at the old Ledger building. They were at the Coddington Building. They've been all over the place. I see a permanent home – maybe 100,000 square feet in that permanent home and then maybe they've got 10,000 here and 10,000 over here, which creates that campus atmosphere.

"I do think they need a solid presence for continuity going forward."

The new home for the college would have to be built specifically for the school, Koch said. The city would own the building and lease it to the school, which remains a department of the city but is self-funded.

"They can't own their own building – the city would own it," Koch said. "Instead of them paying rent at Presidents Place, they would pay it to the city and that would pay down the debt service on the building. We don't make a profit on the building – developer fees and all that – so we could build it at a cheaper rate for the college and of course the city owns it…you could create a rent structure that would be long-term that would give continuity again on their expense side.

"I just think it would be tremendous, and of course being part of the new Quincy Center they would bring great vitality to the district. I think we'll get there for sure with a new building."

Koch said the new facility would likely not include dormitories for students, but a private developer could at some point come forward with a plan for dorms elsewhere in the downtown.

Report: Quincy 8th Most Expensive City For Residential Rent

Quincy is the eighth most expensive city for residential rent according to a recent report by Zumper Boston Metro that analyzed 16 metro cities across the region.

While the Massachusetts median one bedroom rent was $1,854 last month, Quincy's was $1,930, just slightly more expensive, according to the report.

Overall, Quincy ranked as the 8th most expensive city with one bedroom rent decreasing 1 percent last month to $1,930, while two bedrooms dropped 1.3 percent to $2,280. Though fairly flat on a monthly basis, Quincy's year over year rental growth rates are much larger. One and two bedroom prices here are up 10.9 percent and 7 percent, respectively, since this time last year.

Officials from Zumper said there seems to be a strong demand for housing in Quincy, which is why one bedroom rent is up over 10 percent since this time last year, and this is most likely due to a couple of factors. Quincy is located right next to Boston and with rent nearly $400 cheaper a month in Quincy, people looking for more affordability may think it's worth the commute to bustling Boston.

Quincy also has other great amenities like being on the water, having a wide variety of restaurants, and having continued new developments of more modern housing that makes it appealing to new renters. However, until the available stock is able to meet the demand, prices will most likely remain high and growing, Zumper's report stated.

Other findings in the report:

The Most Expensive

• Cambridge saw rent climb $10 to $2,500 last month and continue to rank as the most expensive in the metro.

• Brookline stayed as second, though rent rose $10 to $2,320.

• Boston was third with one bedrooms priced at $2,320.

The Least Expensive

• Fall River was the most affordable city with rent at $950.

• Worcester rent dropped $40 to $1,280 but continued to be the second least expensive.

• Brockton fell behind Lawrence to become the third most affordable with rent dropping $30 to $1,360.

The Zumper Boston Metro Report analyzed active listings that hit the market last month. Listings are aggregated by city to calculate median asking rents.

Window Treatment For Sliding Glass Doors

What type of window treatment is suitable for sliding glass doors? Can I use shades? Vanessa

As in most of my decorating projects, I ask a lot of questions, and this is no exception.

Are the sliders the only source of natural light in the room? Or the major source of light to supplement overhead or task lighting? Do you need transparent, light filtering, or room darkening properties in your window treatments? Do you need privacy in this room? Is the view outside the door something to enjoy or hide? How wide are the sliding glass doors? Do you have young children and/or pets? What style do you prefer: traditional, transitional, or contemporary? What materials do you like? What is your budget?

When it comes to the level of lighting, consider treatments that will not allow the sun to fade your furniture, carpet or rugs, and artwork in any room or provide appropriate darkness in your bedroom.

When you have kids and mischievous pets, beware of long cords which can be a choking or hanging hazard.

In general, vertical blinds and fabric drapes are the popular choices to adorn sliders. In response to your second question, in cases where the slider is not too wide and the door is not a constant egress to the outdoors, you can use horizontal shades – try solar or honeycomb ones – especially if combined with fabric panels (at least on the ends). But, in my opinion, shades can look too flat on a large expanse like sliding glass doors.

I recently met with Quincy's franchisee for Budget Blinds and was delighted to see all the options available today. Vertical blinds come in many attractive colors and patterns in fabric, vinyl, and even sheers. Horizontal blinds now even have motors and remote controls (at an added cost, of course). Custom drapes are also available. Budget Blinds will bring samples to your home, measure, and install– all to make it painless for you!

"He championed both and they were both controversial," the city's 30th mayor said. "They both were put into fruition."

McCauley said Hannon was one of the five mayors he profiled in his book.

"I included him not because he was my friend but because he was a stand-up guy who got things done. I remember telling him once how long you served didn't matter. It's what you accomplish in that timeframe."

As a public servant, Mr. Hannon's accomplishments were vast and varied.

One piece of legislation that Walter Hannon worked on with former Mayor James McIntyre is now regarded to be Quincy's first open space acquisition. In 1971, before there was any such thing as a Community Preservation Act, Walter and others crafted legislation that kept Furnace Brook Golf Club open and functional to be enjoyed by residents ever since. The legislation calls the course to become a city asset, without further payment of taxpayer funds, preserving another recreational

Remembering The Honorable Walter J. Hannon - 27th Mayor Of Quincy

TWO BOYHOOD BUDDIES from Houghs Neck would both grow up to become mayor of Quincy. Walter Hannon (right) served as the city's 27th mayor while Francis McCauley (left) served as Quincy's 30th mayor. Both began their public service careers winning ward council seats (McCauley in Ward 1, Hannon Ward 5) on Nov. 5, 1963. McCauley was among the friends and colleagues paying tribute to Mr. Hannon who died July 7 at the age of 86. "Walter Hannon was never one to shy away from espousing a cause in which he believed, no matter how unpopular that cause. He was my oldest friend," McCauley said. This photo was taken in the fall of 2013 when the two marked the 50th anniversary of their first campaign wins.

Shea served as Mr. Hannon's executive secretary during his four years as mayor from 1972 to 1975. "I think Walter Hannon has left a big mark on the city," Shea said remembering his friend. "To be with him every day and go to events with him he was very quick. He could make up his mind when others may hesitate."

TRASH – more than 1,500 pounds of it – was removed from the Crusher this spring by a team of 30 volunteers led by Jacob Gordon, who oversaw the effort as part of his Eagle Scout project. ting trails at Slate Island and Jacob's grandfather Martin Gordon received the honor as well.

"Hopefully I'm going to be a third-generation Eagle Scout, which is pretty rare," Jacob Gordon said.

Gordon, who will be a sophomore at Quincy High School in the fall, has been involved with scouting since he joined Cub Scouts.

"I joined Cub Scouts because my dad is a scoutmaster, so I've always kind of been around it," he said.

"Once I got into Cub Scouts, I kind of just stuck with it. Once I got into Boy Scouts, I started to really like it a lot. We got to do a lot of cool things – going on camping trips and stuff."

If he receives his Eagle Scout, Gordon plans to stay involved with his troop.

"Right now I'm the youth leader in charge, so every Monday night I come up with a plan for what we're going to do at the scout meeting. I come up with we're going to do on camping trips and stuff. So I've kind of worked my way up to the top and I want to stay in the troop and give back to it," he said.

At Quincy High School, Gordon is involved with the robotics program. He is unsure of his future plans, but a career in engineering is something he might chose to pursue.

"I really like engineer because I like seeing how stuff works," Gordon said.

Kara Nyman New PIO For Sheriff's Office

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti recently named Kara Nyman as his new public information officer.

Nyman succeeds Dave Weber who retired July 6. Weber had been the communications director for the Norfolk Sheriff's Office since 2007.

"I'd like to congratulate Dave on his retirement, and thank him for his 11 years of service to the Norfolk Sheriff's Office," Sheriff Bellotti said.

Nyman holds a bachelor's degree in government from Suffolk University and a master's degree in public administration from Suffolk University. Prior to joining the Norfolk Sheriff's Office, Nyman worked in the Massachusetts State Senate for six years.

Red Cross Blood Drives July 17, July 23

An emergency blood shortage is prompting the American Red Cross to issue an urgent call for eligible donors of all blood types – especially type O – to give now and help save lives.

There are two blood drives scheduled this month in Quincy.

The first will be held Tuesday, July 17 from 2 to 8 p.m. at Saint Thomas Aquinas Hall, 2 Darrow St.

The second is set for Monday, July 23 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Hall, 120 Quarry St.

To schedule an appointment to donate, use the free Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit RedCrossBlood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

make a recommendation to the mayor.

"I kind of like that side of it," Koch said. "Somebody that tests well doesn't mean they're good at other things. I think the whole interview and putting scenarios in front of them – that's what this group would do – I think has some weight."

The process could take about a month to complete, with the new chief being named in the middle of August.

"The assessment centers don't take nearly as long as if you did a written exam, so I don't expect this thing to be drawn out too far," Koch said.

The mayor said the department's five deputy chiefs would have the first shot at the chief's position. The search would be opened up to the captains in the department, of which there are 14, if not enough deputies apply.

"Under the guidelines with Civil Service, if not enough deputies sign up, you're supposed to open it up to captains," Koch said.

"Out of the five of them, I don't know how many are interested. Being deputy chief is a pretty nice deal because when you go home, you go home. When you're the chief, there is always stuff weighing on you. You're always getting calls."

Only internal candidates are being considered at this point, Koch said, but that could be revisited depending on how many applicants there are for the job.

While the search for a new chief is underway, the mayor said he could ask Deputy Joseph Jackson to serve as acting chief. Jackson is the administrative deputy, while the other four deputies are each assigned to a specific shift, Koch said.

Broad Meadows' Boys' Track and Field; Central Girls' Teams Win Gold At Middle School Track Championships

By CHRIS PRENDIVILLE

The Middle School Track and Field City Championships were held at Faxon Field on May 29th. The event kicked off with the boys' mile which was won by Robert Cannon from Broad Meadows with a 5:21 time. The 800m followed with Atlantic's Quinn Perry taking first with a time of 2:23. Central's Thomas Murray posted a time of 1:04.2 to take the 400m, while Broad Meadows' Will Ploof's 25.28 was the fastest time for the 200m. Point got on the championship stand with Jacey Ham's gold in the boys' 100m dash with a 11.65 time. The 50m dash, open to only 5th and 6th graders, was won by Broad Meadows' Aiden Judge with a 6.73 time. The hurdles were won by John Alessandro from Broad Meadows, posting a 7.49 time. The relays finished the boys' track events with the 4 X 400 relay team from Central getting the gold with a time of 4.22 run by Colin Hingston, Scott Gutro, Zachary Donaghue, and Thomas Murray. The 4 X 100 team from Broad Meadows finished first with a time of 50.61 run by Matthew Wong, Stephen Gallant, John Allessandro and Will Ploof.

In the boys' field events, the standing broad jump was won by Nicholas Tran from Central with a jump of 9' 2", breaking a five-year old city record. Shot put saw Atlantic's Quinn Perry throw 34' 1/2" for first place. Long jump was a close one with Point's Jacey Ham jumping 15' 4" to win gold by an inch. The turbo javelin was dominated by Point's Brandon Pham with a throw of 115' 10", 14 feet ahead of the second place finisher. In the high jump, five jumpers cleared 4' 10"; they were Scott Gutro from Central, Stephen Gallant from Broad Meadows, and Jackson Murphy, Zach Taylor, and Arthur Kudaiarov, all from Atlantic. The city title then went to Broad Meadows' boys who scored a total of 65.5 points with Central coming in second with 58.5 points to finish the season.

The girls started the afternoon with their field events. In the standing broad jump, Atlantic's Kathy Mo finished first with a winning jump of 7'. Pilar Brown from Broad Meadows threw 28' 8" for the gold in the shot put. The turbo javelin was won by Central's Brooke Messing who threw 73' 6" to defend her title from last year. Kiera Sleiman from Atlantic out jumped all of her competition with a 15' 1" winning jump. In the high jump, three jumpers cleared 4' 2"; they were Mollie Smith Gaeta from Central, Lily Hanly from Broad Meadows, and Desire Masone from Atlantic.

In the girls' track events, Central's Aluna Coogan-Coyne dominated the mile, taking first with a time of 6:14. Central took the 800m with Caitlin Cormican's 2:48 time and the 400m with Aoibhe Gormley's 1:08 first place finish.

Sterling was able to break the streak with Nnene Ugah taking the 200m, posting a 28.68 first-place finish. Central's Victoria Rak took first place from the 2nd heat of the 100m with a 13.88 time. She won the 50m last year as a 6th grader. Atlantic's Brianna Sullivan finished first in the 50m with a time of 7.04, and her Atlantic teammate Kiera Sleiman took first in the hurdles with a time of 8.0.

In the relays, Central swept both with a time of 4.53 in the 4 X 400m and 57.17 in the 4 X 100m to finish out the day. The Central girls took the city title with 79.5 points over Atlantic's 69.5 team score.

The Athletic Directors for the middle schools include Carolyn Parsley (Atlantic), Chris McBride (Broad Meadows), Ricardo Cordero (Central), Kyria DiPietro (Sterling) and Matt Edgerly (Point). They would like to thank all of the people who helped the meets run smoothly: Stacey McGuire for timing all the meets, Michelle Budukiewicz at standing broad jump, Brian Tardif at high jump, Danielle Mullaney at turbo javelin, Jill Boussy and Stephanie Shields at long jump, Holly Rendle and Bill Parsley at shot put, Kim Gillis, Paul Griffith, and Pat Gould at the finish line, Meredith Johnson as the nurse on site, and all of the Central students who generously volunteered their time to work the finish line table.

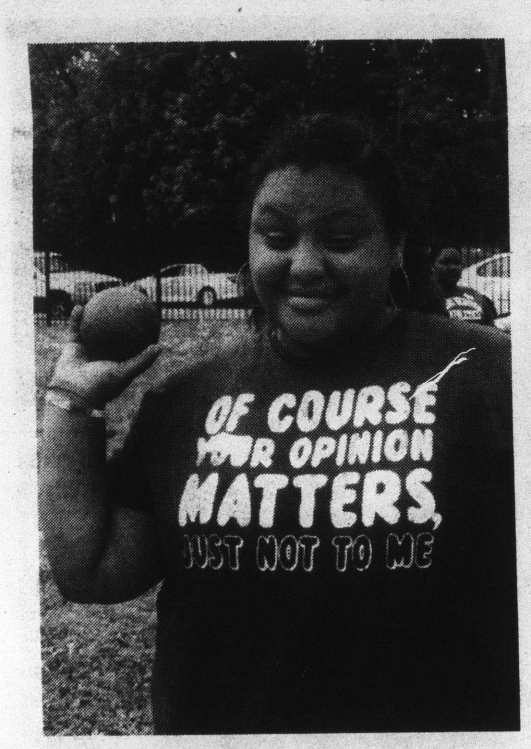

It was a great track season that resulted from a great middle school effort.

Softball Tournament Saturday Benefits Firefighters Memorial Restoration

The Crown of Quincy charity softball tournament at Faxon Park on Saturday, July 14 will raise funds for the restoration of the Quincy Firefighters memorial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The family-friendly event will feature a day of softball, bouncy house with water slide for children, plus food and beverages provided by Wahlburgers food truck and Tapped beer truck. The public is invited to attend and enjoy the day's festivities.

"The Quincy Fire Department gives so much to our community that this tournament is one little way we can give back to them and recognize the work and sacrifices Quincy fire fighters have made to our city throughout the decades," said event organizer Scott Logan of the Quincy Cemetery Department.

The round-robin softball tournament kicks off at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday and will end around dusk. The tournament features four teams representing the Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, Quincy College and Local 1139 city employees.

The event features the first Quincy appearance for Wahlburgers food truck. It's the mobile arm of Wahlburgers restaurant, famed nationally for its celebrity owners, the Wahlberg brothers of Dorchester. Tapped beer truck has become a fixture in the Boston and Quincy event scenes, appearing each day at the Rose Kennedy Greenway in Boston, at PorchFest Quincy each of the past two years and at other celebrations around the city.

Donations to the firefighters memorial renovations can be made through Kim Trillcott Caporale at the Quincy Purchasing Department, George Zirngiebel at the Quincy Fire Department, or at the event itself on Saturday.

Donations can also be mailed to Quincy Memorial Fund, Attn: Amy Kelly, Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Checks should be made out to Quincy Memorial Fund.

Disabled Veterans Day Fishing Outing July 18

More than 200 disabled veterans from six veterans hospitals and two disabled veterans organizations will be the guests Wednesday, July 18th aboard 20 lobster boats provided by local lobstermen.

The event, known as "Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club's Annual Disabled Vet's Day Fishing Outing," has been held for the past 61 years from the shores of Houghs Neck, Quincy.

The veterans will be boarded at Quincy Yacht Club located on Sea Street in Houghs Neck around 9 a.m. Fishing will take place in Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor.

The fishing boats are expected to return to Quincy Yacht Club around 1 p.m. where Harvey's Fishing Club will host a luncheon and entertainment for all attending disabled veterans.

For some Disabled Veterans this will be the only day out of the hospital on an outing.

"We have veterans that look forward to this day all year long," said Michael Cheney of Harvey's. "They start calling us in January."

Over 125 volunteers from the community take the day off from work to help out.

Volunteers assist with the meals and provide the muscle power to help wheelchair bound vets get down the gangway and onto the boats. Boat captains donate their boats for the day.

Summing up this year's event at a recent club meeting, Cheney said: "This year is special, not only because it marks the 62nd anniversary of this great event but because we are at war and unfortunately, every day we add another disabled veteran to the rolls. This is the very least we can do to show our disabled veterans we appreciate the sacrifices they have made to keep us a free nation."

Each year the Disabled Veterans Event is held in honor of a local disabled veteran. This year the 62nd annual event will be held in honor of 94-year-old World War 11 Disabled Veteran, Tom Cheney. Tom served in the USMC fighting in the Pacific Ocean theater.

The event is sponsored by several individuals, unions, local business and three major sponsors, The Quincy Lodge of Elks, Liberty Bay Credit Union and Quirk Chevy.

Sheriff Bellotti Honors Seven Youngsters At Leadership Awards Dinner

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti recently hosted the first annual Leadership Awards Dinner where he honored seven young individuals who attended the 2017 Youth Leadership Academy.

"We were pleased to honor these bright young individuals who have excelled in their communities," Bellotti said. "Each recipient has taken the skills they acquired from the academy and applied them to their daily life.

"They exemplified standing up to bullying, gaining more confidence in daily life advocating for themselves, helping their community and helping others," Sheriff Bellotti added. "And we appreciate the efforts by these young leaders."

The youth honored were: Madeline Smith (North Quincy), Kevin Toler (Quincy), Nicholas DePalma (Quincy), Brendan Coakley (Weymouth), Angelina Joyce (Braintree), Siana McDonough-Rocha (Milton) and Sarah Riker (Stoughton).

A Job Well Done

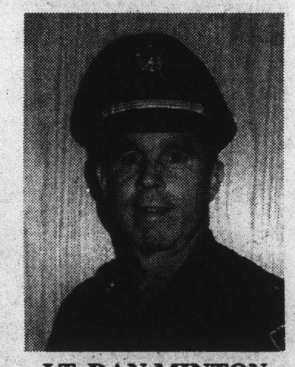

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, June 29, at approximately 3:25 p.m., Officers Michael McNeil and Sean McCormack were dispatched to the Home Depot Store on Centre Street for a "shoplifting in progress" call. As the officers neared the store, Communications informed them that store security had one male detained.

Upon arrival, the officers interviewed the Loss Prevention officer, who stated he and other associates observed the male attempting to use a fraudulent receipt to return goods. This led to the male being detained in the Loss Prevention office until police arrived. The Loss Prevention officer told the officers he observed the male enter the store empty handed. He watched the male load up a carriage with 12 packages of flooring and then head directly towards the returns line. This behavior was suspicious because the male did not come into the store with anything to return and was now in that line.

According to the Loss Prevention officer, he observed the male load the carriage in a hurry and rejected help from store employees in loading the carriage, adding, "He was throwing the bundles onto the carriage, not stacking them."

The Loss Prevention officer spoke to the cashier who confirmed the male was attempting to return the flooring, so the cashier was advised to stall the male until the police arrived. When told there was an issue with returning that monetary amount of merchandise and that she would need a supervisor to sign off on the transaction, the male asked the cashier if it was possible to just split the amount and therefore avoid the need of supervisor approval (to implicate the cashier in the crime.)

LT. DAN MINTON

At this point, the male became alarmed and tried to leave the store but was stopped by the Loss Prevention officer. The male then said he did not want to return the flooring and was there to purchase it. The male then claimed he did a job for a friend and was trying to get some money back for him by returning the flooring he had taken from the store.

The officers questioned the male as to what occurred and he repeatedly stated, "I made a mistake." Based on all information available, the male, a 35-year-old Dorchester resident, was placed under arrest and charged with aggravated shoplifting. Nice Work!

EXITING A VEHICLE AND BICYCLISTS

The danger of a vehicle door opening as a bicyclist approaches poses a very serious threat to their wellbeing. When opening a vehicle door, drivers and passengers are urged to do the following:

1. Check your rear-view mirror for oncoming cars, bicycles and pedestrians.

2. Check your side-view mirror too.

3. Open the door with your far hand (the hand farther from the door.) This is called the "Dutch Reach" method because it originated in the Netherlands. It forces your body to turn, which will better allow you to see approaching bicyclists. It also prevents the vehicle door from being opened too fast. This not only protects bicyclists, but can also prevent your door from being damaged or torn off by an approaching motor vehicle.

Bicyclists should ride at least three feet from parked cars to avoid doors, both on streets with and without bike lanes. This will keep bicyclists outside of the "door zone" and protect them from getting hit by opening vehicle doors.

It may also protect you, the driver or rear left seat passenger from being struck by a moving object. At a minimum, it will help prevent damage to your vehicle.

'Prevention First' Recreation Program

"Prevention First," a cooperative recreation program sponsored by Mayor Thomas Koch's office of substance abuse and supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department will be conducted on Monday nights during July and August.

The program is molded after the Friday night gym which was launched this winter for participants entering grades, 6-9. Prevention First will be conducted at Veterans Memorial Stadium from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Activities will include, arts and crafts, games, movies as well as sports and more. Each week a special event will be held including Karaoke, game trucks, inflatable obstacle course.

The program is free and open only to Quincy residents.

All activities will be organized and supervised by the staff of the recreation department specifically selected to work with youth of this age group. Enrollment is done in person by entering the stadium from the rear gate on Merrymount Parkway.

Positive supervised recreation activities for this age population provides a safe environment at a period of time when there is considerable free time available for this age group.

Over 400 participants enrolled in the Friday night gym program, demonstrating a need for programs of this type, said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

"We are grateful that Laura Martin of the Substance Abuse office has joined with our program to sponsor Prevention first and hope together we can build on our success from the three month winter program," Welch said.

Lipton Cup Regatta This Weekend

The 32nd annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held Saturday, July 14th and Sunday, July 15th at the Squantum Yacht Club in Quincy. The festivities will begin with registration on Friday, July 13th from 7 to 9 p.m. in the lower hall of the Squantum Yacht Club.

The Lipton Cup Regatta is Quincy Bay's premiere sail racing event and a shining example of all Squantum Yacht Club has to offer.

In past years sailors young and old, have traveled from up and down the East Coast and as far away as California to participate in this historical Regatta.

The mission of The Lipton Cup is to promote sailing excellence for both the novice and the experienced within a challenging competition. More importantly, The Lipton Cup provides a fun, safe, sail racing forum for the youth of Quincy Bay and beyond. Classes of sailboats expected to race are N10, Optimist, Laser, Club 420, Sunfish, 210, Hustler, and Thunderbird.

The Lipton Cup Trophy was originally given to the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association in 1930 by tea magnate, Sir Thomas J. Lipton. The Lipton Cup Trophy was first awarded to Herbert Allbright, the victorious skipper of the Indian Class sailboat. After more than fifty five years of inactivity the Lipton Cup Trophy, nearly three feet tall in its silver Victorian splendor, is once again the object of grand sailboat racing competition in the waters of Massachusetts.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach, 617-770-4811 or by calling Frank Hart at 617-910-6628, or on line at: www.squantumyc.org and follow the link to the Lipton Cup Regatta page.

OBITUARIES

Anne M. Stanziani

ANNE M. STANZIANI

A funeral Mass for Anne M. (Guarnotta) Stanziani, of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester's Savin Hill, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Stanziani died unexpectedly June 27 surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Winchester to the late Michael and Mary (Crimi) Guarnotta. She was raised in Savin Hill and was a graduate of Jeremiah E. Burke High School in Dorchester. She had lived in Quincy for sixty-four years.

As a young woman, she had been employed at the Federal Reserve Bank and C.H. Sprague in Boston for several years.

A dedicated homemaker, Mrs. Stanziani was also active in community affairs and enjoyed local politics, working on Quincy campaigns over the years. She was also a volunteer at the Merrymount Elementary School in Quincy and at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

She was very artistic, loved music and enjoyed creating poetry for family and friends.

Most of all, Mrs. Stanziani's passion was for her family and especially her cherished grandchildren "her greatest gift of all." actively supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved wife for sixty-one years of the late Walter J. Stanziani. Devoted mother of Steven Walter Stanziani of Boston, Susan T. Corcoran and her husband Timothy of Milton, Patti A. Cooper of Quincy and Paula Sara Stanziani of Quincy. Loving "Mimi" of Jenna, Ryan, and Caroline Corcoran, Michael and Jackie Cooper. Dear sister of Mary Ciroli of Winchester, Janet Dennis of Quincy, Grace Ochs of Stoneham and the late Frances Bonanno. She is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Terence Clark, 57

A funeral Mass for Terence Clark, 57, of Quincy, formerly of Rockland, was celebrated July 6 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Clark died surrounded by his loving family on July 1 following a yearlong battle with esophageal cancer.

Son of the late Walter Clark and Anne (Foley) Clark. Beloved and devoted husband to Patricia (McAteer) Clark. Loving father of Colleen Clark, and Shannon (Clark) Sacchetti and her husband Christopher Sacchetti. Brother of William Clark and his wife Mary Clark, and the late Martin and Maryann Clark.

Mr. Clark was educated in Rockland and was a graduate of Quincy College. He enjoyed his time working at Biodirect. He briefly served time on the Rockland Police Department. He was an avid sports enthusiast. He had a passion for playing golf and shuffle board with his best friends. He was a devoted member to the John P. McKeon Post–Amvets in Dorchester, where he was also a long serving Color Guard member.

Mr. Clark's biggest joys in life came from spending time on the golf course, and enjoying time with his family, his dog Minnie and friends. He was a strong supporter of the Prayers for Charlotte Organization.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Prayers for Charlotte Road Race by visiting prayersforcharlotte.org or the Hospice of the South Shore, 30 Reservoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370.

Rosemary C. Wahlberg, 87

ROSEMARY C. WAHLBERG

A funeral Mass for Rosemary C. (McGrory) Wahlberg, age 87, of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester, was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Wahlberg died unexpectedly July 3 at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston to the late Hugh and Catherine (Doherty) McGrory. She was raised in Dorchester and was a graduate of Dorchester High School for Girls, Class of 1949 and later attended the former Boston Teacher's College. She had lived in Quincy for sixty years.

Mrs. Wahlberg was the former executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs in Quincy for twenty-five years. After her retirement in 1999, she remained active on the Board of Directors for many years.

In recognition of Mrs. Wahlberg's and her husband, Archie's, many years of dedicated commitment to the mission of Quincy Community Action Programs they were honored on April 12, 2012 as the newly purchased and renovated, former St. Joseph School in Quincy Point was dedicated in their name, as the Rosemary and Archie Wahlberg Early Learning Center as part of QCAP's Head Start program.

She was also a well-known Quincy community activist and a pioneer in social services for children, families and those in need. During her career, Mrs. Wahlberg served on many boards, including the Quincy Housing Authority and South Shore Day Care. In addition, she had served as a trustee of the former Quincy City Hospital, Manet Health and Quincy College.

True to her Irish roots, Mrs. Wahlberg was a charming woman with a warm heart and the gift of gab. She was an avid reader, a passionate devotee of theater and film and a wonderful dancer. Most of all, Mrs. Wahlberg was dedicated to her family and especially to her cherished grandchildren and great-grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved wife and best friend for sixty-six years of Arthur S. "Archie" Wahlberg. Devoted mother of Christine Vincent and her husband Robert of Mashpee, Paul Wahlberg and his wife Donna of Milton, Janice Radzik of Quincy, Rosemary Gilbody and her husband Robert, Captain, Q.F.D. of Quincy, Eugene Wahlberg and his wife Susan of Weymouth, Daniel Wahlberg and his wife Kelly of Milton, the late Karen Wahlberg, the late John Wahlberg, and the late Robert F. He was born in Boston in 1925 to Thomas Curtis and Alice Callahan. He spent his early years in Quincy and attended Quincy High School. He was a veteran of the United States Army Air Corps during World War II and was stationed in England.

He was married for 66 years to Margaret (Peggy) Reinhalter also of Quincy, who passed away in 2014. Together they raised nine children in Weymouth and Scituate. He is survived by Stephen and his wife Patricia Connolly of Stuart, FL, Kevin and his wife Jym-Ann of Braintree, Karen Hartigan and her husband Gerard of Sudbury, Susan Gile and her husband John of Denver, CO, Lauren McCarthy and her husband Peter of Scituate, Robin Christensen of Marietta, GA, Glenn and his wife Elizabeth of Hampton, NY and Marilyn Gordian and her husband Michael of Wake Forest, NC and the late Shawn Curtis of Rockland, ME. He is also survived by 15 grandchildren and 8 great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by his siblings Mary Berlo, Thomas, Richard and Alan Curtis, Jean Barrett and Dorothy Kelley. He is also survived by several cousins and many nieces and nephews.

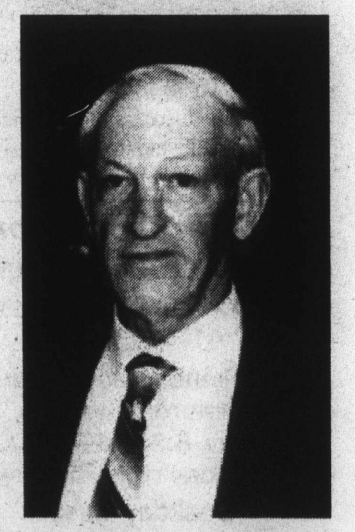

Mr. Curtis had a very successful career as a co-owner of Curtis Farms Supermarkets and Curtis Liquors with his brothers Tom, Dick and Alan. He was also a former president of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce.

Upon his retirement he moved to Florida, where he was a longtime member of Jonathan's Landing Golf Club. His summer months were spent in Scituate where he was a member of Hatherly Golf Club. Besides golf, Mr. Curtis was an avid card playing enthusiast as well as having a passion for painting. He also had a love of horse racing and reveled in being part owner of two successful race horses, Falerno and Shrike.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan Funeral Home, East Milton Square.

Memorial donations may be made to Catholic Charities of the Boston Diocese or JL Cares of Jonathan's Landing in Jupiter, Florida.

Michael McDonagh, 72

MICHAEL McDONAGH

A funeral Mass for Michael McDonagh, age 72, of Quincy, originally from Rinn Carraroe, Galway, Ireland, was celebrated Monday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. McDonagh died suddenly June 29.

The beloved son of the late Colman and Bridie (Lydon) McDonagh. Loving brother of Colman McDonagh of Hingham, Patrick McDonagh of Weymouth, Thomas McDonagh of Everett, Bridie Quigley of Stoneham, Judy Conneely of Invern, Ireland and the late Mary Officer. He is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Mr. McDonagh was a talented carpenter, a member of local 33 for more than 35 years; he retired back in 2008. He enjoyed fishing in his free time.

What was most important to Mr. McDonagh was his family and his faith. They were the foundation of what was truly important in his life. Mr. McDonagh will be remembered as a kind and gracious gentleman, who was devoted to his family. Although they are broken hearted at his sudden passing, they feel blessed to have had Mr. McDonagh in their lives. He will be sadly missed.

Interment at Calvary Cemetery, Winchester.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Richard E. Shea, Jr., 79

Memorial services for Richard Edward Shea, Jr., age 79, of Moorestown, N.J., formerly of Quincy, will be privately held at a future date.

Mr. Shea died suddenly on June 30 at Jefferson Health Hospital in Cherry Hill, N.J.

Eldest son of the late Richard Sr. and Katherine (née Broderick) Shea. Beloved husband of Linda Lechthaler. Father of John Welch and his wife Pamela. Grandfather of Jack Welch. Brother of Grace Barr and her husband John, Joseph Shea, former Quincy city clerk, and his wife Josephine, and Mary Louise and her husband Jim Neal. He is also survived by many nieces,

Mr. Shea was a 1956 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree and Miss Farmers School of Cookery in Boston. He was initially a U.S. postal worker before discovering the alluring and nomadic ways of thoroughbred horse racing. Mr. Shea was, for many years, self-employed as a jockey agent and worked at countless tracks across the country, most recently Philadelphia Park, aka Parx. Everyone on the backside knew "Dixie" Shea.

Well liked and respected, Mr. Shea was one of those rare and fortunate individuals who loved his work. Everyone was enriched by his companionship. He will be sorely missed.

Memorial donations may be made to the National Kidney Foundation or the Permanently Disabled Jockeys Fund.

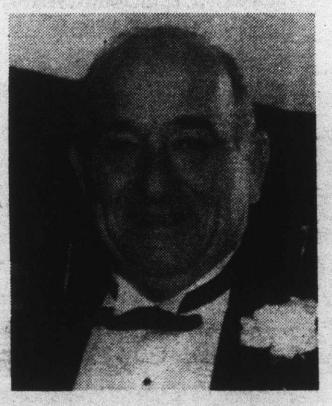

James F. Mattie, 87

Memorial services for James F. Mattie, age 87, a lifelong Braintree resident, were held Wednesday in Old South Union Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Mattie died peacefully June 22 at South Shore Hospital, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Quincy to the late James F. and Rita (Vergobbi) Mattie. He was raised in Braintree on his family's Penn's Hill dairy farm and was educated in Braintree schools and was a graduate of Braintree High School, Class of 1949. He had lived in Braintree all his life and also enjoyed frequent visits to his home in West Palm Beach, Florida for many years.

Mr. Mattie was employed as a machinist at the former Boston Gear Works in Quincy for thirty-five years. He was also the well-known owner and operator of the Delmat Sealcoating Company of

JAMES F. MATTIE

Braintree for over forty years, retiring in 2015.

He enjoyed reading and was an avid Boston sports fan. He was an active member of the Adams Heights Men's Club in Quincy for many years where he made many friendships and enjoyed the camaraderie of the club.

Mr. Mattie was devoted to his family and especially to his cherished grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved husband for sixty-five years of Mary A. (Volpe) Mattie. Devoted father of Lisa Cataldo of Braintree, James F. "Jay" Mattie, III and his wife Susan of Foxboro and Centerville, the late Michelle Mattie and her husband Jeffrey Sealander of East Hampton and the late Brian A. Mattie. Loving grandfather of Dominic, Angela, Christopher, Jillian and Alexander.

Mr. Mattie was the oldest of four siblings and was predeceased by Anita Savino and twin brothers, Richard and Robert Mattie. He is also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Pastor Jennifer Barrett Siegal officiated the service.

Private interment.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Old South Union Church, 25 Columbian St., Weymouth, MA 02190.

Reno L. Giudici, 89

Funeral services for Reno L. Giudici, age 89, a lifelong Quincy resident, were held Wednesday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. Giudici died peacefully Sunday surrounded by his loving family, after a long period of declining health.

He was born in Quincy to the late Antonio and Chiara (Peodi) Giudici. He was raised and educated in Quincy and was a graduate of Quincy High School, where he met his high school sweetheart, Barbara.

Mr. Giudici began his career working at the former Fore River Shipyard, first with the Bethlehem Steel Company and later, General Dynamics. He was also a self-employed contractor, operating Reno Giudici Builder for over twenty-five years.

He was a longtime member of the Adams Heights Men's Club of Quincy where he often played cards and shuffleboard, and participated in the bowling league. Mr. Giudici enjoyed the camaraderie of the club.

He took pride working around his home and tending to his vegetable garden, fruit trees, and flower plants. Mr. Giudici was a hard-working man who was devoted to his family.

Beloved husband for sixty-seven years of the late Barbara R. (Sinclair) Giudici. Devoted father of John F. Giudici and his wife Jayne of Westwood, Donna R. Giudici of Quincy, and Stephen L. Giudici and his wife Susan of Quincy. Loving grandfather of Jessica Hill, Jeffrey Giudici, Joshua Giudici, Shaun Giudici, and Sarah Giudici. Cherished great-grandfather of six great-grandchildren. Mr. Giudici was the last of seven siblings and is survived by several nieces and nephews.

The Rev. Clifford R. Brown, Rector of Christ Church Quincy, officiated the services.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of your choice.

Walter J. Hannon, Sr., 86

A funeral Mass for Walter J. Hannon, Sr. of Quincy and Kennebunkport, Maine, will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. Friday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Hannon died July 7 in Maine.

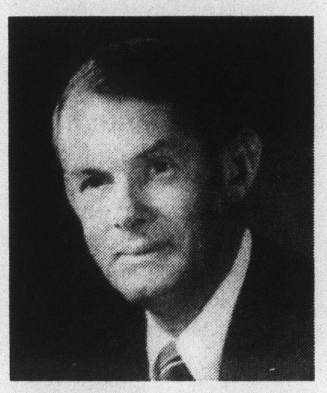

He was born on Sept. 4, 1931, to Walter and Helen Hannon. He grew up in the Houghs Neck section of Quincy where he lived until 1945 when he moved with his family to Wollaston.

Mr. Hannon graduated from North Quincy High School in 1949. While in high school he was an outstanding hockey player and if asked what his favorite subjects were, he would reply, "shop, gym and lunch."

In 1951, Mr. Hannon met Patsy Tully. They married in 1953 and this was the beginning of a 64-year romance filled with love, laughter and kindness. That same year, upon his father's death, Mr. Hannon assumed control of his family business, the Hannon Tire Company.

Mr. Hannon served as Ward 5 City councillor from 1964 to 1971, and as a state representative from 1967 to 1973. He was elected mayor of Quincy in 1972 serving until 1975.

He spent years in Quincy politics pushing to make Quincy a model city. His work as mayor lead the ground work for Quincy's economic development today.

WALTER J. HANNON, SR.

In 1979, Mr. Hannon was named director of development by Marina Industries to direct the master planning of Marina Bay in Squantum. In 1996, he went to work for the Marina Bay Corporation to oversee the Granite Links Project, a reclamation of a quarry into a first-class golf course and restaurant. Some doubted this would happen, but Mr. Hannon never did.

For all of his accomplishments his greatest loves were his wife, children and grandchildren the true essence of what he was.

Mr. Hannon enjoyed walks on Gooch's beach with Patsy, as well as large family dinners at his cherished home in Kennebunkport. Together they attended every event that their children and grandchildren were involved in. A favorite was his Annual Christmas Girls Night out when he and Patsy took their five granddaughters into Boston for a special evening. He loved playing golf with his sons and grandsons at Webhannet Golf Club in Kennebunk, Maine. He was the best dad and Da a child could ever ask for.

Mr. Hannon was the loving husband of the late Patricia Tully Hannon. Loving father of Elizabeth A. Hannon, Susan Hannon Esielonis and husband Steven, Walter J. Hannon and his wife Kelley, Thomas A. Hannon and his wife Sheila, Patricia Hannon Pattison and her husband Robert. Wonderful and loving grandfather to Jessica, Hannon, Brianna Hannon, Alexandra Esielonis, Julia Hannon, Tucker Hannon, Walt Hannon, Teddy Hannon, Cameron Pattison, Reese Tully Pattison and Lincoln Pattison. Brother to the late Helen Scalera, Sr. Phyllis Hannon and Sarah Hannon Wentworth. He also leaves behind his daughter-in-law, Krisanne Godfrey, cousins, dear friends and his wonderful caretakers Nancy Sayers, Julie Keaney and Sarah Dempsey.

Visiting hours are 3 to 8 p.m. Thursday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held in the funeral home at 9:45 a.m. Friday.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Home For Little Wanders, 10 Guest St., Boston, MA 02135.

Joseph D. Luchini, 57

A funeral Mass for Joseph D. Luchini, 57, of Franklin, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Jude Church, Norfolk.

Mr. Luchini died suddenly July 3 at Milford Regional Medical Center.

He was the beloved husband of Regina M. (Brooks) Luchini, with whom he shared 28 years of marriage.

Born Jan. 12, 1961, in Quincy, a son of Elaine M. (Colella) Luchini of Quincy and the late Guido L. Luchini, Quincy Police Department, he was a former resident of Quincy before moving to Franklin 29 years ago.

Mr. Luchini was raised and educated in Quincy and was a graduate of Northeastern University, where he received his BSEE and MBA. He was working for Eversource as vice president, substation operations and field engineering/communications.

His passion in life was his family; Mr. Luchini was devoted to his wife and girls. He enjoyed fishing, boating, football, hockey, spending time in Wareham and anything to do with cars and trucks.

In addition to his wife and mother, he is survived by 2 daughters, Christina M. Luchini and Elizabeth A. Luchini both of Franklin, a brother John F. Luchini and his wife Elaine R. (Cohen) Luchini of Quincy, a nephew Donald F. Luchini and numerous extended family members and friends.

Interment at St. Mary's Cemetery, Franklin.

Memorial donations may be made to Eversource Walk for Kids c/o Boston Children's Hospital, Boston Children's Hospital Trust, 401 Park Drive Suite 602, Boston, MA 02215.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Charles F. Oteri and Son Franklin Funeral Home.

Marjorie A. Crowley, 86

A funeral Mass for Marjorie A. Crowley, 86, of Quincy and formerly of Milton, was celebrated Monday in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Ms. Crowley died July 4.

Born in Boston, she was a daughter of the late Henry P. and Elizabeth A. (Walsh) Crowley, and stepdaughter of the late Virginia M. Barry. Sister of Howard F. Crowley of Quincy, Patricia A. Calberg of Pembroke, and the late Miriam E. Burbank and Paul H. Crowley. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Ms. Crowley was raised in North Quincy, and was a 1949 graduate of North Quincy High School, and then went on to earn her Bachelor's Degree from Northeastern University. She worked for John Hancock for 44 years, first as a secretary and later as a service representative in the Defined Benefits Department. She was a devoted Catholic, and spent all of her years in Milton as an active member of St. Agatha Parish.

Ms. Crowley truly enjoyed helping others as evidenced by her tenure at John Hancock, as a Milton Town Meeting member, as a SHINE advisor, and especially by her love and support shown to her family.

Interment at Milton Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 309 Waverley Oaks Rd., Waltham, MA 02452, or by visiting alz.org.

Blood Drives Here July 17, July 23

An emergency blood shortage is prompting the American Red Cross to issue an urgent call for eligible donors of all blood types – especially type O – to give now and help save lives.

The need is especially critical for type O blood donors. Type O is the most in-demand blood type and often the first to be depleted from hospital shelves during a shortage. Type O negative is the universal blood type and what emergency room personnel reach for when there is no time to determine the blood type of patients in the most serious situations. Type O positive is the most common blood type and can be transfused to Rh-positive patients of any blood type.

To schedule an appointment to donate, use the free Red Cross Blood Donor App; visit RedCrossBlood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). The Red Cross has added about 6,500 additional appointment slots at donation centers and community blood drives across the country over the next few weeks to accommodate more donors. Donation appointments and completion of a RapidPass online health history questionnaire are encouraged to help reduce the time it takes to donate.

There are two blood drives scheduled this month in Quincy.

The first will be held Tuesday, July 17 from 2 to 8 p.m. at Saint Thomas Aquinas Hall, 2 Darrow St.

The second is set for Monday, July 23 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Hall, 120 Quarry St.

jewel for the city.

In addition, Mayor Hannon sponsored the home rule petition that created the Department of Natural Resources on Oct. 3, 1974. He also led the way in the purchase of Squaw Rock from the City of Boston and directed many improvements at Faxon Park. He was a member of the team that developed West Quincy Quarries into the world-class Granite Links Golf Course and recreational facility.

It was during Hannon's mayoral term that a community pool was built at the Lincoln-Hancock School.

Joseph Shea, retired city clerk and now a Norfolk County commissioner, served as Mayor Hannon's executive secretary. The two first met when Shea was the president of the Quincy Young Democrats. Hannon, at the time, was a Republican who later switched to the Democratic Party.

Shea said Mayor Hannon had a penchant for quick decision-making. Some of those decisions – such as support for expanding the Red Line to South Quincy that was opposed by many in the city – helped position the Quincy for future growth which it is reaping today.

"I think he's left a big mark on the city," Shea said. "To be with him every day and go to events with him he was very quick. He could make up his mind when others may have hesitated."

Shea said Mr. Hannon was keen to see the impact the South Shore Plaza would have on downtown Quincy's retail sector, once heralded as "Shopperstown, U.S.A." As those retailers migrated from the square to the shopping malls, Mayor Hannon focused on other economic development in Quincy including State Street South.

"He knew that the South Shore Plaza put the square at number two for shopping and he foresaw what was happening and put some things in place for future development," Shea said.

"I think a lot of what you see today gets attributed to Walter and others of course. He was so forceful in his decisions, particularly with the MBTA which was not always a popular decision you could make but he somehow – whether it was his training or his time in the legislature that he realized that if Quincy were to grow and reach its potential as we see now in the 2000s, some of those tough decisions had to be made," Shea added.

Later, after leaving the mayor's office, Mr. Hannon served as planning director for Mayor Arthur Tobin.

George Burke, who held the Ward 5 seat before Hannon, called his longtime friend a great man.

"We have been close friends for many years – more than 50 years," Burke said. "I loved him. He was a great man, a great mayor, a great state representative, and a great city councillor.

"He gave his life to the city of Quincy," Burke said. "He was dedicated and always out in front trying to do the best for the city."

In 2013, Mr. Hannon and McCauley held a small celebration marking the 50th anniversary of their first political wins at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. Each began their political careers on Nov. 5, 1963. McCauley was elected Ward 1 councillor and Mr. Hannon won the Ward 5 council seat. Each would eventually be elected mayor: Hannon eight years later (1971) and McCauley 18 years later (1981).

The pair reminisced about their careers in public service in a "Son Beams" feature in The Quincy Sun on Nov. 7, 2013.

"You could sit down and write a book about all the memories," Walter said at the time. "But there were a lot of hard decisions. We (the City Council) took 56 houses (by eminent domain) on Upland Road one night to make way for the Red Line. I was the chairman of the committee and the place was packed. After we voted, I walked out and felt terrible."

Mr. Hannon also recalled the humorous side of politics.

In 1971, when Hannon was running for mayor, McCauley was on the ballot for school committee. One of McCauley's campaign supporters had a "Hannon for Mayor" sign on the roof of his car.

They stopped to do some canvassing in Montclair. Walter was not too popular in this area of Quincy because of his support for the State Street South development. Many in the neighborhood were against the project that – after it was built – would employ hundreds (including many Quincy residents) and be the city's largest taxpayer for years to come.

"The people were coming out of the houses and they were screaming to get that car out of here. I came in dead last in Montclair," noted Frank – who still won one of the three school seats in that election. "I guess it was guilt by association," he said as the two chuckled.

Then there was one particular snowstorm during Walter's mayoral term.

He was out on a snowplow during the storm on a Saturday night. He got to bed at 2 a.m. and then the phone rang a short time later waking him up. A guy called and asked, "when are you going to plow my street?"

Walter took his name and phone number and he called DPW Commissioner Pete Ricciuiti. There was a plow in the area and they cleared the street.

Walter set his alarm for 4 a.m. and called the guy back, waking him up.

"Hey Charlie, this is Walter Hannon. I just want to let you know your street's been plowed."

"Oh," the guy said. "I was asleep."

"Oh yeah, I was asleep at 2:30 a.m. when you called me," Walter says back to him. "I'm sorry to bother you but we have your street cleared curb-to-curb. You're all set.

"And the guy says, 'Gee, did you have to call me?'

"And I said, 'Well, you woke me.'"

Mr. Hannon did not attend college instead going into the family's tire business. After his father passed away, Walter ran the business.

He was an avid reader especially enjoying political books. He served as a delegate at the Republican Presidential Convention in 1964 that nominated Barry Goldwater for president.

"I became a Republican in 1952 because of President Eisenhower," Mr. Hannon recalled in that interview. "If you read the life of these guys you learn how they made decisions. I liked politics and that's why I got into it. I thoroughly enjoyed it. And I met some wonderful, wonderful people."

Mr. Hannon was not successful in his first attempt for public office. He lost a bid for state representative in 1962 but his high vote total in Ward 5 encouraged him to run for the ward seat the following year. He defeated George Smith (4,171 to 2,578 votes) to win the Ward 5 seat in 1963.

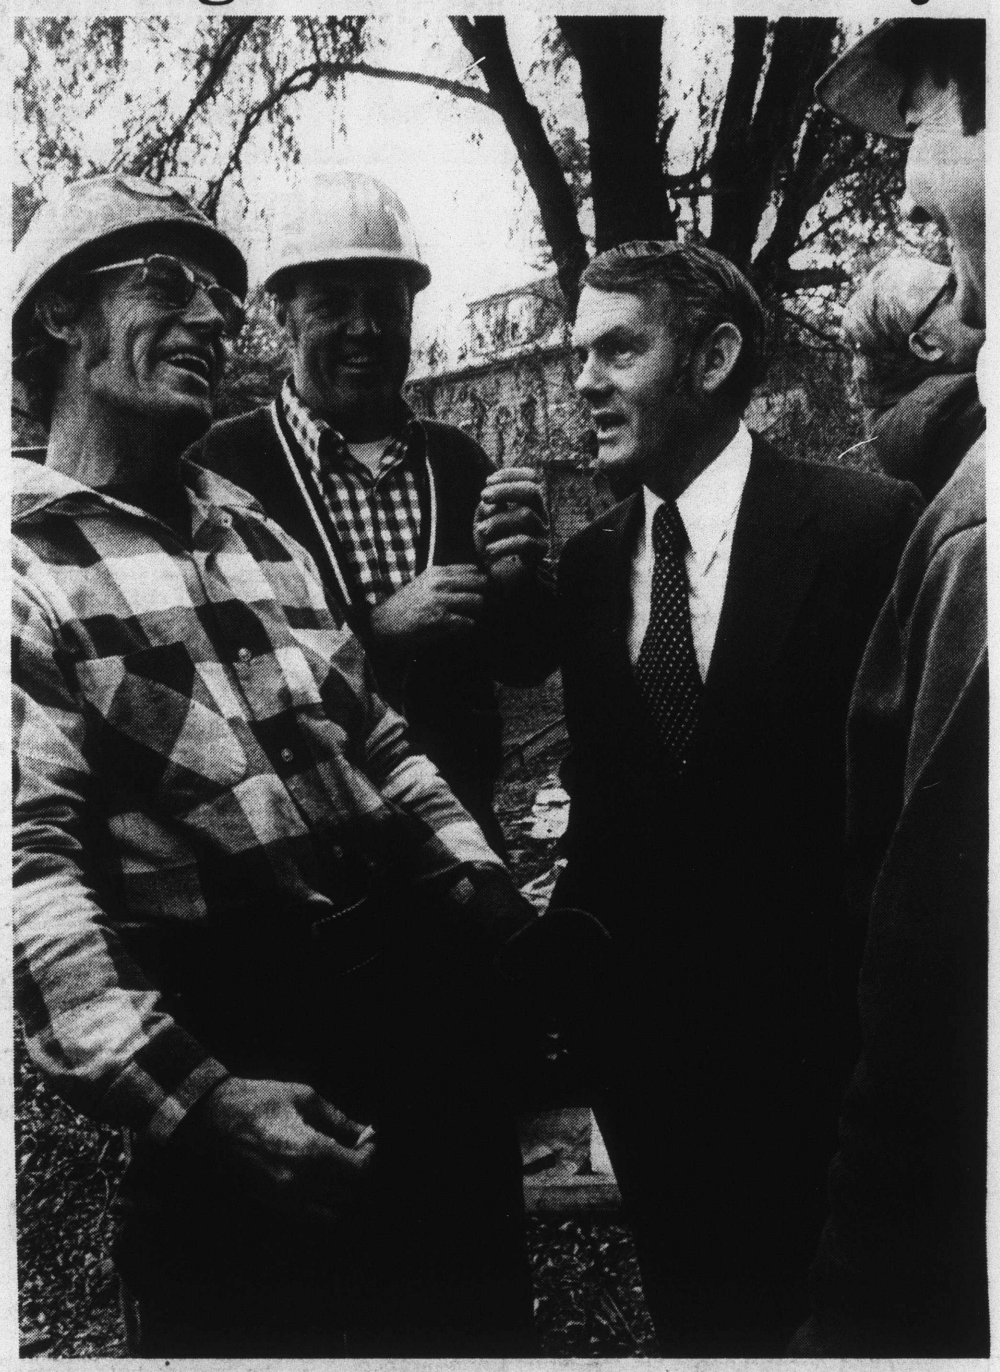

That was Mr. Hannon's first win at the ballot box.

But one could say he cut his political teeth with a hockey stick in his hands.

In 1947, Walter was a sophomore at NQHS. The school's hockey program – which began in 1939 – had disbanded because of World War II.

Walter and two of his hockey pals, including the late Fordie Pitts who became a tremendous golfer, appeared before the School Committee. The trio successfully lobbied the board to re-establish hockey as a varsity sport at North.

"We simply said we wanted hockey to be a major sport at North – just like football and baseball," Hannon recalled in a January, 2012 interview.

Soon, the program was back on the ice and Hannon and his teammates were competing against other high schools including Milton, Hingham, Canton and Walpole.

Hannon was among the first group of inductees into the newly established NQHS Hockey Hall of Fame in 2012.

"It means a lot to me," said Hannon, who arrived at the Sun office with his old NQHS hockey sweater. He also kept his skates and the varsity letter he earned as a member of the skating Red Raiders.

"I think back to all the guys I played hockey with and went to school with. I never missed a day of high school and I loved going to North Quincy High School."

In recent years, Mr. Hannon was a key member of the management team at Granite Links.

Visiting hours for former Mayor Walter Hannon will be today (Thursday) from 3 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Friday at 10:30 a.m. at Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Burial will be in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your zeal for challenges usually works well for you. But this week it's best to avoid jumping into new situations without more information. Vital news emerges by the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's patience pays off as that pesky problem works itself out without taking too much of your valuable time. A new task opens interesting possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those suggestions you want to share need to be set aside for a while so you can focus on the job at hand. There'll be time later to put your ideas into a workable format.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be sure about your sources before you use the information in any decision you reach about your new project. Some of the data might be out of date or misinterpreted.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden challenge might rattle you at first. But pump up that strong Lion's heart with a full measure of courage, and face it with the continuing support of family and friends.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Watch your expenses this week so you can have a financial cushion to fall back on should things tighten up later this month. Money matters ease by the 1st.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncertainty over workplace policy creates anxiety and confusion among your colleagues. Don't be surprised if you're asked, once again, to help work things out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The workweek keeps you busy tying up loose ends and checking data that needs to be verified. The weekend offers a chance to relax and restore your spent energies.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is not the best time to go to extremes to prove a point. Better to set a sensible goal now and move forward. There'll be time later to take the bolder course.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A step-by-step progression is the better way to move ahead. Taking shortcuts could be risky at this time. Important news arrives on the 1st.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid getting drawn into workplace disputes that should be handled by those directly involved. Instead, spend your energy developing those new ideas.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You still need to be prudent about money matters. But things start to ease by the end of the week. A weekend encounter with an old friend brings welcome news.

BORN THIS WEEK: You handle challenging situations with boldness when necessary and caution when called for.

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- George Clooney took time away from preparing to direct the sci-fi thriller "Echo" to set up a $100,000 donation, with his wife, Amal, and The Clooney Foundation, for the Young Center for Immigrant Children's Rights. The organization helps protect and promote the best interests of immigrant children in the United States who've been separated from their families.

Meanwhile, Fox series star and creator of "The Orville," Seth McFarland, has donated $2.5 million to National Public Radio and its Los Angeles station, KPCC, after Fox News host Tucker Carlson's suggestion that viewers not watch any media besides Fox News. McFarland said it's like they're saying, "Don't think critically, don't consult multiple news sources and in general don't use your brain!" Fox TV isn't thrilled with his opinion or generosity.

"Saturday Night Live" alum Kristen Wiig had to bow out of the proposed half-hour Apple comedy series based on the book "You Think it, I'll Say It" because of a conflict with the "Wonder Woman 1984" sequel. Reese Witherspoon's company Hello Sunshine, which is producing the Apple series, will have to find a replacement for Wiig. Hello Sunshine is currently preparing "Are You Sleeping," with Oscar-winner Octavia Spencer, and a morning-show drama starring Reese and Jennifer Aniston.

Paramount Pictures is preparing a biography film about Sammy Davis, Jr. based on his 1965 memoir, "Yes, I Can." Davis was a member of Frank Sinatra's Rat Pack along with Dean Martin, Peter Lawford and Joey Bishop, who all starred in the original "Ocean's 11" and several other films.

It's a good thing Jennifer Lopez has her hit Las Vegas show and the successful NBC show "World of Dance" to fall back on, given that the second season of her series "Shades of Blue" is being killed in the ratings by ABC's game shows. If ratings don't improve it will be headed for the chopping block.

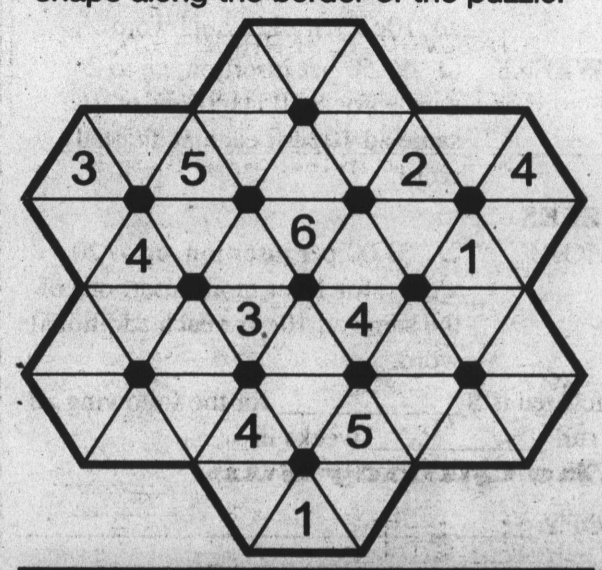

Because of the initial success of "Roseanne" (before Roseanne screwed it up), Fran Dresher is planning a reboot of "The Nanny" (1993-1999). The show has proven to be pure gold in syndication with a loyal following.

Chris Hardwick, host of NBC's high-rated game show "The Wall," is the latest male celebrity caught in the "Me Too" web. Allegations by Chloe Dykstra, who claims Hardwick sexually abused her during their three-year relationship, has caused AMC to pull his talk show, and he'll no longer be moderating the panel at the San Diego Comic-Con in July. NBC is currently "assessing" his position as host of "The Wall," which goes back into production in September. Even though Hardwick denies all charges, his protestations of innocence also have hit a "WALL!"

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting
By Terry and Kim Kovel

Adirondack Style --- The Adirondack style started with a chair in 1903. Many wealthy folks from the East Coast wanted a cool place to live for the summer, so they started building homes in the Adirondack mountain area. Thomas Lee was vacationing in Adirondack town of Westport, New York, and he wanted comfortable outdoor chairs for his house. He made the chair from 11 pieces of wood and finally decided on the reclining chair with wide armrests now known as the Adirondack or Westport chair. Lee had a local carpenter friend named Harry Bunnell, who made the chairs to sell. Bunnell patented the design in 1905. Lee never received any of the profits.

The houses in the Adirondacks led to other pieces of furniture that were made of local wood, twigs and carving as decoration. The style was very much like Western or Rustic style today. It originally was all handmade of local wood by nearby carpenters. Sometimes there was added paint, or cut-out and applied figures like stars or animal profiles. Pieces are heavy-looking and since they are made of logs, they are heavy to move.

An Adirondack bookcase on chest was in a Skinner auction and sold for $6,150. It had carved diagonal lines on the trim around the two lower cabinet doors, two upper glass doors, plus a decorated center on each cabinet door and some applied burl decoration. Inside are three drawers and two shelves. It's definitely homemade and one of a kind.

Q: Can these be sold? I have a pair of Royal Purple nylons, with back seam, in their original box. It reads "10 1/2 style 704/4 nutria 1/4" on the end of the box. Are they of value, or should I just give them away?

A: Collectors of vintage clothing are interested in vintage stockings. Royal Purple was a trademark of Sears & Roebuck. Silk stockings were fashionable until nylon was invented. Nylon stockings were introduced at the 1939 New York World's Fair and were first sold in 1940. Stockings went out of fashion when pantyhose became popular in the 1960s. Royal Purple stockings have sold online for $6 to $35 a pair. The empty box has sold for $4.50.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was American astronomer, astrophysicist and author Carl Sagan who made the following sage observation: "The fact that some geniuses were laughed at does not imply that all who are laughed at are geniuses. They laughed at Columbus, they laughed at Fulton, they laughed at the Wright brothers. But they also laughed at Bozo the Clown."
* It's not clear why lawmakers in the state of Alabama once thought it necessary to pass a law forbidding the operation of a vehicle while wearing a blindfold.
* Though coffee has been around for about 700 years, instant coffee wasn't invented until 1906. By George Washington. Of course not [SET ITAL] that[END ITAL] George Washington. The man who made coffee more convenient -- and less palatable -- was from Belgium.
* There seems to be quite a rivalry between the towns of Rosehill, North Carolina, and Wilmington, Delaware. Both locales claim to be the home of the world's largest frying pan, with a diameter of 10 feet. This begs some questions, of course: How many eggs are being fried at once to require such a large piece of cookware? And what sort of stove is required to heat such a mammoth pan?
* Those who study such things say that 70 percent of southern Nevada's water use goes through the sprinklers for golf courses and lawns in Las Vegas.
* It's not surprising that the word "fondue" comes from the French verb "fondre," which means "to melt."
* Do you know anyone who is xanthodontous? If so, you might want to refer them to someone specializing in cosmetic dentistry. "Xanthodontous" means "having yellow teeth."

Now here's a tip!
by Jo Ann Derson

* Summer kids tip: Create an "I'm Bored" jar with ideas about things to do. Now when that phrase inevitably comes up, you'll be ready with a quick solution.
* This tip takes the pain out of a task nobody likes: dusting the blinds! Use a set of salad tongs for a blinds duster; just wrap a microfiber cloth around each of the tongs and secure it with a rubber band or two. Then use the tongs to grab and glide along each blind. Even kids can get behind this dusting job.
* "Tacos are a favorite meal in our house, but very messy -- until we discovered a great use for coffee filters. We use a filter to hold the taco and peel back the paper as we eat. Now nothing drips out or falls out, even if the shell cracks!" -- E.B. in Oregon
* "We like juice at home, and the kind we like has a large mouth on the bottle. It turns out that after we finish the juice, the bottle makes a great storage container for snacks. We clean and dry it, then fill it with cereals or dry pasta. We've even used them for popcorn." -- R.K. in Missouri
* Recipe substitution: For 1 cup of tomato juice, use 1/2 cup of tomato sauce plus 1/2 cup of water.
* If you have dry, cracked heels from wearing flip-flops and sandals too often, apply a layer of petroleum jelly to your feet before bed and cover with socks. If you can't sleep with socks, do this in the evening, maybe while watching TV. It will soften the hard skin after a week or so -- sooner depending on how dry your feet are.

EXPERIENCE QUINCY'S NATIONAL TREASURES!

A walk through Quincy Center takes you on a voyage through time from the earliest colonial days, to the era of the Adams, Quincy, and Hancock families, and to Quincy's decades as the national center of granite quarrying and building. Adams and Hancock Streets in Quincy Center are part of one of the oldest roads in America. A path cut by Native Americans untold centuries ago, it became, in earliest colonial times, the road from Boston to Plymouth and remained in John Adams' time the main road south of Boston. In walking along this route, you are truly walking in the footsteps of John and Abigail Adams.

That's A Good Kid!

9-Year-Old Gracie Warren Profiles Youth Doing Good Deeds In The Quincy Sun

By GRACIE WARREN

Hello, Quincy citizens. My name is Grace Warren and I am a 9-year-old Quincy resident. I had an idea to write an article in The Quincy Sun each week about a young person doing good for the community. I wrote a letter to the editor, Bob Bosworth, and he loved my idea.

This week, I want to tell you about Mollie Coyne, a 16-year old student with a lifelong love of animals, specifically dogs. In the spring of 2011, when Mollie was 9 years old, she attended a Dog Fest in East Bridgewater, an event sponsored by MA Vest-A-Dog. After speaking to the president of the organization, she decided to host a fundraiser for MA Vest-A-Dog at her next birthday party, the following January.

"I thought it was a really cool organization and I wanted to help them out," Mollie says. She and some friends got together for her party at the local YMCA. In lieu of presents, Mollie asked her friends to make a donation to MA Vest-A-Dog.

Koch: Agreement On L.I. Bridge Not Forthcoming

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch has spoken to his counterpart in Boston about the plan to rebuild the Long Island Bridge, but does not believe the two communities will come an agreement to end their row over the proposal.

Koch discussed the bridge in a recent interview among other topics, including the upcoming opening of the Independence Avenue gate to the Quincy Adams MBTA station and the city's plan to build a new public safety headquarters, animal shelter and dog park.

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh in January announced plans to rebuild the bridge connecting Moon Island to Long Island and place a recovery campus on the latter. Koch and other Quincy officials have been steadfast in their opposition to the plan and have urged Boston to consider ferry service in lieu of the bridge, citing the impact the bridge would have on traffic in Squantum.

Moon Island is only accessible via Squantum. Moon Island is fully owned by Boston, which has police and fire department facili-

Mayor Looking To Honor Late City Historian

By SCOTT JACKSON

The restored arch at the main entrance to Mount Wollaston Cemetery could be dedicated to late city historian Thomas Galvin, who was well known, among other things, for leading tours of the historical burial ground.

Mr. Galvin had given tours of the cemetery for more than a dozen years, sharing his knowledge of the Quincy granite industry and highlighting the final resting places of notable city residents along the way. He died June 22 at the age of 79, and was interred at the cemetery.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who named Mr. Galvin city historian for his efforts to showcase Quincy's history, said he is looking for ways to honor Mr. Galvin. The mayor said one such way would be to dedicate the restored arch on the Sea Street side of the cemetery – which was removed decades ago and could be put back as soon as next year – in memory of Mr. Galvin.

FR Field Inclusive Playground Opens

By TOM GORMAN

Children who have physical handicaps now can join in on the fun at the city's first inclusive playground.

More than 200 people celebrated the opening of the new Fore River Field playground in Quincy Point June 9 during a field day sponsored by the Ward 2 Association. Music by Superfly, inflatable attractions, food, face painting and "Davy the Clown" were part of the celebration.

The playground features equipment that is accessible to the physically and emotionally challenged. It provides inclusion so children with impairments won't be left out.

"Every child, regardless of their physical capability, now has a place to go and interact and play with their peers," said Ward 2 Councilor and City Council President Brad Croall.

He explained that the playground equipment has been designed with adaptable features - such as ramps

City Marks John Quincy Adams' 251st Birthday

By SCOTT JACKSON

John Quincy Adams could have left Quincy following the death of his father, but the sixth president's decision to return to his hometown after leaving the White House propelled him to a seat in Congress, where he would spend the last 17 years of his life.

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, spoke about the time John Quincy Adams spent in Quincy following the death of John Adams during a wreath-laying ceremony commemorating the 251st anniversary of the sixth president's birth on July 11.

The ceremony was held at the United First Parish Church, the final resting place of both the second and sixth president and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams.

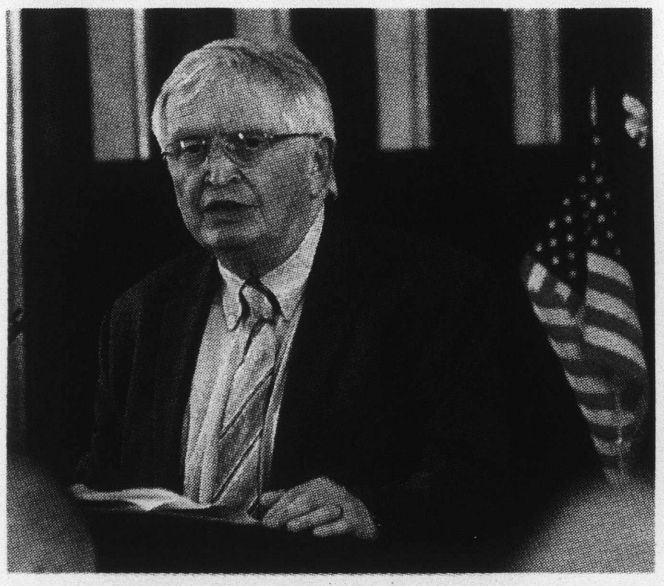

Fitzgerald, the keynote speaker at the ceremony, said John Adams "was truly a product of New England, of Massachusetts and of Quincy," who did not step foot outside the area until serving in the First Continental Congress when he was nearly 40.

The same could not be said of John Quincy Adams, who spent much of his formative years in France and the Netherlands with his father, and would later serve as ambassador to Prussia, Russia and the United Kingdom. When Adams was in the United States, most of his time was spent in Washington, D.C.

"When John Adams dies on July 4, 1826, it not his absolutely inevitable that John Quincy Adams is going to remain in Quincy. There are in fact assorted reasons why he should not do so," Fitzgerald said. "And yet, he chose to stay."

That year – 1826 – "was arguably the worst part" of John Quincy Adams' life, Fitzgerald said, even prior to his father's death. Adams, who was president at the time, was dogged by unjust accusations that a corrupt bargain with Henry Clay put him in the White House over Andrew Jackson, who won

Rosemary Wahlberg Remembered As Pioneer, Passionate Advocate

By SCOTT JACKSON

Community leaders remembered Rosemary C. Wahlberg as a passion advocate and pioneer, and vowed that her legacy of service would continue for years to come.

Mrs. Wahlberg had served as the executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs for 25 years, and remained active on its board of directors following her retirement in 1999. She had also served on the board of commissioners for the Quincy Housing Authority, the board of directors for South Shore Day Care, the board of governors for Quincy College, and as a trustee for Manet Community Health Center and the former Quincy City Hospital.

Mrs. Wahlberg died July 3 at the age of 87.

Beth Ann Strollo, who succeeded Mrs. Wahlberg as QCAP's executive director, called her the matriarch of the community action movement in Massachusetts.

"She was just a passionate advocate for the low-income residents of the city and one of the early leaders of the community action movement in the state and in the nation. She was certainly the matriarch for the movement in Massachusetts," Strollo said. "She also inspired so many men and women to have confidence and helped them grow in so many ways they didn't think possible.

"She knew first-hand what it was like to grow up in a household without much money and took that experience and used it to help so many others."

QCAP honored Mrs. Wahlberg and her husband, Arthur S. "Archie" Wahlberg, in April 2012 when its Head Start building in Quincy Point – located inside the former St. Joseph's School – was named the Rosemary & Archie Wahlberg Early Learning Center.

"She and Archie devoted their lives not just to their family, but the community," Strollo said. "They really were a team."

The Wahlbergs had grown up in Dorchester and moved to Quincy in 1957.

"We certainly learned something about people who were born and bred in Quincy and that is you hardly knew a household that didn't have volunteers," Mrs. Wahlberg said at the 2012 dedication.

"It was a very special place. You could make a difference in this community."

One of Mrs. Wahlberg's early accomplishments was getting the city to adopt a lunch program in its public school system in the 1970s. Strollo said Mrs. Wahlberg advocated for that program

ULTRA VIOLET

Bearing in mind that ultra violet is Pantone's 2018 Color of the Year, gemstones such as amethyst, tanzanite, and violet-blue hues of sapphire are particularly popular. Another gorgeous gemstone at this end of the color wheel is reddish-purple rhodolite, which is commonly referred to as "grape garnet." First discovered in Mozambique in 2015, this gemstone features red that sparkles through the purple. Not only is grape garnet relatively affordable but, unlike most gemstones, these garnets are known to display intense colors in even the smallest sizes. In fact, the magnificent purple color tends to become too oversaturated ("blacked out") in the larger sizes.

Rubies, sapphires, diamonds, and emeralds may first come to mind when naming beautiful gemstones, but don't overlook the other equally entrancing colored gems of the world when adding to your jewelry treasures or choosing something unique for a special friend. We feel it's important that if you don't know jewelry, be sure to know your jeweler. That way, you can be assured of knowledgeable, experienced counsel when planning to make an investment in fine jewelry. THE MOUNT WOLLASTON cemetery gate was designed by Luther Briggs, a noted architect who designed many gothic buildings as well as this gothic style gate. City officials plan to restore the arch at the cemetery and could dedicate it in memory of the late Thomas Galvin, the city's longtime historian who passed away June 22 at the age of 79. The original gate was built in 1855 when the cemetery opened. It was dismantled in 1960.

"I've been trying to think that through in my head, what would be most appropriate for Tom. Obviously he is buried in Mount Wollaston. I think maybe we add him to the historic tour, for one," Koch said.

"Two is – what I was thinking, and we have a long way to go, you may or may not know but we're repaving all the streets in the cemetery, which is being paid for by perpetual care money…it's money that has to be used there. We did all the water fountains over. The last phase is probably going to be next year with restoring the gate, which is something that he and I spent some time on.

"So perhaps the restoration of the gate could be in his honor or something. Maybe we can put that in one of the granite pieces."

Koch was asked if he would consider renaming one of the streets inside the cemetery in memory of Mr. Galvin, but the mayor said that is something Mr. Galvin – who was chairman of Quincy's Cemetery Board of Managers – would not have wanted.

"If that were him on the board he would say, 'don't touch the streets.' He was instrumental in getting the street signs all redone and they're all connected to trees and shrubbery in the cemetery," the mayor said.

"I think there is a way we will be able to honor him. I just want to flesh it out a little bit first."

Koch said plans are still being made for the installation of the new arch. One possibility includes using it for a pedestrian entrance.

"We were even talking about putting bollards there and having the road go around it and let people walk through the gate. One of the reasons this gate was taken down was the trucks – the size of the trucks – were going to be hitting the archway, which was unfortunate," Koch said.

Mollie said she was amazed when she raised $500 for the organization, which went towards providing supplies to the Wareham PD K9 Cruiser. The following year, for her 11th birthday, Mollie raised $1,100, which provided a vest for a MA State Police dog.

As the news of Mollie's yearly birthday fundraiser spread, more people became interested and Mollie's parents began renting a hall each year for this event. Every year since Mollie turned 12, over 300 people attend Mollie's fundraiser, and she has raised over $45,000 for MA Vest-A-Dog, "an all-volunteer non-profit whose mission since 2000 has been to support MA police dogs, helping provide K9 ballistic vests, essential K9 equipment and funding training and dogs for police dogs in Massachusetts law enforcement."

WOW!! Next year, she hopes to raise $15,000.

"I never thought it was going to turn into this giant thing," Mollie says. She is very shy when she meets new people, but this hasn't stopped her from continuing her great work. She doesn't know half the people who attend her March parties, but says, "they know who I am!"

Mollie's fundraisers have helped many area police departments, and have been essential advertising for MA Vest-A-Dog. She and her family have become close to quite a few of the K-9 officers from across the state.

Mollie's mother Stacey says, "Everyone thinks she's amazing, she has inspired a lot of people." In fact, one young girl from Middleborough recently contacted Mollie to find out more about doing her own fundraiser, which in turn raised money for the Taunton K-9 Unit. Most police K-9 units are funded by grants or budgetary stipends which provide "food and care" only for the dogs, but anything above and beyond that is donated by MA Vest-A-Dog. Mollie hopes to someday be on the board of MA Vest-A-Dog and have a service dog of her own.

Quincy Veterans Services, Morrisette Post Replace Tattered Flag At Quincy Nursing Home

Quincy Veterans Services, in conjunction with the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post #294 and Squadron #294, Sons of the American Legion, recently worked together to perform the proper replacement of a tattered flag from the Quincy Rehabilitation Center and Nursing Home on McGrath Highway.

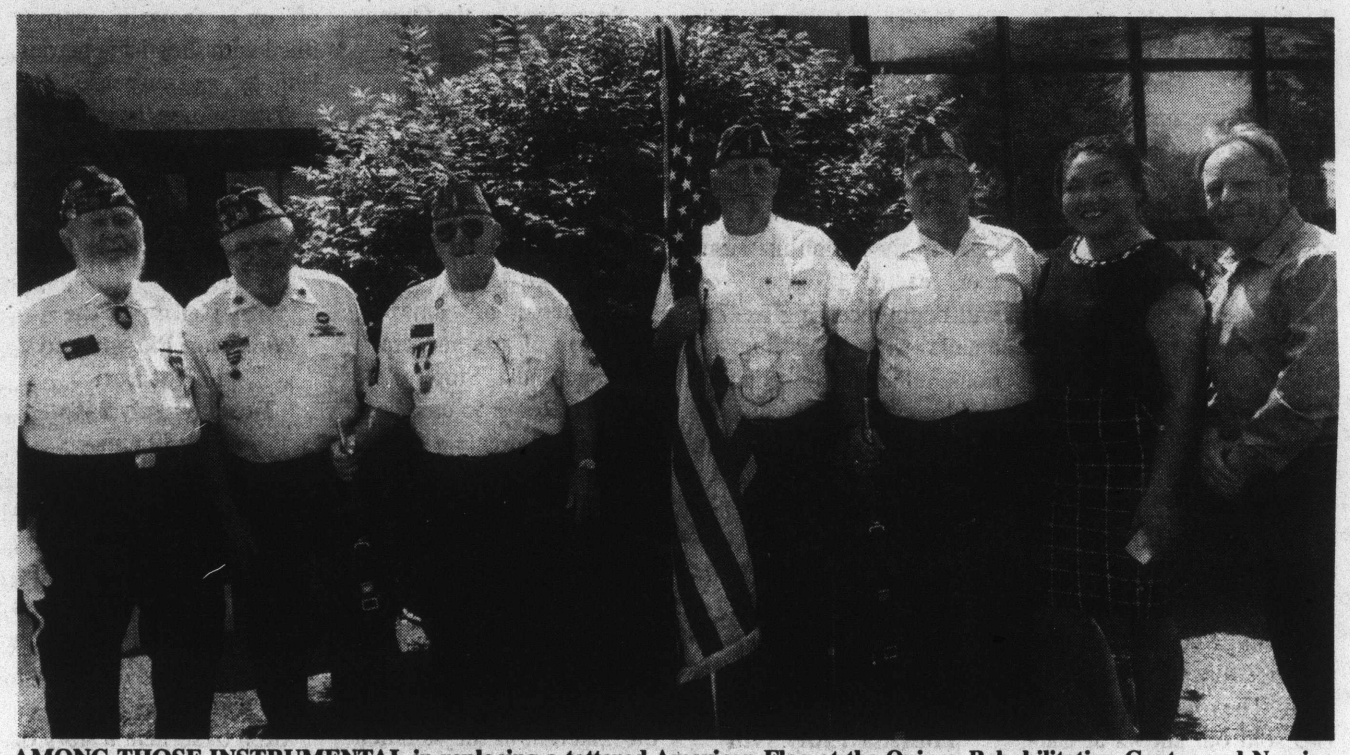

Program Director Irene Zhu asked for help in replacing its flag at the nursing home which is located across from the Francis X. Bellotti Quincy District Court House. The nursing home is under new management and Zhu wanted to make sure that the flag and its pole be respected and honored not only on July 4th but each and every day. She notified the Quincy Veterans Services and spoke to George Bouchard who asked and arranged to have local veterans volunteer with their help.

The veterans volunteered their time in assisting the nursing home with no hesitation and were happy to do it. The nursing home is a 126-bed home with both short-term and long-term care.

Zhu is a graduate of Quincy High School Junior ROTC when it was located at Quincy High School. The director and the new management are looking to build on a good relationship with its local veterans originations and its causes as they move forward.

Prizes: Two $250 L.L. Bean Gift Certificates

Dozens of photos of the Blue Hills have been entered into the Friends of the Blue Hills' Seasons of the Blue Hills Photo Contest, but there is still time to submit or vote for photos before the Sept. 9 deadline.

Anyone who enters this free contest will be in the running for two prizes of $250 gift certificates to L.L. Bean. Participants can win a gift certificate if their photo is chosen by a panel of judges, or if one of their photos receives the most electronic votes.

Photos may be submitted until Sunday, Sept. 9 and prizes will be presented at the Friends of the Blue Hills Annual Celebration on Oct. 4. For more information about the photo contest and to see and vote for current entries visit: www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/photo-contest.

Both Dedham Savings and L.L. Bean were generous sponsors of the contest.

QUINCY RESIDENT Jim Ciardelli snapped this photo and submitted it to the Friends of the Blue Hills free photo contest. Seawall Projects Seen Doomed By Legal Ruling

More than half of Quincy's projected seawall and shore protection programs of almost $300,000 are apparently doomed by the ruling of Attorney General Edward J. McCormack, Jr., banning such protection for private property, Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert disclosed.

Projects whose costs total an estimated $100,000, are apparently prohibited by the interpretation made by City Solicitor Douglas A. Randall of the state official's ruling.

TWO PROTEST MEMORIAL MOVING CONTRACT

Two Quincy granite men, James J. Ricciuti and James Canniff told the City Council Finance Committee that they were not asked to bid on the contract for moving the Adams Memorial from Merrymount Park to the new site on the lawn of the Presidents' Homes.

The contract was awarded to the Ricciardi Granite Co. for $985. Thomas Morrissey, city-purchasing agent, noted that the process should have come through his office but Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa asked City Historian William C. Edwards to obtain quotes on the moving project.

Alexa Green And Sydney Morton Headline First First Performance Saturday, Aug. 4

'Broadway Concert Series' At 'Church Of The Presidents'

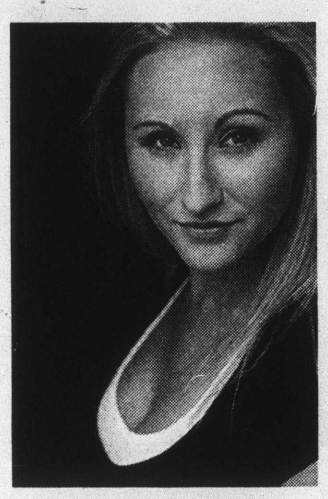

JM Productions announces a new "Broadway Concert Series" starring Alexa Green from "Wicked" and Sydney Morton from "Motown." The performance will be held Saturday, Aug. 4 at 8 p.m. at United First Parish Church, "The Church of Presidents," 1306 Hancock St., Quincy.

The two well-known performers will be joined by 25 teenage singers from Quincy's "Rising Stars" program who will sing alongside these talented entertainers. The children are from multiple communities on the North and South Shores.

JM Productions, Entertainment Producer will present a new five-month Broadway Concert series starring some of Broadway's finest entertainers handpicked especially for audiences looking for a bit of Broadway right in their own backyard.

"With the redevelopment of Quincy's downtown and the arrival of the multimillion dollar Hancock-Adams Park adjacent to the church grounds this cultural series is sure to be a hit with residents and concert goers from across the Commonwealth," said John McDonald of JM Productions.

Alexa Green has become one of the most sought-after new voices and rising stars of this generation. She is best known for her turn as Glinda in the Los Angeles and San Francisco companies of the hit Broadway musical "Wicked." After playing to sold-out audiences for nearly two years, she went on to appear alongside Neil Patrick Harris and Patti LuPone in the international cinematic release of Stephen Sondheim's "Company" with The New York Philharmonic Live from Lincoln Center.

ALEXA GREEN

SYDNEY MORTON

Alexa has toured both nationally and internationally as a singer and actor and has been noted as being "petite and precocious, with sort of a Mae West-ish-ness about her." Alexa most recently released her debut album, "So Good" on Grammy Award-winning record label, Broadway Records and won the Broadwayworld Award for Best New Solo Recording, 2016.

Alexa received her BFA in Musical Theatre from The University of Cincinnati, College-Conservatory of Music (CCM) and is currently studying for her MA in vocal pedagogy/music and music education at Columbia University. She is a teaching artist in residence and owns her own private practice in musical theatre, rock, and popular voice.

Sydney Morton is a Broadway veteran and all-around triple threat having appeared in the original Broadway casts of "Memphis", "Evita", "American Psycho" and "Motown" as Florence Ballard. She has toured across the U.S. in the National Tour of the fan-favorite musical, "Flashdance" as Alex and in the Chicago company of the Broadway hit "Jersey Boys."

Sydney is currently recognized as a new fresh face gaining notoriety for her work on both stage and screen. She has performed all over the world including regionally at Berkeley Rep, Ogunquit Playhouse, Paper Mill Playhouse and on the big and small screen in "Jessica Jones "on Netflix, "Younger", "The Sound of Music" Live on NBC and appeared on the silver screen in "The Intern", "Service to Man" and "Love ~ New York". She is currently starring in Spike Lee's "She's Gotta Have It" now on Netflix. Sydney received her BFA in musical theatre from The University of Michigan and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts.

"On Sept. 22nd for our second concert in the series we offer a very special night with Will & Anthony Nunziata, who are Carnegie Hall headliners," McDonald said. "They have performed two sold out shows at Carnegie Hall with the New York Pops Orchestra. Will and Anthony also just completed filming featured roles in the Netflix series 'The Last Laugh' starring Chevy Chase and Richard Dreyfuss, which will premier in 2018."

Tickets for these two performances are available online at jmproductionspresents.eventbrite.com for general admission seating at $20 per person or $30 per person for a reserved seat and a special "meet and greet" with the performers directly after the shows.

"Our October, November and December shows have not been announced," McDonald said.

Concert with Alastair Moock
Thursday, July 19th
at 11:00 a.m.
Main Library Lawn
(meeting room for rain)
All Ages

Join us for a family concert with multi award winning family music performer, Alastair Moock.

Alastair performs shows for kids and families all over the country, full of rootsy, laughin', signin' and dancin' fun. Performances combine Alastair's own award-winning songs and folk songs from our nation's past, with a sprinkle of history and dash of social justice thrown in for good measure.

Alastair is a 2013 GRAMMY Nominee for his third family album, Singing Our Way Through: Songs for the World's Bravest Kids, as well as being a two-time Parents' Choice Gold Medal Winner and recipient of the ASCAP Children's Music Award. Long one of Boston's premier folk artists, Alastair turned his attention to family music after the birth of his twin daughters in 2006. The New York Times calls him "a Tom Waits for kids" and The Boston Globe declares that, "in the footsteps of Pete Seeger and Woody Guthrie, Alastair Moock makes real kids music that parents can actually enjoy."

Our concert will take place on the lawn (weather permitting) at the main library so bring beach towels to sit on. In case of rain we will move indoors.

Sponsored by the Quincy Cultural Council.

Crazy Collage Art
Friday, July 20th
at 2 – 4 p.m.
Main Library
Children's Room
All Ages

We have an amazing collection of arts and crafts odds and ends. Stop by the Children Room to use these materials to create a one of a kind multimedia masterpiece.

Preschoolers may be content with gluing random odds and ends to make a wild modern art piece. Older children are encouraged to explore and manipulate the materials as they let their imaginations soar.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 - 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

Monday, Main Library; Tuesday, Adams Shore; Wednesday, Wollaston; Thursday, North Quincy.

Drop in from 2 - 4 p.m. up to age 8.

Craft for the week of July 23rd - Spiral Wind Charm

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Children's Movie @ North Quincy - Tangled Monday, July 23rd
at 2 p.m.
Rated PG

When the kingdom's most wanted bandit, Flynn Rider, hides in a mysterious tower, the last thing he expects to find is Rapunzel, a spirited teen with an unlikely superpower: 70 feet of magical golden hair! Together, the unlikely duo sets off on a fantastic journey filled with surprising heroes, laughter, and suspense.

This movie is rated PG and runs for 100 minutes.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytelling at the Wollaston Playground (the Tot Lot)
Tuesday, July 24th
at 10:30 a.m.
All ages

Join us at the Wollaston Beach Playground Park on the corner of Sachem Street next to the Clam Box across from Wollaston Beach each Tuesday in July for stories, songs and more.

Stop by to hear a story or two and pick up a calendar listing all of the summer events. If it is raining we will hold storytime at the Main Library on 40 Washington St.

Cosponsored by Discover Quincy.

Pajama Storytime with Denise Shaver
Wednesday, July 25th
at 6:30 p.m.

The Hills Meet The Sea For Dinner In The Blue Hills Raffle

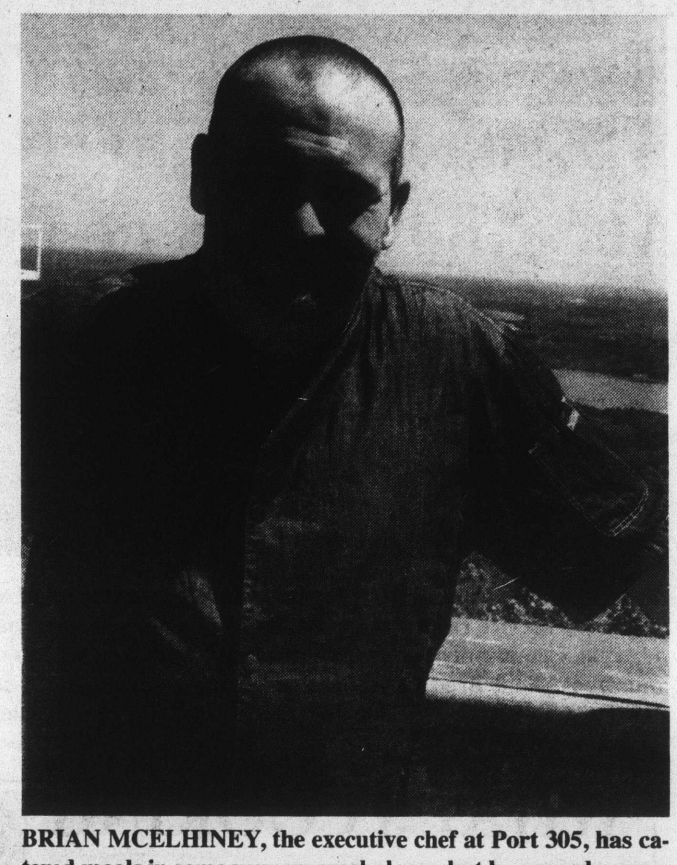

The Friends of the Blue Hills is raffling off a dinner for six at the top of Blue Hill Observatory, the oldest continually operating weather observatory in the country.

The winner will enjoy breathtaking views of the Boston skyline and the ocean while dining on an unforgettable meal provided by sister restaurants Siros and Port 305 at Marina Bay in Quincy.

Brian Mcelhiney, the executive chef at Port 305, will prepare and serve the three-course dinner. The group will also receive a private tour of this historically significant landmark in the heart of the Blue Hills Reservation.

Tickets for the raffle are $15 each or 3/$35 and can be purchased at www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/raffle2018.

The drawing will be held at the organization's Annual Celebration at the Canton Town Club on Thursday, Oct. 4, but you need not be present to win. For more information, email info@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

BRIAN MCELHINEY, the executive chef at Port 305, has catered meals in some very unusual places, but he concedes none had a better view than the top of the Blue Hill Observatory. He stopped by recently to check out the rooftop where he will be serving dinner to the lucky raffle winner.

BOSTON COLLEGE HIGH School students recently spent a most rewarding and uplifting week at a service retreat at the Brady Faith Center in Syracuse, New York. Donald Ormond Among B.C. High Students Making Service Retreat In NY

Donald Ormond of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School, spent a most rewarding and uplifting week, from June 17 to June 23, at a service retreat at the Brady Faith Center in Syracuse, N.Y.

Ormond with nine of his classmates, under the guidance of B.C. High teachers, Nick Argento and Ryan Dacey, worked in the St. Lucy's food pantry, which offers a free hot lunch to anyone. The boys ate lunch with many of the guests and then helped clean up, break down, and then set up for a graduation ceremony that was held that night. And outside at St. Lucy's Parish stone garden they did some cleanup, and built two vegetable gardens.

They took a walking tour of West Syracuse and South Syracuse. West Syracuse is the most poverty stricken part of the US for blacks and South Syracuse is the most poverty stricken part of the U.S. for Latinos according to the U.S. Census.

They gathered each night for 2 hours to pray, share what they experienced and learned in a contemplation discussion group with members of the Brady Faith Center who led them in reflection, journal writing, and prayer.

They made pancakes for people who participate in a bicycle program called 'Pedals 2 Possibilities' through the Brady Faith Center and they helped out by clearing a trail for their neighbors on the Center's sustainability farm.

They listened to Andrew Lunetta, director of "A Tiny Home For Good "which supports those facing homelessness by providing affordable, safe, and dignified homes and fostering strong community partnerships to ensure resident stability.

They visited the Jail Ministry for the Diocese of Syracuse and the Onondaga County Justice Center, a grassroots, social justice, spiritually founded community collective organized to advocate on behalf of the incarcerated; to promote peace-making and to advance the protection of human dignity within the community.

They made dinner at LeMoyne and brought it along to a singing prayer service at L'Arche Community homes, a people, living and working together to build a relationship with each other, putting God at the center of the relationship between those with developmental disabilities and those who do not. Some of the boys were invited to participate in wheel chair races with the residents, a wonderful experience.

They visited North Side Learning Center and its Mosque where they met 10 teenagers, many of them refugees. Inside the mosque, they ate supper together and discussed similarities and differences of Catholicism, Christianity, Islam, and Judaism. Then they, with help from the older teenagers, organized games for the younger children ages 5-15.

On departure day The Brady Faith Center held an outdoor mass to thank the B.C.High retreatants and at the mass the celebrants and ministers washed the boys' feet as a sign of appreciation and gratitude.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Rita's Fab Fritters And Croquettes

By MARIE

Here is a recipe for both fritters and croquettes, made with left-over mashed potatoes. This dish was made by my daughter, Rita.

Actually, there are two recipes today. One for a potato fritter and the other for a potato croquette.

POTATO FRITTERS

Left over mashed potato about 2 cups
1 egg
3 tablespoons of vegetable oil
¼ cup parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon fresh parsley chopped or fresh basil
1 garlic clove finely chopped, or 1 teaspoon garlic powder (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix the potato, egg, parmesan cheese, garlic, parsley and salt and pepper until well blended. Heat the oil and drop the fritters by tablespoon into the frying pan.

Fry the fritters turning until golden brown on both sides. Drain on paper towel and keep warm in a warming oven if not eating right away.

Potato Croquettes include the ingredients except in the end, after mixing the ingredients, you will then dredge the ingredients in a little flour, egg, milk and corn flake crumbs. Form the potato mixture into balls, and then roll in flour, egg-milk and corn flake crumbs mixture. Sauté in hot oil until brown.

POTATO CROQUETTES
2 cups mashed potatoes
1 egg
3 tablespoons of vegetable oil
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon chopped parsley, or fresh basil
1 garlic clove, finely chopped, or 1 teaspoon garlic powder (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste

FOR DREDGING:
1 beaten egg, mixed with a little milk
¼ cup of flour
½ cup of corn flake crumbs

Place the potato mixture in the flour first, then the egg and then the corn flake crumbs. I usually use paper plates for the flour and corn flake crumb for easy cleaning.

Tuna Stuffed Deviled Eggs

By SUSIE

The weather has been hot. Time to look at some recipes that are easy and do not really require cooking (other than boiling the eggs, which you can do the night before when the weather is cooler.)

Here is a delicious appetizer, or an addition to your lunch when combined with a nice salad.

Loaded with healthy protein and fats, and served with a salad, this makes a delicious and hearty summer meal.

Remember the good brands of mayonnaise, though. You can ruin this dish with a mayo that uses unhealthy fats and sugars.

The brands I mentioned below use either avocado oil, olive, or sunflower and do not use sugar. Primal Kitchen also makes wonderful salad dressing too!

Hint: when boiling eggs, add salt to the water and put in the eggs after the water has boiled. This way the shell comes off easy.

TUNA STUFFED DEVILED EGGS
Ingredients:

8 large hard boiled eggs, halved
2 (6 oz) cans tuna, drained
1 tbsp red onion, minced
2 tablespoons minced celery
1/3 cup mayo (either "Primal Kitchen" brand or "Sir Kennigton" due to the quality of the ingredients and lack of sugar)
1 teaspoon apple cider vinegar chopped fresh chives
salt and pepper, to taste
paprika

Directions:

1. In a medium bowl combine the egg yolks with mayo and mash.
2. Add tuna, red onion, vinegar and celery. Season with salt and pepper
3. Scoop heaping spoonfuls of the tuna salad into the 16 halved eggs. Garnish with chives and paprika

Quincy Native's Documentary 'Blacksmith' Receives Worldwide Distribution Through Filmhub

Quincy native Frank DiCesare announces his debut short documentary "Blacksmith" has received worldwide distribution with Filmhub. Based in Santa Monica, Calif., Filmhub is a B2B marketplace for filmmakers and streaming services.

"I am thrilled to have 'Blacksmith' now available to viewers around the world," said Frank DiCesare, president and CEO of Oskar Films. "Through Filmhub, viewers will have more streaming options on how and where they choose to view the film."

All films submitted to Filmhub for consideration must complete a rigorous quality control process in which the film, its poster and selected images must meet the company's standards for distribution. Once QC is completed, the film is then submitted to curated and uncrated streaming channels for possible sale in the marketplace.

To date, Filmhub has successfully marketed "Blacksmith" to Amazon Worldwide's English Territories, which services more than 60 countries around the world including Canada, Australia, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Norway, New Zealand, South Africa, the Philippines, the Bahamas and Iceland. Filmhub has also found a home for "Blacksmith" on Vimeo On Demand and UDU Digital.

In May, "Blacksmith" made its premiere on Amazon Prime Video in the United States, United Kingdom, Germany, Austria, Liechtenstein, and Japan markets.

In April, "Blacksmith" won the prestigious Special Jury Award Remi at WorldFest – Houston International Film Festival. The award is given to films that score in the top four percent of a particular category. "Blacksmith's" award was in the category of short documentary (under 60 minutes).

According to WorldFest's website, previous Remi Award winners include Stephen Spielberg, Francis Ford Coppola, George Lucas, Brian De Palma and Ridley Scott. The award is named for American artist and sculptor, Frederic Remington.

Produced in conjunction with Lamar University, "Blacksmith" is a 16-minute documentary that highlights the work of Rob Flurry, the resident blacksmith at the Spindletop-Gladys City Boomtown Museum (http://www.lamar.edu/spindletop-gladys-city/index.html) in Beaumont, Texas. Unlike the blacksmiths portrayed in the media today, Flurry's craftsmanship is that of the old-school artisan – no expensive equipment; no modern forge in which to work. Instead, Flurry relies solely on nature's elements of fire, iron, air, and water (along with his own strength) to hammer out beautiful creations within the smoky furnace of his shop.

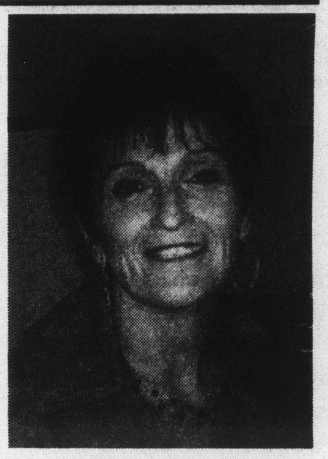

"Blacksmith" was filmed in the tradition of poetic documentary – no voice overs, monologue or dialogue is spoken. All of the action is put to music that compliments the mood and rhythm of the scene.

"Blacksmith" was also an official selection at the Miami Independent Film Festival for November, 2017, and at the Boomtown Film & Music Festival in Beaumont, Texas.

The film's trailers can be viewed at http://www.frankdicesarephoto.com/oskar-films.

How Harmful Is Stress To Our Health?

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Stress is a fact of nature in which influences from the inside or outside world affect the individual, either one's emotional or physical well-being, or both. The individual responds to stress in ways that affect them, as well as their environment. Due to the excess of stress in our modern lives, we usually think of stress as a negative experience, but from a biological point of view, stress can be a neutral, negative, or positive experience.

In general, stress is related to both external and internal factors. External factors include the physical environment, including your job, your relationships with others, your home, and all the circumstances, challenges, complexities, and expectations you're confronted with on a daily basis. Internal factors determine your body's ability to respond to, and deal with, the external stress-inducing elements. Internal factors which influence your ability to handle stress include your nutritional status, overall health and fitness levels, emotional well-being, and the amount of sleep and rest you obtain.

Humans are highly adaptive creatures because of the evolution of the human brain, especially the part called the neo-cortex. This adaptability is largely due to the changes and stressors that we have faced and mastered. Therefore, we, unlike other animals, can live in any climate or ecosystem, at variable altitudes, and avoid the danger of predators. Furthermore, we have learned to live in the air, under the water, and even in outer space, where no other living creatures have ever survived. So then, why is stress so bad?

Excess stress can manifest itself in a multitude of emotional, behavioral, and even physical symptoms, and the symptoms of stress fluctuate enormously among different individuals. Common somatic (physical) symptoms often reported by those experiencing excess stress include sleep disturbances or changes in sleeping habits including insomnia or sleeping too much, muscle tension, muscle aches, headache, gastrointestinal problems, and fatigue. Symptoms of many preexisting medical conditions can also worsen during periods of stress. Emotional and behavioral symptoms that can accompany excess stress include nervousness, anxiety, changes in eating habits including overeating or undereating (leading to weight gain or loss), loss of eagerness or energy, and mood changes, like irritability and depression. Keep in mind, none of these signs or symptoms means for certain that there is an elevated stress level since all of these symptoms can be precipitated by other medical and/or psychological conditions.

It is also acknowledged that people under stress have a greater propensity to engage in unhealthy behaviors, such as excessive use or abuse of alcohol and drugs, tobacco use, and making poor exercise and nutritional choices, than their less-stressed counterparts. These unhealthy behaviors can further escalate the seriousness of symptoms related to stress, often leading to a vicious cycle of symptoms and detrimental behaviors.

The experience of stress is highly individualized. What signifies overwhelming stress for one person may not be perceived as stress at all by another. Similarly, the symptoms and signs of poorly managed stress will be distinctive for each person.

Stress comes in many forms and affects people of all ages and all walks of life. No external benchmarks can be applied to predict stress levels in individuals; one need not have a traditionally stressful job to experience workplace stress, just as a parent of one child may experience more parenting stress than a parent of several children. The degree of stress in our lives is extremely dependent upon individual components such as our physical health, the quality of our interpersonal relationships, the amount of obligations and responsibilities we bear, the degree of others' dependence and expectations of us, the amount of support we receive from others, and the number of changes or traumatic events that have occurred in our lives in recent times. However, it is possible to make some generalizations. People with sufficient or strong social support networks report less stress and overall improved mental health in comparison to those without adequate social support. People who are poorly nourished, who get insufficient sleep, or who are physically ailing also have a reduced capacity to manage the pressures and stresses of everyday life and may report elevated stress levels. Some stressors are predominantly associated with certain age groups or life stages. Children,teens, the newlyweds, working parents, single parents, and seniors are examples of the groups who often face common stressors related to transitions in their lives.

Research shows that there is mounting evidence pointing to abnormal stress responses as causing or contributing to various diseases or conditions. These include anxiety disorders, depression and substance abuse. Stress can affect virtually every organ system, being associated with conditions as as skin disorders or hives, high blood pressure, cardiovascular diseases, certain gastrointestinal diseases, some cancers, and even the process of aging itself. Stress also appears to intensify the frequency and severity of migraine headaches, episodes of asthma, and fluctuations of blood sugar in those with diabetes. There also is scientific evidence indicating that people experiencing psychological stress are more prone to developing colds and other infections than their less-stressed peers. Overwhelming psychological stress, also referred to as trauma, can precipitate both temporary (transient) and long-lasting (chronic) symptoms of a serious psychiatric illness called posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD).

Uncontrollable, unpredictable, and constant stress has widespread consequences in regards to our physical and mental health. Stress can begin in the womb and reappear throughout life. One of the potential pathological consequences of stress is a learned helplessness that precedes hopelessness and helplessness of clinical depression. Additionally, many illnesses, such as chronic anxiety, high blood pressure, heart disease, and addictive disorders, also seem to be influenced by chronic or overwhelming stress. Furthermore, research has shown us the biological processes that explain what we all intuitively know to be fact, which is, that excessive stress, particularly when we cannot predict it or control its recurrence, is harmful to our health.

Rosemary Wahlberg Remembered As Pioneer, Passionate Advocate

at a time when it was unpopular.

"She made a tremendous difference for families with children and allowed women to be able to work," Strollo said, Strollo joined QCAP in 1984 as its fiscal director, and said it was an honor to work with Mrs. Wahlberg for so many years.

"I don't know anyone like her and it was an honor to work with her for so many years. Even in her passing she continues to inspire," Strollo said. "We will all continue to do our work in her honor."

Mayor Thomas Koch said Mrs. Wahlberg was pioneer.

"I had the good fortune of knowing Rosemary and working with Rosemary over the years on a number of issues. In fact, I was on the Community Action board when she was executive director for a period of time," Koch said. "Just a remarkable woman who had a great grasp on the issues and needs of the community and went after it. She was relentless. She had a nice way about her, but you got the message with Rosemary when she was serious about an issue.

"Obviously she was a pioneer on so many of those programs that Community Action does today for families. And her husband, Archie, has been active for years – they're just one of those great power couples that made a big difference in the lives of the people of Quincy, that's for sure.

"There are always people in different generations who step, but you don't replace a Rosemary Wahlberg. She's just a unique individual and we're better for it as a community."

Koch said Mrs. Wahlberg's legacy would continue on for years to come.

"First of all, she had a big family. She was a mother and a grandmother and that's a legacy in itself," the mayor said.

"As far as the community goes, there are people that are being helped today and will be helped in the future that will never know who she is, because they didn't know her personally, but her name is on the building at Community Action. I think that is a great legacy. Her name continues to be associated with all that good work for working families."

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Wahlberg is survived by her children Christine Vincent and her husband Robert of Mashpee, Paul Wahlberg and his wife Donna of Milton, Janice Radzik of Quincy, Rosemary Gilbody and her husband Robert of Quincy, Eugene Wahlberg and his wife Susan of Weymouth, Daniel Wahlberg and his wife Kelly of Milton, 21 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and her brother, Frank McGrory of Florida. She was predeceased by her children Karen, John and Robert Wahlberg.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Improvements Underway

The Quincy Cemetery Department is implementing a second phase of improvements at Mount Wollaston Cemetery this summer.

Repaving of all of the cemetery roadways is underway with installation of new granite curbing on the Sea Street and Greenleaf Street entrance roads. The work is expected to be complete by Labor Day.

The project is being funded through the cemetery's perpetual care fund, which is a reserve from a portion of the sale of the burial right deeds. It is used for the upkeep and maintenance of the city's cemeteries managed by the Cemetery Board and Mayor.

"The grounds of Mount Wollaston Cemetery serve as a living memorial to so many of our past Quincy residents," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "These improvements honor their lives and the entire area can be appreciated by visitors, walkers and historians."

The first phase of work, completed last spring by the Department of Public Works, included replacement of a 100-year-old water main that ran through the middle of the cemetery from the Sea Street gate to Merrymount Road. Approximately three miles (15,000 ft.) of water service line was installed to 74 new water faucets mounted on decorative granite posts with granite splash pads. The faucets are used by cemetery visitors to water plants and flowers at loved ones gravesites. Underground irrigation was installed throughout the veterans' section.

Consecrated in 1855, the 52-acre cemetery was added to the National Registry of Historic Places in 1984. It is the eternal resting place of some of the city's most important historic figures including members of the Adams and Quincy families. It offers some of the most impressive monuments ever created with Quincy granite and it is a place where one can learn a great deal about the city's history.

The third phase, set to begin next spring, includes restoration to the cemetery's main entrance along Sea Street as well as a major tree planting throughout the entire cemetery. Quincy Community Preservation Act funds were used towards planning and design.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – 'Rat Holes' In The Social Security System

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I am single and will be 63 on July 1 this year. I was born in 1955. I have been considering retiring sooner rather than later. (In other words, before FRA, which for me is 66 and 2 months). I have been reading about the "rat holes" in the Social Security system that may affect my timing for when I choose to begin my SS - I can't quite figure out a strategy as to when to begin my SS so as not to fall into that rat hole.

Can you possibly advise me as to when would be the soonest that I should choose and not "take a hit", so to speak? Or does it not really matter that much? Signed: *Trying to Decide

Dear Trying: I'm not sure what you've been reading which describes Social Security's "rat holes," but it sounds to me like hyperbole designed to get you to buy something. Social Security really doesn't have any secrets or nefarious traps designed to cheat you out of the money you've earned from a lifetime of working, although it is a necessarily complex topic, which governs a myriad of possible claiming choices by millions of different people. But at a basic level the rules are pretty simple: if you claim benefits at your full retirement age you'll get 100% of the benefit you are entitled to from your lifetime of working; if you apply sooner you'll get less and if you claim later you'll get more. Age 62 is the earliest you can collect and age 70 is the latest you should apply.

Deciding when to claim your Social Security is never really a simple matter, but rather one that should take into account your health, your family history of longevity, and your current and future financial needs. If you're in good health, come from a family, which typically lives to a ripe old age and don't really need the money right now, then waiting until at least your FRA and possibly longer will get you a bigger benefit check. But if you're sickly and/or need the extra money now to pay your basic living expenses, then collecting earlier makes a lot of sense.

The fact is that Social Security was designed to pay out about the same amount of money regardless of what age you apply - if you claim early your checks are smaller but you get more of them; if you wait until later your checks are bigger but you don't get as many. But that logic depends almost entirely on how long you live.

You may want to do a "break even analysis" which will show how long you would need to live to break even if you collected at age 66 versus collecting at age 63, or when you would break even if you waited until you are 70 to apply versus claiming at your FRA. Of course, if you live beyond the break-even age you're ahead money, and the average life expectancy today is in the mid-80's (slightly more for women).

So as to your specific question of when is the soonest you can collect without "taking a hit", that would be at your full retirement age when you'll get 100 percent of the benefit you've earned from working your entire life. If you claim earlier than that your benefit amount will be reduced by about 6.7 percent for each year early, and if you apply later than your FRA your benefit amount will grow by 8 percent for each year you delay up to age 70 when it reaches maximum. Does it really matter that much? Well that depends on how healthy you are, how long you think you will live and how badly you need the money. But it's a choice only you can make.

Koch: Quincy, Boston Still At Odds Over New Bridge

ties on the island, but falls within Quincy's city limits.

Koch, in the recent interview, said he has spoken to Walsh since the January announcement. The two sides remain at loggerheads, however, and Quincy's mayor does not believe a deal to end the dispute is possible.

"He's trying to make his case with me and I've staked out my position with him," Koch said. "I just don't see any agreement coming on this."

Before Boston can begin rebuilding the bridge, several regulatory bodies must approve the plan. Those include the Quincy Conservation and Planning Board, the U.S. Coast Guard and Army Corps of Engineers, and a state environmental review.

Koch said his administration is prepared to make its case against the bridge to each of those bodies.

"There are a lot of regulatory issues that they have to go through and we're going to be meeting them every step of the way," he said. "I don't know at the end of the day if we can completely stop it – that's my goal. We sure as hell can slow it down and that's something we'll definitely be doing."

One issue some Quincy officials and residents have raised is the possibility of development on Long Island if the bridge were to be rebuilt. Walsh has said he is willing to place restrictions on development there, Koch said, but Quincy's mayor is concerned another Boston mayor could do away with them.

"[Walsh] indicated in general he'd be willing to do some restrictions out there, but if he's no longer mayor of Boston and the next guy comes in, they're not held to the same deal," Koch said.

"Once the bridge goes up it just opens up all kinds of possible traffic for all kinds of potential development out there."

Koch also disputed the claim made by some bridge proponents that Quincy's opposition to the proposal is an example of NIMBYism.

"Part of the argument that people are out there mouthing off about is 'Quincy doesn't want these people in their community.' The reality is Boston doesn't want them – that's why they want to put them on an island. Let's be serious," Koch said.

"I don't know that warehousing people out there like that is a good idea in today's day and age. When you look at the Gavin House, the Cushing House, they're in communities. These folks that are getting back on their feet are connected to services. They're connected to jobs. I don't know how you do that out on an island."

"Even if they want to make the case that that should be out there, then they ought to be looking at a ferry," Koch added.

During a community meeting this spring, Koch announced his plan to open the Independence Avenue entrance to the Quincy Adams MBTA station on a permanent basis this fall.

In the recent interview Koch said city officials are still working with the T on several issues related to the gate opening, including the hours it will be open.

"Those are the things we're kind of kicking around now," he said. "We've been wrapped up with the T on some other issues, but we've got some meetings scheduled to go through those kinds of things."

Koch said he has two concerns about opening the gate – illegal parking in the nearby residential neighborhood and traffic from vehicles dropping off and picking up commuters.

"The two main concerns, at least from my perspective, are illegal parking that may occur, so we're trying to work out a resident parking program, which I think can be managed," he said.

"The second piece, which is more challenging, is the kiss-and-ride thing – the drop-off thing. Independence is narrow. If people start double parking to drop or waiting to pick someone up because it's raining out, I think that could become a real challenge traffic-wise. We've got to be real careful on managing that, and I've talked to [Mayor] Joe Sullivan in Braintree about it – he's willing to commit some resources as well to make sure that doesn't happen."

In the future, Koch suggested the T or city could look to purchase homes near the entrance to create a drop-off and pick-up area.

"I think eventually down the road – whether it's the T or it's the city – perhaps a couple houses are purchased near there and you create a 20- or 25-car kiss-and-ride spot where people can pull off the road and pick up their loved one," he said.

The mayor is a lifelong resident of Newbury Avenue, which is just two blocks from the North Quincy MBTA station. Based on his experience living there, Koch said some residents' fears of increased crime following the opening of the Independence Avenue gate are overblown.

"I don't see it as an issue," Koch said when asked about crime. "I'm two blocks from the T in North Quincy…we've never experienced that.

"I think the concerns were a little exaggerated. I think there are real issues, like I stated, that can be managed."

Christopher Cassani, the head of the city's traffic and parking department, is finalizing a plan for a residential parking program in the neighborhood near the station, Koch said.

"That's something that his department is putting together as we speak – the ordinance that will be required. Those will be submitted to the council as part of a package," Koch said. "I know on my street years ago we had no signs, so people would just park and walk up the street…Once the signs went in they started ticketing – the issue went away."

Koch noted the city's new budget includes funding to hire two new parking control officers – doubling the number the city has – one of whom will be assigned to the area near the gate.

"The enforcement is key," he said. "As you know, we added two positions to that department on enforcement and ticketing writing – at least one will be dedicated to that area."

The budget also set aside funds to improve the intersection of Independence Avenue and Verchild Street by adding a signal. Cassani is in the process of working out plans for that intersection, Koch said.

The gate issue has been controversial since the station first opened in the 1980s. Koch said residents living in the vicinity of the gate today want access to public transportation.

"The younger people want access," he said. "When that T station went in, it was an older neighborhood – these people had never used public transportation. But the people today, they want access to public transportation. I can't blame them – it's right there."

While the opening of the gate is meant to be permanent, Koch said the decision could be revisited should the traffic situation prove to be unmanageable.

"I wouldn't shut the door on closing it," he said. "Always keep your options open. You can't predict everything. I think it's going to work though. I really do."

Opening the gate, he added, could improve the traffic situation because residents who now drive to Quincy Adams or other T stations will now be able to walk instead.

"The other thing it does is less cars on the road. Those people are driving to the stations in many cases where they would just walk to the gate and be there," Koch said.

Last fall, the City Council approved $500,000 to begin studying a public safety headquarters that will provide a new home for the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, as well as several other city departments.

Koch said he spoke to the architectural and engineering team responsible for that study in late June. That group is now in the process of reaching out to the various city departments that could one day move into the new building.

"It's study/some conceptual design work, and from there we bring it to the next level," Koch said. "They're meeting with the departments that are affected and going over square footage needs, possible layouts, that kind of stuff."

The new headquarters would be located in the vicinity of the current police station at 1 Sea St. It would serve as a replacement for the police station and house at least the administrative offices for the fire department. It has not been determined if the apparatus at the Quincy Avenue firehouse will move into the new building as well.

"I don't know yet whether we would move the station there from Quincy Ave because now you're affecting response times, so we've got to look at that closely," Koch said. "Some response times might be better, some might be longer, and I certainly don't want to add any time to response times for people today that have that expectation of immediate – two or three minutes – from a 9-1-1 call. So all that's got to be looked at."

"Until we go through all the numbers," the mayor added later, "I'm not yet committed to moving the station until I see how does it adversely affect South Quincy, Faxon Park, that whole area, because that's what it serves. If it's 30 second it's one thing, but if you're adding minutes I don't know that I want to do that."

Several other departments might also move to the new building. They include the Health Department, now located at the Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street; the Inspectional Services Department, now at 55 Sea St.; and Veterans Services Department, which is now on High School Avenue. Archive space could also be included in the new building.

The new building would likely be built in phases,

What Are My Options for Disposition if I Choose Cremation?

Cremation is a form of immediate disposition that provides families with many options for final disposition. There is no right or wrong option yet determining where to place a person who has been cremated can be both comforting and confusing.

Personal Questions to Consider

There are many questions to consider when choosing a method of final disposition. Do you find comfort in the idea of being able to visit a loved one's final resting place? Are there family members who would like to share a keepsake of some type? Was there a particular location that is especially significant? The goal, in making this important decision, is to find a final resting place – or places – that honor the life that was lived and comforts those who remember.

Choosing More than One Option

Most people are familiar with the options of burial, scattering and retaining portions of a person who has been cremated. However, there are other options and you may choose more than one.

Locally, most families choose to place a person who has been cremated in a cemetery either in the ground or in an above ground columbarium niche. Many families like this because they have a place to connect with the person and because they may be able to be placed in graves that no longer have space for full burials.

Scattering is also a common choice but requires some planning. Many people choose to scatter at locations with personal significance but some places, such amusement parks and sports stadiums, prohibit it. Others choose to scatter in natural surroundings but it is important to know that national parks often allow scattering but only with a permit. Another popular option is scattering at sea which must take place three nautical miles from shore.

Another option is seen when families do both or add a third form of disposition by dividing the remains into portions. In doing so they can retain portions as keepsakes in jewelry or small urns with other portions buried or scattered. Through this, families may select multiple forms of disposition including some that are very unique.

Creative and Artistic Options

While most people choose burial or scattering, there are many other innovative options including artwork, jewelry, stained glass, tattoos, and sculpture or planting a portion of the remains with a tree or bush as a living memorial. The options are almost unlimited which is why it is good to seek professional guidance.

Continuing a countywide trend seen for the past several months, Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported that 2nd quarter (April-June 2018) real estate stats showed a reduced level of residential and commercial sales, while at the same time the price of the average property remains on the rise.

"During the recently concluded second quarter, the average Norfolk County

DePaul Univ. Dean Named Quincy College Provost

Dr. Gerald Koocher Will Also Serve As Senior Vice President For Academic Affairs

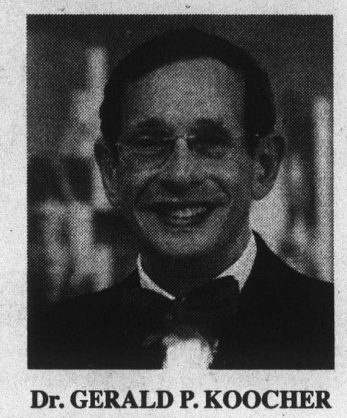

The Dean of DePaul University's College of Science and Health has agreed to become the first Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs at Quincy College, Mayor Thomas P. Koch announced Tuesday.

Dr. Gerald P. Koocher – whose career in academia spans nearly a half-century at some of country's most renowned higher-educational institutions including Harvard Medical School, Boston College, and the University of Missouri -- will be charged with leading Quincy College's academic programs in the newly created role.

His starting annual salary is $245,000.

Koocher, who holds his Ph. D in psychology and is a past president of the American Psychology Association, has held the position at DePaul since 2013. Prior to that, he was Dean of the School of Health Sciences at Simmons College for a decade and later an Assistant Provost at the college. He remains a Dean Emeritus there.

"Dr. Koocher's credentials are impeccable, and he would be great addition to any institution of higher education. So we are truly excited that he has agreed to come to Quincy College to help us not only right the ship, but harness the school's great potential in the coming years," said Mayor Koch. "He has more higher education experience than perhaps any administrator we've been fortunate to have at the College, and that's going to be absolutely vital as we move the institution forward."

Dr. GERALD P. KOOCHER

As Provost, Dr. Koocher will be responsible for all academic programs and issues, including leading efforts to revive the college's once-flourishing nursing program, and building the foundation for the college's plans to offer bachelor's degrees in the near future.

Since being granted executive authority at the College in May, Mayor Koch has described the College's leadership needs as two-fold – a provost to lead academic programs and an interim president to manage the business of the school, things such as raising money for an endowment, dealing with real-estate issues and expanding the school's relationships with state leaders and the business community.

"Quincy College faces a number of challenges, but also has significant potential for growth," Dr. Koocher said. "Mayor Koch has taken significant constructive steps to set the College back on track, and I look forward to working with the faculty and administrative team to set a positive trajectory for the future. Restoring accreditation and re-opening the nursing program will rank as the top priority, but many options for new programming also exist."

Dr. Koocher, a Cambridge native, spent much of his early academic career at Harvard Medical School, where he taught in various capacities for nearly 30 years and retains an academic appointment as a lecturer. At Harvard he served as an Assistant Professor of Psychology; an Associate Professor of Psychology; and as Executive Director of the Linda Pollin Institute.

He also earned tenured professorships at both DePaul and Simmons College. In addition to his work in academia, Dr. Koocher has been affiliated with a number of renowned hospitals, such as Children's Hospital in Boston and has been awarded more than 20 professional honors, including the American Psychological Association Award for Distinguished Professional Contributions to Public Service in 1992.

Dr. Koocher will begin at Quincy College on Sept. 10.

Koch: Quincy, Boston Still At Odds Over New Bridge

Koch said. The first part of the building would be constructed behind the current police station, and then the police station would be torn down and the rest of the building built in its place.

The City Council also approved $3.55 million for a new animal shelter last fall and $500,000 for the new dog park earlier in 2017.

The animal shelter and dog park will be located on city-owned land off Quarry Street near the HighPoint apartment complex.

Koch said the team designing the new animal shelter had to shift its proposed location in the parcel of land because of soil conditions.

"They are looking at different sites within the site because of soil conditions. They did some more excavating and it was going to be problematic where we were showing it. I know they're looking at another spot a little further down the hill, I think, closer to Quarry Street – the actual structure," Koch said.

"The park is the park for the dogs, you know, but it's the building and the foundation requirements and what's in the ground."

The mayor said park construction could begin as soon as this fall. A new roadway, which would provide access to both the animal shelter and dog park, must first be built.

"We've got to bring a road into the site to serve both the shelter and the park," Koch said.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

LONG-TERM SATISFACTION WITH DENTAL IMPLANTS

As we live longer, older adults have every expectation of preserving their chewing ability and oral health. In cases where tooth replacement is necessary, dental implants have emerged as the most natural-looking and best functioning option. To best gauge how dental-implant patients feel about their dental restorations, a questionnaire was sent to 587 patients, eight to fourteen years after their procedures. Of the 400 individuals who responded, a great majority (81 percent) indicated that they experienced high chewing comfort. The mean time elapsed since implant installation was 10 years. Fully 94 percent of those answering the survey said that they were satisfied or sufficiently satisfied with the aesthetic aspects of their implant restorations.

It's hard to smile with satisfaction when you have oral issues. If missing, neglected, damaged, or unattractive teeth prevent you from smiling, take care of the problem with the help of your dentist. Here at 44 Greenleaf Street, we care how you feel, and we'll work with you to help you achieve optimal oral health, from implants, to complete restorations to cosmetic enhancements. For gentle dental care for everyone in your family, using the leading-edge techniques, equipment, and materials available today, please call us for an appointment at 617 479-6220. We offer the services of a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. According to a National Institutes of Health (NIH) study, 90 percent of the dental-implant patients surveyed rated the procedure as "good" or "excellent."

City Marks John Quincy Adams' 251st Birthday

the popular vote in 1824, and was unable to get anything through Congress.

Things would only get worse for Adams, Fitzgerald said. He would lose the 1828 election to Jackson. The next year his eldest son, George Washington Adams, died after either falling or jumping from a ship in Long Island Sound.

"It is really, really a dark, dark time in his life, and it includes the death of his father," Fitzgerald said.

John Quincy Adams was in Washington on July 4, 1826, when his father died in the Old House at Peacefield, now part of the Adams National Historical Park. He was already en route to Quincy – having heard his father's health had gone downhill – when he learned of his passing five days later.

The sixth president arrived back in Quincy on July 13, six days after his father had been buried in the Hancock Cemetery alongside Abigail.

"John Quincy missed his father's funeral and I think that's significant," Fitzgerald said. "He just didn't go through the process, the ritual…that gives you resolution."

Adams was left to settle his father's estate and was in a position to take ownership of the Old House. Doing so, however, would have put him further in debt.

"Everybody thinks the smart move is to sell," Fitzgerald said. "But within one day, he decides to take the house."

Fitzgerald said Adams identified the Old House as the place he could retire to upon leaving the White House. The sixth president wrote, "I shall, in two or three years if indulged with life and health, need a place to retire. Where else should I go? This will be a safe and pleasant retreat where I can pursue literary occupations as long as I can take pleasure in them."

Adams would remain in Quincy for several months following his father's death, and Fitzgerald said he grew accustomed to the pattern of daily life in the town.

"He's conducting settling his father's business. He's going through the process of completion of mourning," Fitzgerald said. "But he's also gradually falling and moving easily into the rhythms and the patterns the town's life."

Adams did not retire, however, after leaving office. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1830 and served there until his death in the Capitol Building in 1848.

Adams become a leading figure in the fight against slavery while in Congress.

Had Adams opted to live outside of Quincy, Fitzgerald said his career in the House might not have happened.

"It's a historical fact that by staying in Quincy, Adams made possible his election to Congress and his final 17 years of prominence," Fitzgerald said. "If he moved somewhere else, nobody would have asked him to serve. It only happened because he stayed."

Douglas Adams, a descendent of John and Abigail, highlighted the history of the United First Parish Church and the presidential crypt that holds his ancestors. John Adams in 1822 gifted the land where the church now stands to the then town of Quincy, and also established a trust fund used to pay part of the cost of building the new structure. John Quincy Adams, Douglas noted, in 1827 purchased the land for the part of the crypt where John and Abigail are now entombed. They were moved from the Hancock Cemetery to the crypt in 1828, the same year the new church opened.

"The interment of John Adams signified a permanence to his father's legacy, which was strongly identified with the United First Parish," Douglas said.

It was another Adams – John Quincy's son Charles Francis, who would serve as ambassador to Britain during the Civil War – who set aside the additional area in the crypt where the sixth president and his wife are entombed. John Quincy and Louisa Catherine were entombed there in 1852, following her death earlier that year.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the new Hancock-Adams Common – which will connect City Hall, the church and the Hancock Cemetery when it opens in September – will give dignity back to the presidents and first ladies entombed in the crypt.

"This park is a beautiful symbol and really brings together our history here – this beautiful stone temple, the magnificent town hall across the street and the original burial ground again across the street," Koch said. "For many years this stone temple became really a traffic rotary, so finally we're going to have that dignity the presidents and their wives deserves."

The new park will include statues for the two men for whom it is named – John Adams and John Hancock. The mayor said he will soon establish a commission to look at creating new monuments for John Quincy and Abigail Adams.

Koch closed his remarks by honoring city historian Thomas Galvin and former Mayor Walter Hannon, both of whom passed away in recent weeks.

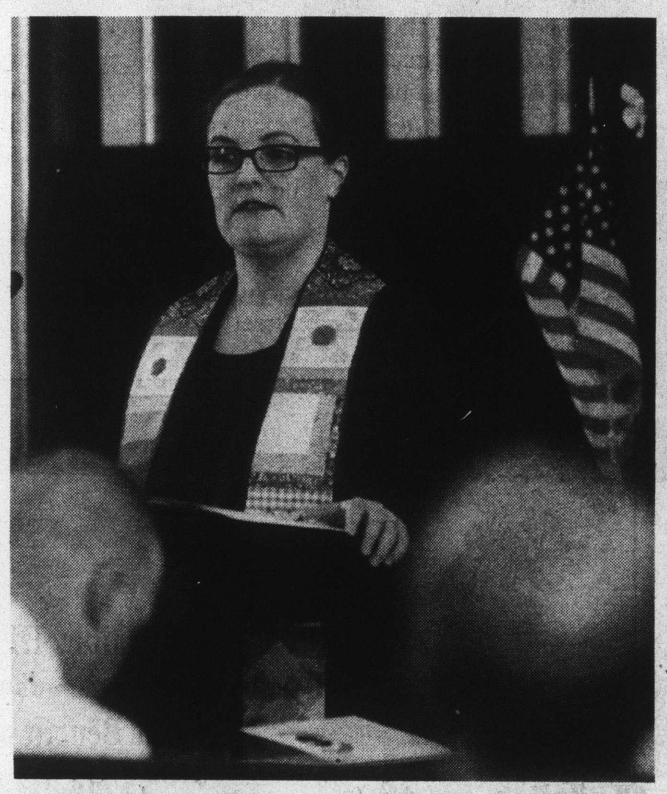

"I certainly remember them today at this event," Koch said.

Wiley Cox, the church's president, noted a $650,000 project funded by the Quincy Community Preservation Committee is now underway to enhance access to the crypt. The plan includes a handicap-accessible ramp on the church's portico, an elevator from the church's foyer to the walkway outside the crypt, an improved staircase leading from the foyer to the crypt walkway, and better lighting in the walkway.

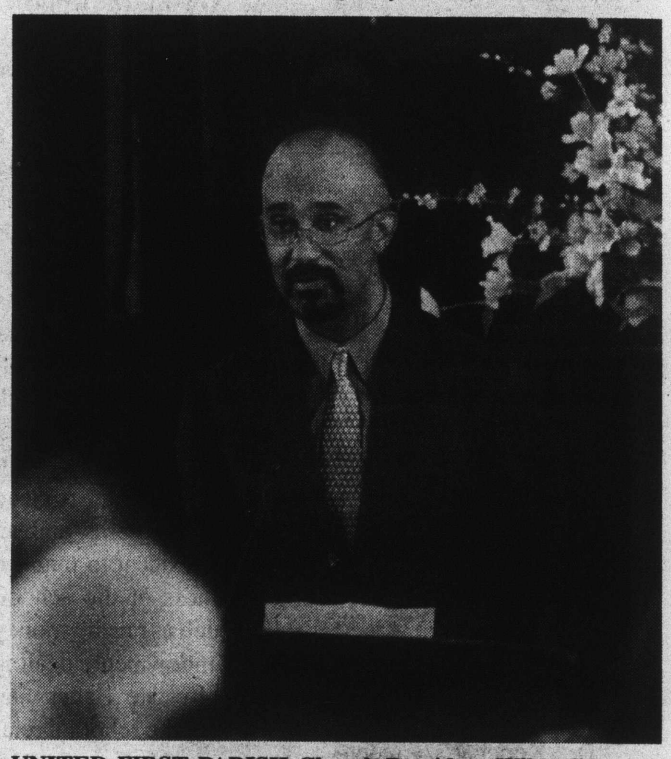

"The church and the city are working together on projects that will enable more people of all abilities to be able to visit the historic treasures that reside within our building, and we thank the city for this opportunity to share the gifts within our building with a larger piece of the world in the very near future," Cox said.

or sensory texturing - for those who are physically or sight impaired. A miniature merry-go-round, for example, is at ground-level to accommodate children with mobility issues.

"If there's an individual in a mobility device, they can wheel right up to the equipment and immediately be part of the merry-go-round experience," Croall said.

There are ramps that provide access to slides and other sets for the physically challenged.

For those children with sight or audio impairments, some of the equipment, such as an 'igloo," has sensory features. There are also activity panels with tactile features.

"It allows them to engage," said Croall.

He noted the light green and dark blue color scheme of the playground is non-traditional. Attractions and even the rubberized matting utilize the colors.

"This is used for those who are sight impaired to help them delineate depth perceptions," Croall said.

The Fore River Field upgrade also included new restrooms, a repointed baseball diamond with an infield irrigation system and a new basketball court with three pickleball courts.

In addition to the field improvements, the adjacent 100-year-old Fore River Clubhouse also got a makeover. The club's exterior received a facelift and soon, the interior will be renovated.

"This is hundreds of thousands of dollars of improvements at Fore River Field," said Croall. "We've made significant improvements here."

The majority of the project's funding was provided by the city's Community Preservation Committee.

"If it wasn't for their endorsement, this wouldn't have gotten off the ground," said Croall, expressing appreciation for the committee's support.

There was a $30,000 shortfall to complete the project. According to Croall, that's where the Quincy Point community came in and held a fundraiser.

"The community rallied together and literally raised $30,000 within three weeks," he said.

Three of Quincy's business leaders – Dan Quirk of Quirk Motor Group, Jay Cashman of Cashman Dredging and Marine and Neighborworks contributed to the cause.

"It was truly a community effort," he said.

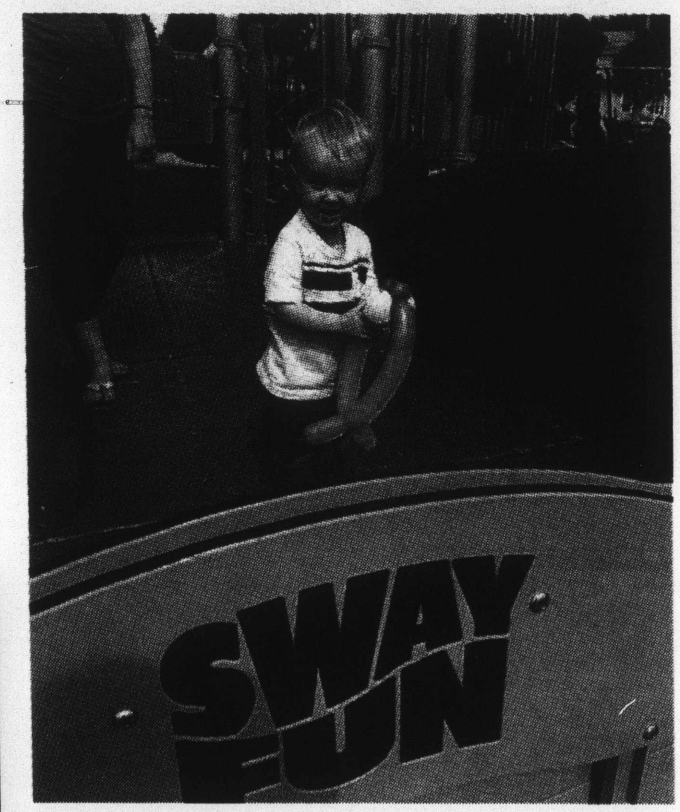

Looking out at the families and children clamoring through the field and new playground, Croall smiled.

"It's an opportunity to bring people together, have the kids interact and people catch up," he said. "It's a wonderful day in the community."

As children enjoyed the new playground, a mother was overheard saying, "This is a great addition to the neighborhood."

AFTER REACHING FIRST base, John Joyce with aggressive base running, stole second base and reached third base on a sacrifice fly by John MacDonald. Joyce scored the third run of the inning on a passed ball giving his team a 4-3 lead.

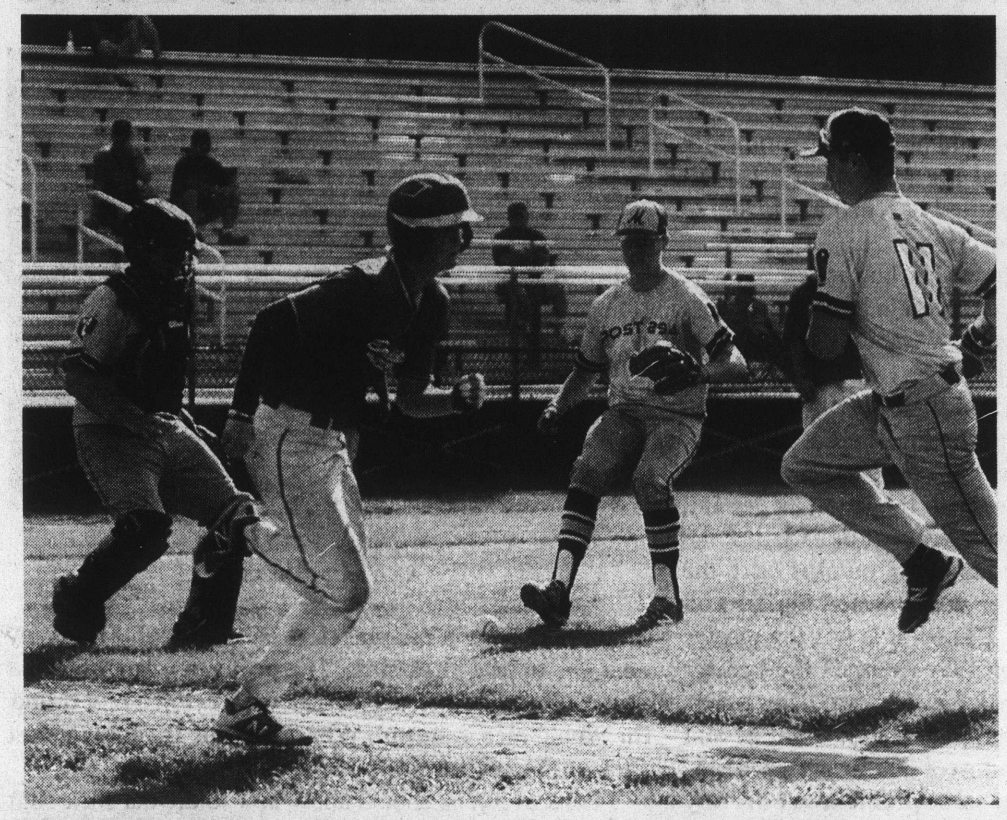

MORRISETTE POST 294 was very aggressive in running the bases with multiple stolen bases. Here Owen Carberry steals second base in the third inning in the team's 8-3 win over Braintree. With the win, Morrisette improved to 14-1-1 on the season and sits atop the Eastern Division standings in Zone 6.

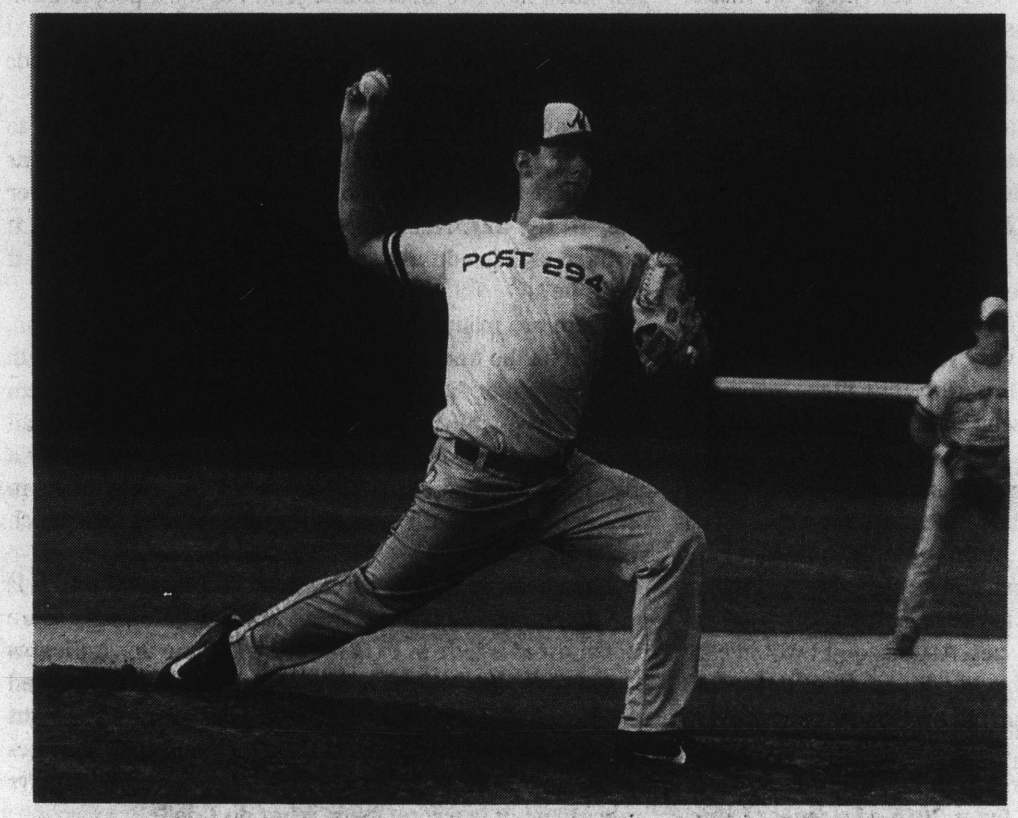

MATT JOYCE drops a perfect bunt down the third base line for a base hit in the fifth inning. Joyce stole second base and eventually scored as Curtis Frazier walked with the bases loaded forcing him home. John Joyce was also walked with the bases loaded forcing in J.P. Kelley. Morrisette Post scored two runs in the fifth inning extending their lead to 6-3.

Morrisette Defeats Braintree

MORRISETTE LEGION POST 294 catcher Curtis Frazier, third baseman Will McCarthy and first baseman J.P. Kelley converge on the ball as Braintree's Taylor Morelli runs to first base. Curtis picked the ball up and threw the runner out on a close play in the first inning of Sunday night's game at Adams Field, Morrisette defeated Braintree 8-3.

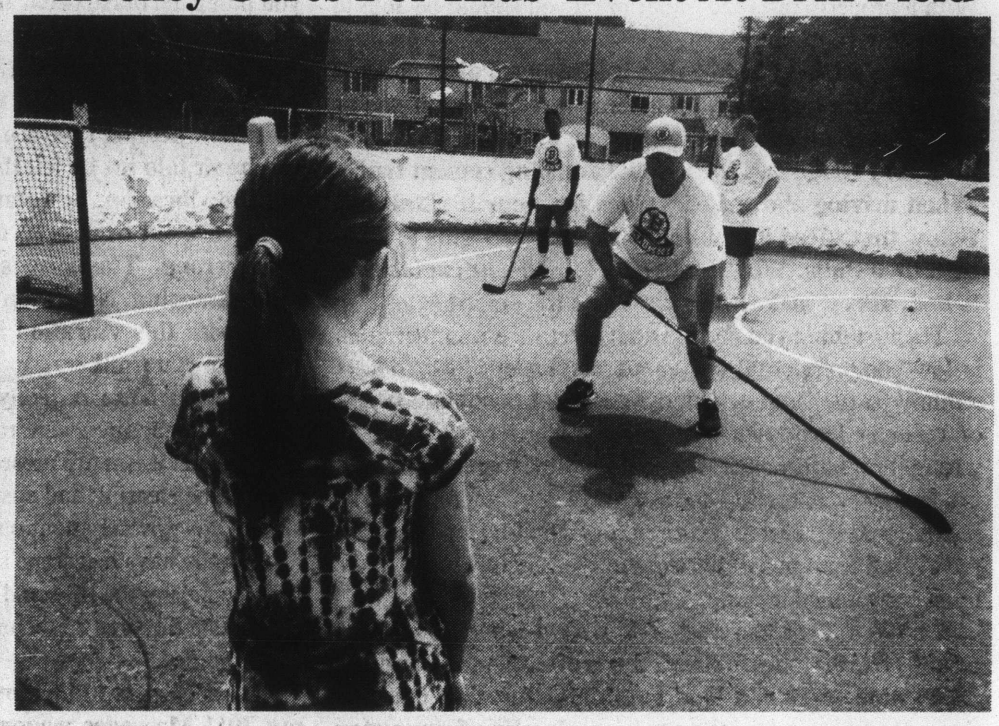

MORRISETTE'S PITCHING HELD Braintree to only three runs scored in the third inning. John MacDonald came in relief in the fifth inning, holding Braintree scoreless for the final three innings along with four strikeouts. 19 Local Riders Among Cyclists In Pan-Mass Challenge Aug. 4-5

Nineteen riders from Quincy will cycle up to 192 miles in the Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) Aug. 4 and Aug. 5 with the goal of topping last year's record-breaking gift and raising $52 million for critical cancer research and patient care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The local cyclists are:

Paul Burke, Kerrie Carroll, James Conley, Suzanne DeGust, Jen Deitsch, Brian Flaherty, Robin Franceschini, Thomas Herlihy, Richard Keddya, Joshua Lamm, Lauren Lamm, Lauren Langbert, Daniel Lewis, Allynn Lodge, Joseph MacDonald, Patrick McDermott, Andrea Quigley, Sam Shiff and Ray Waldron.

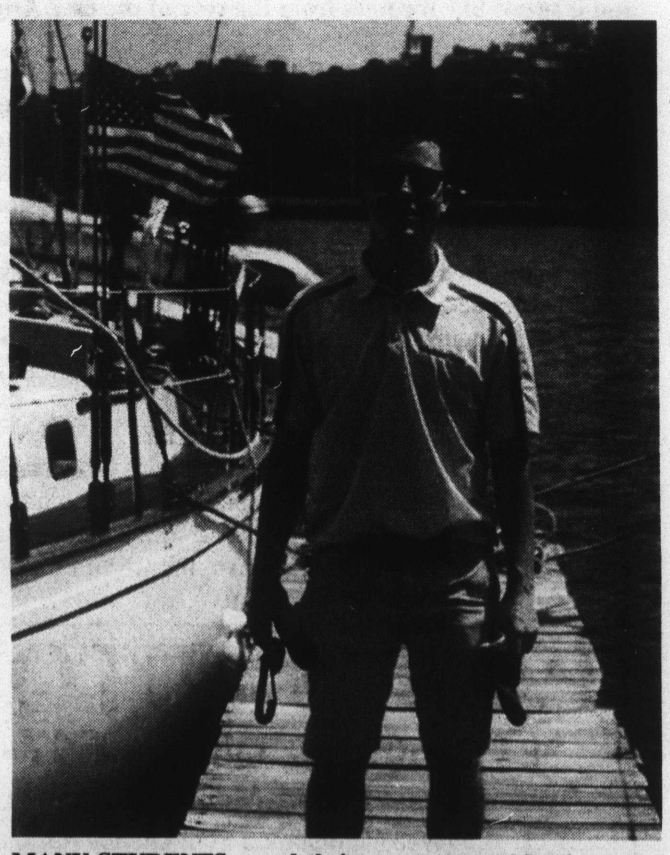

During PMC weekend, over 6,200 cyclists from more than 40 states and seven countries will gather in Massachusetts to participate in the PMC. Riders include everyone from seasoned triathletes to weekend warriors and range in age from 15 to 84. Many ride to honor a family member or friend lost to, or being treated for cancer, and more than 850 riders and volunteers are cancer survivors or current patients themselves.

Designed to cater to all levels of cycling and fundraising ability, the PMC offers 12 different routes, varying in mileage and difficulty, that pass through 46 towns across the Commonwealth, with starting lines in Sturbridge, Wellesley and Bourne. Cyclists are required to raise between $600 and $8,000, depending on the chosen route, though the average cyclist raises more than $7,000, which exemplifies the spirit of the PMC and its riders. Volunteers, spectators, donors and sponsors are also part of the camaraderie on ride weekend, all working together in hopes of one day eradicating cancer.

"After surpassing our goal and raising $51 million for Dana-Farber last year, we are excited to keep the momentum going as we approach our 39th PMC ride weekend," said Billy Starr, founder and executive director of the PMC. "We are continuously humbled by the dedication and generosity of our riders, volunteers, donors, sponsors and community members – it's thanks to them that the PMC is able to make such an immense impact on the fight against cancer. We hope everyone has a safe and enjoyable ride weekend and can't wait to see you all out on the road."

The PMC donates 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar directly to Dana-Farber through its fundraising arm, the Jimmy Fund, and is the institute's largest single contributor, raising more than 53 percent of the Jimmy Fund's annual revenue. In 2017, the PMC gave a record gift of $51 million to Dana-Farber, bringing its 38-year contribution to a total of more than $598 million since its inception in 1980.

The PMC is presented by the Red Sox Foundation and New Balance. To make a financial contribution to a rider from your town or become a virtual rider, visit www.pmc.org, or call (800) WE-CYCLE. Connect with #PanMass2018 on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and LinkedIn.

MANY STUDENTS spend their summers working in shops, restaurants or offices, but Quincy resident Stephen Smiddy is taking a less traditional approach this summer. He is working at Constitution Marina in the Charlestown Navy Yard as a dock hand, assisting with marina operations and boat maintenance. Constitution Marina, located at Constitution Wharf in Charlestown, is a full service marina with room for 265 boats. They also offer seasonal boat charters and a Bed & Breakfast Afloat program. Photo Courtesy Castle Public Relations

Pre-Collision System, Vehicle Towing, Low Profile Tires

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I purchased a new Subaru with the advanced safety system (EyeSight) that is designed to help prevent collisions and hopefully keep me and my family safer, especially as I get older. On a recent trip to Western Massachusetts it was raining very hard and I got a warning, the system shut down. On the return trip everything was fine. My question is: did the system malfunction, get wet or doesn't it work when I may need it the most? The dealer just shrugged off the question.

Like many newer cars the pre-collision system uses a system of sensors, cameras or a combination of both. I have driven many Subaru vehicles in all kinds of weather and found that as good as they are, the advanced safety features are not perfect in all weather conditions. Not surprisingly snow is a problem if the cameras get covered. This is the same for heavy rain or even very bright sun. There is nothing wrong with your car; these pre-collision systems have limitations. Over time they continue to get better, but no system yet takes the place of an engaged fully aware driver.

I recently purchased a 2015 Toyota Corolla and own a small Sunfish sail boat. I also have a small utility trailer. I used to tow both with my previous car which was mid-sized and had a V-6 engine. When I asked the dealer about towing with the Corolla they advised against it and suggested buy a truck.

According to the Toyota parts supplier website the 2015 Corolla has a surprising towing capacity of 1,500 pounds. With a properly installed trailer hitch you should be able to safely tow your trailers.

I have a Chevy Tahoe that is setting a P0305 code. I replaced the fuel filter, plugs and wires. Now it seems as if I have no compression in one cylinder. It is running very rough and sounds like an idling cement truck. When driving above 50-55 miles per hour it rides fine. Below that speed it jerks uncontrollably, begins to hesitate, then stalls. What could it be? If it is the engine that is bad, does it make sense just swap the engine?

The first thing you need to do it determine if in fact there is low compression in one or more cylinders. The code is telling you the issue is with cylinder 5. A compression test or cylinder leak-down test will better determine what is wrong. From this point you should be able to determine if it is a lack of compression due to a valve or piston failure. The repair could be a valve-job or engine rebuild. Depending on the overall condition of the truck, a used engine might be the most economical repair.

I have a 2010 Honda CR-V with 4-wheel drive and about 106,500 miles. When I am traveling at around the 35-40 mph there is a loud rumbling/vibration noise. It doesn't happen when the car is accelerating from a stop and doesn't seem to be there at highway speeds. The noise/rumble is just when slightly pushing the gas at 35-40 mph. The noise does not come from the engine area and it seems like it comes from the rear of the car. Any ideas?

I would start with an overall diagnosis of the vehicle. This should include a performance test of the engine. Something as simple as a slight engine misfire that might be enough to cause a slight shudder but not enough to set a check engine light. The other possibility is there is an internal transmission failure. Some Honda models (CR-V is one) had an internal failure that caused a fracture of a shaft support bearing/ring. The other less expensive issue is the rear differential fluid may need changing or may have been changed without using Honda fluid. A good technician should be able to find the source of the rumbling noise.

I have a question regarding a white film that I have on my windshield and I can't seem to remove. The car is a 1999 Mercury Sable, I have replaced the wiper blades, tried windshield clay, extra fine steel wool, and Auto Glass Stripper. Nothing has worked, the white film remains. I am wondering if it could have been from wiper blades that might have scored the windshield? I don't know what else to try and wanted to reach out to you to see if you had any suggestions?

I have seen this happen before when bug and tar remover is used on windshield glass. A chemical in the cleaner etches the glass and causes a milky streak. You may find the only answer is replacing the windshield.

I have a 2013 Ford Edge and the brake pedal will go to floor but not all the time. The first time I had brake power booster replaced under a recall in late 2016. In 2017 I had the same problem with the brake pedal and they replaced the power booster again about a year from the first replacement. Now about six months later the same thing happened, and the dealer tested the car and couldn't find any problems. I know it is not the master brake cylinder because when they changed the booster they would have noticed leakage. My problem is you don't know when this will happen, I looked online and found the Ford Edge has had over 300 brake problems and some of the those had the same problem as I do. Any solutions, answers or what is my next avenue.

The brake booster was replaced due to a tear in the diaphragm that initially causes a low pedal and when it gets worse it causes a hard pedal. I'm not convinced the master cylinder is not faulty. It is possible that the seals are leaking internally and causing the pedal to drop. If this happens and you pump the brake pedal and the height comes up I believe the master-cylinder is the issue.

I saw your article in the paper where a person was talking about their 2012 Honda Pilot. I have the same vibration problem with a 2012 Honda Civic. The local mechanic told me he felt the tires wore badly and is causing the vibration, he rotated them and now it's worse. They checked over everything and could not find anything wrong. The noise is very loud like there is something dragging. Now I am thinking that there are more of us with this vibration issue on 2012 Honda models. What do you think?

The loud noise is likely from the badly worn/cupped tires. When the tires were rotated the noise travelled which tells me that it is a tire noise. At this point I would carefully inspect the steering and suspension system. The technician should pay special attention to the rear strut mounts which historically have had some issues. At this point I would consider replacing the tires and having the car aligned. I would also rotate the tires as recommend by Honda – about every 10,000 miles.

I'm a 70-year-old widow and in February I traded in my 2011 Mercedes wagon for a 2016 Mercedes. I purchased this new model because it had all the latest safety features, which I hope makes it a safer car to drive. The car only had 26 miles on it and it had a four-year warranty and great financing. The bad news is that it also has low profile tires on it. In the past months I have had to replace the two right side tires twice due to poor roads and potholes (I drive to Connecticut and New York quite a bit). People have suggested snow tires or changing the wheels installing regular tires. I don't want to do anything that could void the warranty and I'd like your opinion on how to proceed.

The tires are most likely a 40 series low profile tire. Tires like this are very susceptible to damage from poorly maintained roads and bumping curbs. There is an optional tire with a smaller wheel and larger tire that keeps the same overall tire diameter, that may help. Changing all four wheels and tires will be an expensive solution and it may only offer a marginal improvement. As you vary from the factory recommendation you start to re-engineer the vehicle which can have a negative effect on overall handling and potentially could affect the warranty.

JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

I like driving a manual shift car and really want my next car to be a stick-shift. The problem is my husband doesn't know how to drive a car with a clutch and thinks the whole idea is stupid. What are your thoughts about stick-shifts and would you own one?

I think everyone should know how to drive a stick-shift and it would certainly cut down on texting and other distractions while driving. There are very few things that I enjoy more than driving a car with a manual transmission, unless I'm stuck in a two-hour traffic jam. For most people automatic transmissions are the best choice. Perhaps your next car could be an automatic transmission with a manual mode or you could buy a used Mazda Miata for a "fun" car.

We own a 1992 Pontiac 4-door sedan that seems to shudder and slip lately when I accelerate. This happens more first thing in the morning and gets a little better later in the day. Hard acceleration is strangely okay, it is more as I gradually speed up. What do you think it could be?

There are many problems that match your description. It could be the transmission slipping, so I would start with an inspection of the fluid level and condition. The problem could also be ignition or fuel related. At this point check all the basics and then consider having the car evaluated by a professional technician. At 26 years old unless the car is in very good condition, I would carefully consider how much you spend on repairs.

The check engine light comes on and then off and it is now back on. I had a test done at local auto parts store that showed a code of PO138. They told me this indicates a problem with the oxygen sensor, which I purchased and installed. I replaced the oxygen sensor and the light never went out. I contacted the mechanic that services my vehicle when I can't, and he said codes don't always indicate what is wrong. Now what do I do?

Computer fault codes can sometimes be misleading, even to the best technician. There is a specific trouble shooting procedure that needs to be followed for correct diagnosis and repair. The sensor will never work correctly if the wiring to and from the sensor have a problem. A technician will usually check for proper voltage and grounds to the sensor. Even a new sensor with a faulty ground circuit will not function properly.

I have a 10-year old Toyota and the high beam bulbs have a much shorter life than the low beam bulbs. This doesn't make sense since I only use the high-beams on my car maybe 10 percent of the time. Any idea what is going on?

The first test that needs to be performed is to measure the voltage at the bulbs, higher than normal voltage will certainly cause short bulb life. You never mentioned what model Toyota you have but some Avalon models had this problem and it was remedied with a new bulb and headlight housing.

I own a Range Rover and from time to time the "infotainment" system just seems to reset while driving down the road. I paid over $80,000 for this luxury SUV and I don't expect it to "reboot" at 70 miles per hour. What is going on?

More than ever today's vehicles are mobile computer systems, with massive computer power and in some case their own IP addresses and Wi-Fi hot spots. I have had similar issues in many makes and models and perhaps it is just a result of my age, but we may be putting too much technology in vehicles today. In 2016 Range Rover there was a similar issue that the screen would go blank and it was repaired with updated software. Return to the dealer and have them check if there are software updates to remedy this problem. Today it seems as if more vehicles get fixed with software updates than replacement parts.

Meet Quincy's Newest Police Officers: Q & A

Officer Michael McNeil

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

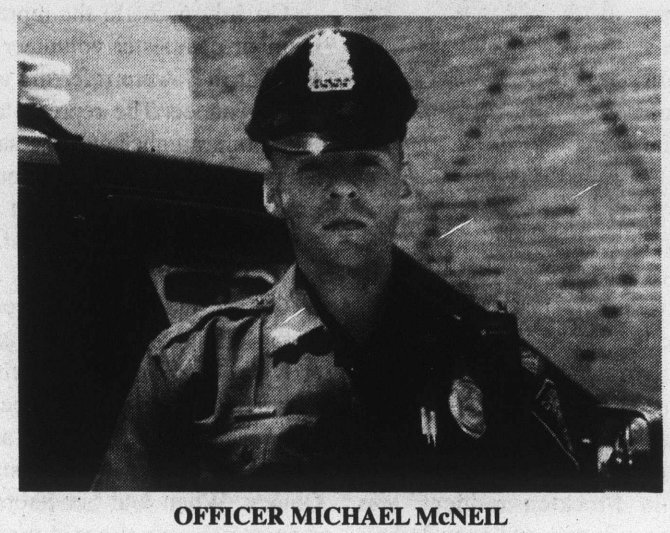

Over the course of the next few weeks, we will introduce our six newest officers that graduated from the MBTA Transit Academy on April 27.

At this point, all have completed the in-house portion of their field training (rules, regulations, etc.). They have now moved into one of the most important aspects of policing – street patrol. Each new officer is assigned to a field training officer who will help them get to know the city and how we, as a department, operate.

We've asked each of them to answer a few questions to help you get to know him a little better.

Please meet Officer Michael McNeil. Officer McNeil is currently in the Unites States Marine Corps Reserve. Oorah!

Q: Why did you want to become a police officer? When did you realize that it was what you wanted to do?

OFFICER MICHAEL McNEIL

A: I wanted to give back to the community that gave a lot to me. I realized this when I met a Quincy police officer when I was 10.

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

A: Fishing, hiking, shooting, and exercising.

Q: What's the best advice you have ever received and who gave it to you?

A: Mind over Matter – If you don't mind, it don't matter. It was given to me by my Gunnery Sergeant Lopez.

Q: What was the last book you read?

A: The Last Stand of Fox Company.

Q: What do you think will be the hardest part of this job?

A: Learning the community and parts of the city I did not spend time in while growing up. Even though I have lived in Quincy for over 20 years, there are parts of the city that I'm unfamiliar with.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the police academy?

A: Firearms training.

Officer Timothy Duggan

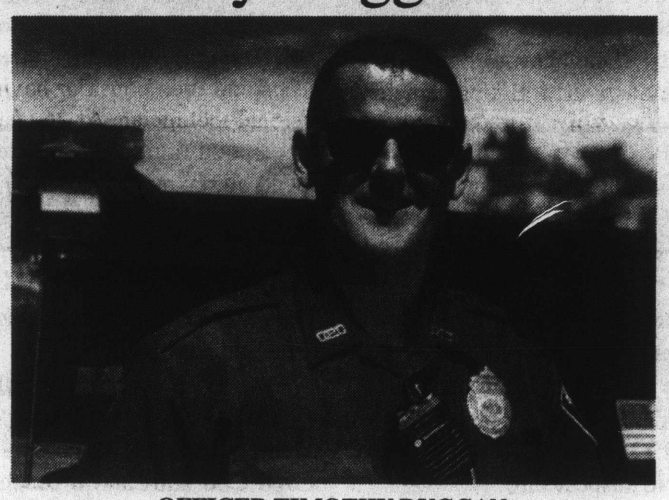

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

As part of the ongoing effort to introduce our newest police officers, we introduce Officer Timothy Duggan.

Officer Duggan served four years active duty in the United States Air Force before joining the Quincy Police Department

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

A: Going to the beach, playing hockey, and spending time with my family. (Sounds like he'll be a good addition for the next QPD vs. QFD charity hockey game!)

OFFICER TIMOTHY DUGGAN

Q: What the best advice you ever received and who gave it to you?

A: Don't sweat the small stuff - my mother.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the academy?

A: Applied Patrol Procedures because it helped me apply what I was taught.

Officer Matthew Benvie

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

Next up for introduction is Officer Matthew Benvie. Matt served 13 years in the United States Army.

Q: Why did you want to become a police officer and when did you realize that it was what you wanted to do?

A: To better serve my community and to have a positive impact with the citizens of Quincy. I realized I wanted to become an officer in high school.

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

A: Running, hiking, and traveling.

Q: What's the best advice you have ever received?

A: To listen more, talk less.

Q: What was the last book you read?

OFFICER MATTHEW BENVIE

A: Confederacy of Dunces.

Q: What do you think will be the toughest part of the job?

A: Knowing the territory.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the academy?

A: Emergency Vehicle Operations Course (EVOC). EVOC is a driver-training program that provides recruits with the special driving skills required to operate a vehicle under very demanding police patrol conditions.

Q: What is something interesting about yourself that others may not know?

A: I am one of 8 kids. (And we've heard at least one has also sworn to protect and serve.)

Officer Paul Farina

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

As part of the ongoing effort to introduce our newest police officers, we introduce Officer Paul Farina. Officer Farina served eight years active duty service in the United States Army.

Q: Why did you want to become a police officer? When did you realize that is what you wanted to do?

A: I wanted to become a police officer to serve the community I grew up in. realized I wanted to become a police officer while in high school.

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

A: Reading and traveling.

Q: What is the best advice you have ever received and who gave it to you?

A: Don't go to sleep angry – my father.

OFFICER PAUL FARINA

Q: What was the last book you read?

A: Into Thin Air.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the Police Academy and why?

A: Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure because they showed me the dos and don'ts of the job.

Q: What is something you are most proud of?

A: To be the first member of my family to become law enforcement.

Officer Kenneth 'Cody' Stanley

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

As part of the ongoing effort to introduce our newest police officers, we introduce Officer Kenneth "Cody" Stanley.

Officer Stanley served eight years active duty service in the United States Air Force.

Q: Why did you become a police officer?

A: I've always wanted to help people since I was a young kid.

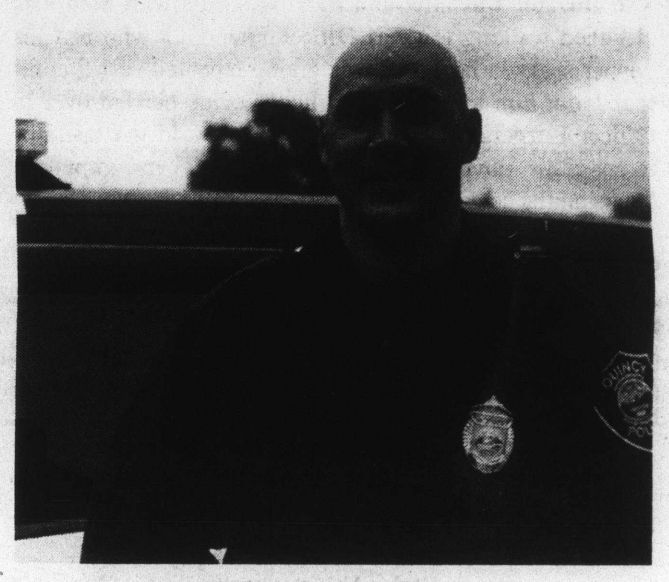

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

A: Golfing.

Q: What the best advice you ever received and who gave it to you?

A: Always find something positive in every situation - my father.

Q: What was the last book you read?

OFFICER KENNETH STANLEY

A: Lone Survivor.

Q: What do you think will be the hardest part of this job?

A: Dealing with an animal or child that has been hurt or lost.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the academy?

A: Emergency Vehicle Operations Course (EVOC). EVOC is a driver-training program that provides recruits with the special driving skills required to operate a vehicle under very demanding police patrol conditions.

Officer Kevin Adams

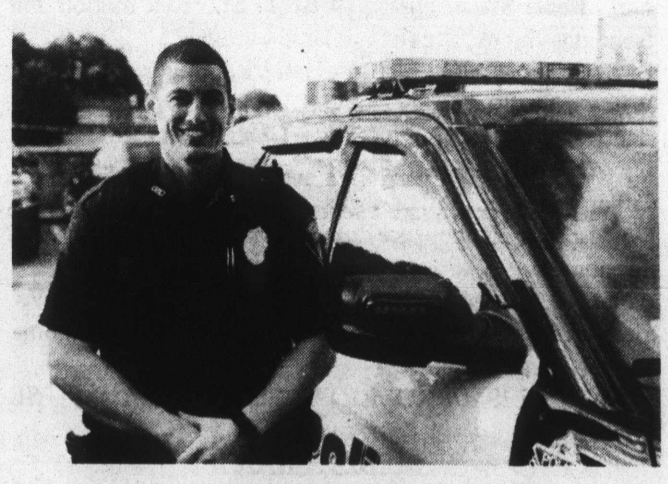

By Sgt.
KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Dept.

Last, but certainly not least, we introduce Officer Kevin Adams. Officer Adams recently finished his field training and is assigned to the overnight patrol division. Prior to joining the Quincy Police Department, he worked five years at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Q: Why did you want to become a police officer? When did you realize that was what you wanted to do?

A: Started to realize I wanted to become an officer in high school. I wanted to make a difference and help the community.

Q: What activities do you enjoy on your time off?

OFFICER KEVIN ADAMS

A: Going to the gym, playing and watching sports, and walking my dog.

Q: What do you think will be the toughest part of this job?

A: Being new and learning how to do the job.

Q: What was your favorite subject in the academy and why?

A: Criminal Law - learning about all the different laws and elements.

Q: What is something you are most proud of?

A: Completing the academy and becoming a police officer.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, July 6, at approximately 6 p.m., Officers David Levine, Lisa Devine and Sean Fitzgerald were dispatched to the area of Elm Avenue and Phillips Street on a report of a motor vehicle accident.

While en route to the location, Communications informed the responding units the suspect vehicle was attempting to flee but due to the damage it could not be driven away. Another update stated the suspect vehicle was now parked on Willow Street.

Officers Levine and Officer Fitzgerald arrived on scene and began interviewing three individuals around the suspect vehicle, which had heavy front-end damage along with the passenger side of the front windshield smashed. When asked who was driving, a male stated, "I was the driver but it was not my fault." He added a male passenger who was sitting in the back seat reached over his shoulder and grabbed the steering wheel causing him to crash into the rear end of another vehicle. He identified this person and said that he did not know where he went.

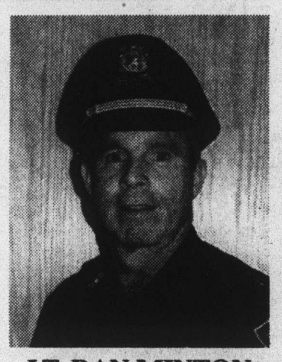

Within a few minutes, Officer Devine radioed she had the suspect detained on Hancock Street at Elm Avenue. She examined the passenger and saw that he had minor injuries and was highly intoxicated so Brewster Ambulance was requested.

Officer Levine questioned the other two passengers and they confirmed the passenger did grab the steering wheel causing the crash. These two passengers also had minor injuries but were being belligerent and confrontational when offered medical treatment.

Officer Levine then turned his attention to the operator, who was very unsteady on his feet with the moderate smell of an alcoholic beverage emanating from his breath. His eyes were bloodshot and glassy with pinpoint pupils. He was talking nonsensical and hard to understand due to his slurred speech.

As Officer Levine was filing his report, he heard Officer Fitzgerald raise his voice ordering the driver to get back. The operator was now in a fighting stance with both fists clenched walking towards Officer Fitzgerald who had his pepper spray in hand and was giving repeated verbal commands for him to get back. Officer Levine hurried over to Officer Fitzgerald's position and he too told the operator to cease his movement towards the Officers and to put his hands on the car.

The operator then put his hands on the vehicle and when Officer Fitzgerald attempted to handcuff him, the operator clenched his fists and began actively resisting. He was given verbal commands several times to stop resisting and then with fists clenched and a crazed look in his eyes, he turned toward the officers.

LT. DAN MINTON

Fearing an attack, Officer Levine took out his baton and struck the driver in the calf area of his right leg. After three to four strikes, the operator stopped his forward movement/assaultive behavior and was handcuffed. During this encounter, the other two individuals began closing in on the two officers almost to the point of interfering.

The operator, a 34-year-old Brockton resident, was charged with operating under the influence of liquor/2nd offense, reckless operation of a motor vehicle, leaving scene of property damage and marked lanes violation. The driver's vehicle was towed and held for 18 hours due to the OUI charge.

Once back at the station, the driver continued being combative so he was unable to be booked or to take the breathalyzer.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Monday, July 9, at approximately 8 a.m., Detective Mark Folan and Anti Crime Officer Ryan Donnelly met with a local church representative concerning a possible larceny. The representative said she is a volunteer for the church outreach group and believed that a female suspect defrauded the church of $295 in Stop & Shop gift cards by using different identities.

The purpose of the cards were to provide food for those who have no money.

The officers met with the representative who stated on June 1, 2018, a woman identifying herself as a Rose White (false name) of Quincy reached out to the outreach group for assistance. After a short interview, Ms. White was given $295 in Stop & Shop gift cards to help her.

On June 15, 2018, a woman named Brennock (false name) contacted the outreach group for assistance, but the representative recognized the phone number as the same phone number that Ms. White used. The representative believed this was suspicious so she told them they couldn't offer assistance at this time.

On July 6, 2018, the representative was contacted by a member of a sister volunteer group from Bellingham stating that they were referring a woman to the Quincy group for assistance. The representative immediately recognized the phone number was the same as the one for White and Brennock. Based on the information available, the officers proceeded to a Greene Street address given by White, however, the address didn't exist. The address given by Brennock didn't exist either.

Officer Donnelly then researched the referral's name from Bellingham and found an address in Weymouth. Upon arrival, Detective Folan confirmed the vehicle in the driveway as the same name as the Bellingham referral. The officers went to the front door and were met by a female. She denied ever requesting assistance from a church group in Quincy. When told her phone number was being used to scam the church, she said she let her niece use her phone for a month, adding that her niece was "in a bad way" without elaborating or providing an address to locate her.

The officers returned to the station to research identities when the church representative called to inform them the female from Weymouth had just called and left a message that she was just getting out of court and if it was possible to meet today for assistance. Detective Folan directed the representative to set up an appointment with the female, who the officers thought was the Weymouth female's niece using her aunt's name as an alias. The plan was for the representative to meet with the female at 12:15 p.m. and give her a $50 gift card after a brief interview. The officers would then enter the room and question the female.

While conducting surveillance for the female or the niece to arrive, they spotted the Weymouth female who they met at her residence (and blamed her niece) walking toward their unmarked police cruiser. The female looked inside the cruiser and recognized Officer Donnelly, so she kept walking. The officers watched as the female walked back to her vehicle, the same one that was in her driveway. The officers approached the female and asked her to join them in the church to meet with the representative, to which she agreed. She still denied any knowledge of what was hap-

Step 4 Sermon Subject Sunday At Quincy Community United Methodist Church

The "Christianity and the 12 Steps" sermon series at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, is held Sunday mornings during the 10:30 a.m. worship.

"One at a time, we will equate each Step with relevant scriptural passages from the Bible," said Rev. Rebecca Baumann, church pastor. "Our desire is to support recovery in our local community and to inform all who come to worship with us.

"We will follow our regular order of worship. Of note, we offer Holy Communion at the "end of each service. Within the United Methodist Church all persons are invited to partake of the celebration of the bread and the cup. Our denomination uses only grape juice as part of our ritual.

"Of note: Welch's grape juice was created on behalf of the Methodist church that we may be sensitive to those who are not able to partake of wine."

The public is invited to attend the sermon series. This week, July 22, the series focuses on Step 4: "Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves."

Future dates of importance to this series:

July 29th - Lt. Det. Patrick Glynn of the Quincy Police Department will speak following worship to share Quincy's historic institution of the use of Narcan, explain what Narcan is and how it is administered, and provide hands-on demonstrations of its use. The public is invited to attend at 11:30 a.m. in Fellowship Hall

September 23rd - The culmination for the series will be held with the annual Celebration of Recovery Weekend and Worship Service.

QCUMC, located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston, daily opens its doors for Recovery Group meetings. A minimum of 12 separate groups meet in the church building. The Recovery groups meeting at QCUMC include: AA, Al-Anon, GA, AWOL groups as well as gender specific men's and women's groups.

For more information, contact the church pastor, Rev. Becky Baumann, at the church office by calling 617-773-3319.

RELIGION

Bethany Congregational Church

'Christianity And The 12 Steps' Sermon Series Continues At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will continue its Summer Sermon series of "Christianity and the 12-Steps" during the 10:30 a.m. Sunday morning worship service.

Sunday, July 29th the series will focus on Step 5: "Admitted to God, ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs."

The Quincy Police Department is nationally known for its innovation and promotion of the use of Narcan in helping those who struggle with the experience of opioid addiction and possible overdose.

"As a community of faith that is dedicated to opening our doors to Recovery Programs we are aware of many of the struggles of those who come into our building seeking hope and assistance," said Rev. Rebecca Baumann, church pastor. "In light of the opioid crisis, we have invited Lt. Det. Patrick Glynn of the Quincy Police Department to speak about the crisis and the Quincy Police Department's steps to address this problem."

Lt. Detective Glynn will join the church gathering at 11:30 a.m., following worship to provide a lecture and information regarding the history and use of Narcan. He will bring samples and provide a hands-on demonstration as to how to administer Narcan. Lt. Det. Glynn will follow up his lecture with a question and answer period.

The event is open to the public. The public is invited to join in worship at 10:30 a.m. and/or in Fellowship Hall at 11:30 a.m. for this presentation.

OBITUARIES

Carmen Cook, 92

A funeral service for Carmen "Cookie" (Gomez Garcia) Cook, 92, of Quincy was held July 12 in the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy

Mrs. Cook died July 7.

Born in Alcaudete, Spain, where she was raised and educated, she lived in Quincy for 40 years and prior to that in Boston and New Jersey. She worked in South Boston for 20 years making electronics for computers.

CARMEN COOK

The beloved wife of the late Frederick H. Cook, Mrs. Cook was the loving mother of Rosa Pierce and her husband Ted of Carver and Mary Arruda of Brockton; stepmother of Maryjane D'Orazio; dear grandmother of Christine Pierce, Ted Pierce, Jr., Lori Pierce and Jesse Arruda; great-grandmother of Elizabeth Pierce, Tyler DeAndrade, Jenna Pierce and Sienna Pierce; and is also survived by family in Spain.

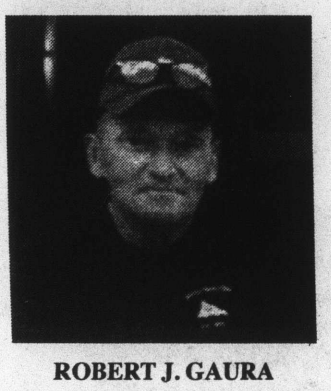

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 309 Waverley Oaks Rd., Waltham, MA 02452 alz.org.

Robert J. Gaura, 78

A celebration of life for Robert James "Fish" Gaura, 78, will be held Friday from noon to 4 p.m. in the Tirrell Room, Quincy.

Mr. Gaura was born Jan. 19, 1940 and died peacefully July 10 surrounded by his beloved wife Rosemary of 56 years and his daughters.

ROBERT J. GAURA

Loving father of Robyn Gaura-Stratton and her husband Brian of Rockland, Rosemarie Grady and her husband Mark of Hull, Rachelle Gaura of Billerica, Renee Vangestel and William of Quincy, Randi Bertoni and her husband Jonathan of Quincy and Rhonda Gaura and Gregory Reynolds of Quincy. Proud grandfather of Jessica, Mark and Amanda Grady, Samantha, Shaylen and Liam Vangestel.

Mr. Gaura was a schoolteacher in the Boston Public Schools for 35 years, spending his summers as a lobsterman and clam digger. Member of the Quincy Yacht Club and Quincy Elks. Mr. Gaura loved the ocean, playing keno and golfing with Barney. He treasured his Gaura girls, his grandchildren and especially his wife. He will truly be missed by all but never forgotten.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Louise A. Kearns

A funeral Mass for Louise A. "Lulu" (Keddie) Kearns of Quincy was celebrated July 14 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Kearns died July 9.

Beloved wife of 53 years to the late John F. Kearns Sr. Loving mother of John F. "Jack" Kearns, Jr. and his wife Margaret of Weymouth, Francis X. "Bud" Kearns and his wife Nancy of Quincy and the late Alexander "Sandy" Kearns who died in infancy. Cherished Lulu to 10 grandchildren and Nana Lu to 24 great-grandchildren. She is the last survivor of 6 children of Alexander and Louise Keddie. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Kearns was born in Charlestown and graduated from Charlestown High School. She later moved to Quincy where she has lived for the past 63 years. She was a longtime supervisor at Filene's Basement. She was a devout Catholic and devoted to saying the rosary daily, she also volunteered at St. John's Church in the '90s. Mrs. Kearns was active in the Quincy senior clubs and enjoyed spending time with friends and family. Her main passion in life was her family. She will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

LOUISE A. KEARNS

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at fightcf.cff.org.

Sarah Murphy Ogar, 88

A funeral Mass for Sarah Murphy Ogar, 88, of Quincy was celebrated Wednesday in St. Joseph's Church, Holbrook.

Mrs. Ogar died July 12.

Born in Gracefield, County Offaly, Ireland, she moved to the U.S. at the age of 16 and was a resident of Quincy for 7 years. She worked as a certified nursing assistant at Quincy Hospital. Sarah enjoyed playing cards, knitting, and visiting family in Ireland.

Loving mother of Carolyn Olson and her husband Steve of Halifax, Diane Galizio and her husband Jerry of Norton, Marie Ogar of Woonsocket, RI, Francis Ogar and his wife Judi of Holbrook, and Kevin Ogar and his wife Kathleen of Randolph. Dear sister of John Murphy of FL, Francis Murphy and Peter Murphy, both of Rockland, Mary Gaul of Kingston, Patrick Murphy of IN, Cathy Rogers of Weymouth, and the late Michael and Charles Murphy. Also survived by 7 grandchildren.

Interment at Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hurley Funeral Home, Holbrook.

Louise V. Mackiewicz

A funeral Mass for Louise V. "Lucy" Mackiewicz of Braintree, formerly of Squantum, was celebrated Wednesday in Our Lady of Czestochowa Parish, Boston.

Mrs. Mackiewicz died July 12, surrounded by her loving family, after a lengthy illness.

She was born in Boston to Alfons and Veronica Rozanski on July 31, 1930. She grew up in Dorchester and was a graduate of the Jeremiah Burke School for Girls. Mrs. Mackiewicz is survived by her devoted husband of 65 years Carl J. Mackiewicz who loved her dearly. She is also survived by her children Thomas G. Mackiewicz and his wife Susan of Ogunquit, ME, John A. Mackiewicz and his wife Joyce of Pelham, NH, Christine M. Cunningham and her husband David of Braintree, and James F. Mackiewicz of Milton, NH.

She was the loving "Babci" to her grandchildren Kayla Mackiewicz, Audrey Rogers, Kurt Rogers, Jason Mackiewicz, Michael Gilbert, Rachael Gilbert, and Kevin Cunningham. She was predeceased by her sister Helen Laskowski and her husband Dominic. She is also survived by her niece Regina Laskowski, and nephews Andrew Laskowski, and Richard Laskowski.

Mrs. Mackiewicz worked many years at the Boilermakers Local 29. She was an avid gardener who not only kept her own property full of color and life, but would show up at her children's homes with trowel in hand, ready to dig. She also was an excellent baker and interfered with everyone's diet by bringing cakes and pastries to their home despite it not being a birthday or holiday. Her arrival alone made it a celebration.

LOUISE V. MACKIEWICZ

After her husband, children, and grandchildren, Mrs. Mackiewicz's biggest love was travel. She belonged to the Krakowiak Polish Dance group which is where she met Carl. She then joined the Krakowiak Singers, who toured all across Poland, Switzerland, and Italy. While in Rome, devoted Catholic Mrs. Mackiewicz had an audience with Pope John Paul II. Along with Carl, she cruised the rivers of Eastern Europe, Alaska, and the Mississippi, as well as the Panama Canal. Together they traveled the world and did their best to see all there was to see.

Mrs. Mackiewicz will best be remembered for her feisty personality and sharp wit. She had a great infectious laugh. Most people who knew her well marveled at her toughness: Mrs. Mackiewicz battled so many health issues yet maintained her optimistic and cheery personality throughout. She was a strong and unique person, the likes of which had she never been born, we would have to invent her because there was never another quite like her.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association at alz.org.

Kathryn C. Reed, 104

Funeral and interment services for Kathryn Cecilia (Brace) Reed, age 104, were private.

Mrs. Reed died July 1.

Originally from Brockton, she was a resident of Squantum since 1947.

Devoted wife of Robert Reed (deceased) for 51 years. Loving Mom to Captain Peter J. Reed (Ret.) and Robert B. "Toby" Reed and his partner "Little" Marilyn Vardaro.

Mrs. Reed adored her home, yard and doggies. She loved mowing with her electric start power mower, using her dust mop, hanging her clothes on her line, and keeping twinkly clean windows. She spent evenings singing with company by the blazing fireplace, with an occasional glass of vino.

KATHRYN C. REED

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

I. Natalie Batchelder, 101

Funeral services for I. Natalie (MacCormack) Batchelder, age 101, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, will be held at 11 a.m. Friday in Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy.

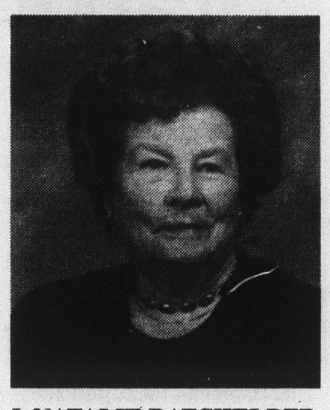

Mrs. Batchelder died peacefully Sunday.

She was born in Boston, raised and educated in Quincy schools and was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 1934. She had lived in Weymouth for sixty-eight years.

As a young woman, she worked as a bookkeeper in Boston's banking industry and later for the Proctor and Gamble Company in Quincy. After raising her children, Mrs. Batchelder returned to school to become a licensed nursing home administrator and was employed in several facilities owned and managed by the late Dr. I. Edelstein. After retirement, she worked as a bookkeeper for the law firm, Levin and Levin in Quincy for many years.

Mrs. Batchelder was a lifelong active member of the Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy and over the years had served on various committees. She was the oldest member of the church and was recently honored on the occasion of her 100th birthday. She was also a volunteer Girl Scout leader in Weymouth for many years.

She enjoyed arts and crafts and was a talented seamstress making clothes for her daughters. Most of all, Mrs. Batchelder was dedicated to her family and especially to her cherished grandchildren.

I. NATALIE BATCHELDER

Beloved wife of the late Henry C. "Harry" Batchelder, Jr. Devoted mother of Gail L. Batchelder and her husband Philip E. Warner of Hampden, MA and Lynne S. Batchelder and her husband David J. Wilbur of Sterling, MA. Loving grandmother of Scott H.B. Wilbur and his partner M. Philip Tooley of Sheffield, UK and Gregory C.B. Wilbur and his wife April M. Huie of New York. Cherished daughter of the late I. Louise (Evans) MacCormack. She is also survived by many cousins, including the Glynn family of Quincy.

Pastor Emeritus, Reverend William C. Harding III will officiate.

At the request of the family, visiting hours have been omitted.

Interment at Village Cemetery, Weymouth.

Memorial donations may be made to MSPCA-Angell, 350 S. Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02130.

Arrangements under the direction of the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Elizabeth M. Shea

A Mass of Christian Burial for Elizabeth M. (Shields) Shea of Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mrs. Shea died July 11.

Beloved wife of the late James X. Shea. Loving mother of Kathleen Carroll and her husband William of Duxbury, James X. Shea, Jr. and his wife Debra of Norwell, Neil Shea and his wife Lorraine of Marshfield and Carolyn Coyne and her husband Kevin of Marshfield. Sister of Joseph Shields and his wife Ruth of Walpole, John Shields and his wife Martha of Harwich, Kathleen Lovett and her husband William of Milton and the late William Shields. Sister-in-law of Joan Shields of Woburn. Cherished grandmother of Elizabeth, William and Brendan Carroll, Jimmy and Madison Shea, Brandon, Patrick, Neil and Rachael Shea and Sarah and Caity Coyne.

Mrs. Shea was born and raised in Dorchester and later settled with her husband in Quincy. She enjoyed gardening, reading and spending time with her friends and family, especially her grandchildren who were the cornerstone of her life. She will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known her.

Interment at Milton Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan Funeral Home, East Milton.

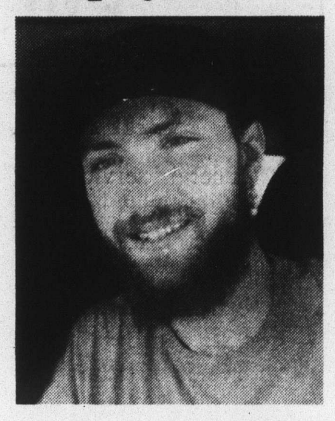

Michael P. Murphy, 23

A funeral Mass for Michael P. Murphy, 23, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Murphy died unexpectedly July 9 surrounded by his family.

Beloved son of Mary Ellen Murphy of Quincy and Paul Murphy of Whitman. Favorite brother of Kristen Chaput of Quincy. Cherished grandson to the late Mary and Norman (Grampy) Chaput and William (Papa) and Dorothy (Nana) Murphy. Adored nephew to Teresa and Randy, Kathy, Jimmy, Rich and Betty, Paul and Donna, Nancy, Billy, Denise and Doug. Awesome cousin of Christina, Jessica, Dean, Eric, Mary, Christopher and Mary Ann, Nicole and Jim, Colin and Kyle. Also survived by a wonderful crew of friends.

Mr. Murphy was a lifelong resident of Quincy. He received his Bachelor's degree from UMass Dartmouth. #430. He had a passion for longboarding and was a member of the Boston LB. He was a car enthusiast; founder of Carma Crew, member of Masstuning and South Shore Tuning.

MICHAEL P. MURPHY

Mr. Murphy loved all people and always had kind things to say about everyone he met. He will always be remembered for his sense of humor, outgoing personality, and the kindness he showed to all. Mr. Murphy's other passion was to be around his friends and family. He will be sadly missed by all those who had the privilege of knowing him.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Michael P. Murphy Scholarship Fund and sent to Eastern Bank, 34 Chapman St., Quincy, MA 02170.

Josephine A. Lee, 82

A funeral Mass for Josephine A. (DiPerri) Lee, 82, of Quincy, will be celebrated Friday at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Lee died July 14.

She adored her family, especially her grandchildren. She enjoyed playing bingo, Texas hold'em, and loved to dance. She worked as a personal care assistant for many years in local nursing homes. Mrs. Lee was a funny and generous woman who had a big heart. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

Beloved wife of Coleman Lee of Quincy. Cherished mother of Paul Healy and his wife Joanne of Rockland, Thomas Healy of West Palm Beach, FL, James Healy and his wife Lisa of Quincy, and the late Glenn Healy. Loving sister of Jenny O'Hearn of NJ and the late Charles DiPerri, Phyllis Lauretano, Mary Classi, Eleanor Hopton, Rosemary Vanseghi, her twin brother Salvatore DiPerri, and Jimmy DiPerri. Devoted "Nannie" of Alison, Max, Kevin, Jack, Danielle, Cameron, Mia, Glenn, Alivea, and Lola Rose Healy. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours are 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held in the funeral home at 9 a.m. Friday.

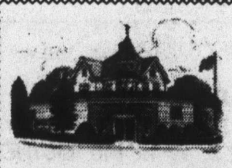

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to The Jimmy Fund c/o Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, PO Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284-9168.

Quincy Adams T Parking Rates Rising $2 Sept. 1

By SCOTT JACKSON

The cost to park at the Quincy Adams and Braintree MBTA stations will increase this summer, though the increase will be less than originally announced and will begin one month later.

The MBTA's Fiscal Management and Control Board on Monday announced the weekday rate at the two stations will increase from $7 to $9 effective Sept. 1. The transit agency had originally said the rate at the two stations would increase to $10 effective Aug. 1. Local officials and residents, however, pushed back against that proposal, causing the T to revisit the plan.

Sen. John Keenan, who represents Quincy and parts of Braintree on Beacon Hill, welcomed the T's decision not to raise the rate to $10.

"A few weeks ago I joined local legislators and government leaders to press the MBTA Control Board to reconsider proposed parking fee increases at Red Line stations in Quincy and Braintree. We met personally with the general manager, expressed our concerns, and pointed out that our constituents are already experiencing disruptions due to various projects," Keenan said.

"As a result of those efforts, the board reconsidered, and announced today they would not increase fees at the North Quincy and Wollaston stations, and would decrease the initially proposed increases at Quincy Adams and Braintree by 33 percent.

"With my fellow legislators, I will continue to work with the MBTA to ensure that impacts from the many construction, renovation and repair projects are minimized, and that the projects move towards completion as quickly as possible."

The T said changes to parking rates across the system were made in response to demand, with rates going up at busier stations and down at less busy ones. Alewife station, located on the other end of the Red Line in Cambridge, will see its parking rate increase to $10 as part of the plan, giving it the highest parking rate of any MBTA station.

OBITUARY

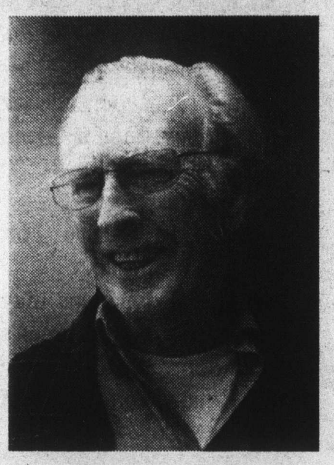

Robert J. Hunt, 83

A funeral service for Robert John Hunt, 83, of Milton, will be held Saturday, July 21 at 11 a.m. at the Hamel-Lydon Chapel and Cremation Service, 644 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Mr. Hunt died peacefully July 12 after a brief illness.

Bob Hunt was born to sail. Everything about him said water, wind, sea and sky – from his thick blonde hair that blew in the east wind, to his incredibly strong hands that held fast to canvas and rope, to his crystal blue eyes – the color of the sky on a perfect sailing day; everything about him pointed towards the water.

He was born on Sept. 2, 1934 in Quincy, the youngest of three sons of Thomas and N. Grace Hunt. Not long after graduating from Quincy High in 1953, Bob entered the U.S. Navy, no surprise for a guy who had grown up sailing with his father and brothers. He served two years active duty stateside and four years in the reserves.

In 1955 he started working for the Mason-Neilan Company in Dorchester. He completed a four-year apprenticeship and graduated as a Qualified Second Class Machinist.

In 1965, he married the love of his life, Katherine Marie Sacco of Milton. Bob and Katherine dated 13 years before getting married. He wanted to make sure he could provide a home for her. He took great pride in the fact he was able to buy a home in Dedham for cash before they married.

Bob and Katherine eventually moved to Milton. They did not have children, but did have four beloved Yorkies, who were their fur babies.

On sunny days with a good east wind, you would often find them and their pooches on board their boat the East Wind, sailing out of the Twin River Yacht Club in Quincy, where Bob was the second oldest and longest member there next to his older brother Harvey.

Katherine passed away in March of this year and it could be said Bob died of a broken heart.

Bob is predeceased by his parents and his brother Thomas of Quincy. He is survived by his brother Harvey and his wife Caryl of Quincy, his dedicated niece Patti Ann Leahy and her husband Robert of Quincy, as well as other dear relatives and friends.

Visitation will be held one hour before the start of his funeral service beginning at 10 a.m.

Burial will be in Milton Cemetery.

Sales Down, Average Property Price Rises In 2nd Quarter

real estate sales price, both residential and commercial, rose 13 percent to $876,136. Total real estate volume, again both residential and commercial, was $2.9 billion, a healthy 10 percent increase year over year."

Register O'Donnell further stated: "These second quarter figures also show an overall 3 percent reduction in the number of properties sold countywide from 4,979 compared to 5,113 for the same quarter of 2017. These stats clearly indicate that low inventory is driving up prices. No doubt it's a buyer's market, but at the same time it's also making it harder for first-time homeowners to crack the market."

For the second quarter 2018, the number of land documents recorded, (such as deeds, mortgages, Homesteads, mortgage discharges, etc.) was 37,314, a 6 percent drop-off from the previous year.

"This decline can be directly attributed to the reduction in real estate sales and the continuing challenges in the lending market," O'Donnell said.

There were 6,826 mortgages recorded at the Registry during the quarter compared to 7,255 for the same time period in 2017. Total mortgage borrowing was $4.0 billion for the second quarter compared to $3.7 billion during the 2nd quarter 2017.

"Currently, we are seeing an uptick in mortgage interest rates," O'Donnell noted. "We are approaching a 5 percent interest rate which, while historically a relatively low figure, has not been seen for several years. It will be interesting to see how consumers react if the 5 percent interest rate level is breached."

Norfolk County homeowners continued to benefit from the Homestead Act. A total of 3,353 Homesteads were recorded during the second quarter, a 6 percent decrease year over year.

"The Homestead law provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I urge Norfolk County residents to consider this important consumer protection tool," O'Donnell said.

Foreclosure activity in Norfolk County continued to show mixed results. A total of 48 foreclosure deeds were recorded versus 78 filed during the 2nd quarter of 2017. This good news was tempered by a significant 21 percent increase in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process.

"While the eastern Massachusetts economy remains strong, the foreclosure numbers tell us that there is a segment of the Norfolk County population facing economic hardship," O'Donnell said. The Registry continues to work with Quincy Community Action Programs, (617-479-8181 x376), and NeighborWorks Southern-Mass, (508-587-0950) to help homeowners who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage document. A third option is to contact the Massachusetts Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (CARD) at 617-727-8400.

"The key variable is available real estate inventory," O'Donnell said. "Until we see consistent growth, the housing market will remain challenged. Also, we need to see how prospective real estate buyers will react if interest rates, as anticipated, continue to rise."

Free Tours Saturday At 1686 Quincy Homestead

11 A.M. - 3 P.M., 34 Butler Rd.

The 1686 Dorothy Quincy Homestead will hold free guided tours of the historic house, gardens, and architecture on Saturday, July 21 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Guided tours will start on the half hour, with the last tour beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Learn more about the early settlers and their connections with the Quincy family, such as Judge Samuel Sewall of the 1692 Salem Witch Trials who in 1676 married Hannah Hull, the granddaughter of Edmund and Judith Quincy, the first Quincys to settle in New England in the 1630s.

What do the authors Oliver Wendell Holmes and Louisa May Alcott have in connection with the Quincy family line? Find the answers in the family tree of the Quincys. More family names surface when you visit the very house built in 1686 by Edmund Quincy II, who was the great, great grandfather of John Quincy Adams' mother, Abigail. Edmund was also the great grandfather of Dorothy Quincy-Hancock.

The Quincy Homestead still stands on the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road (34 Butler Rd). The Quincy Homestead was purchased in 1904 and historically restored by the National Society of Colonial Dames - Massachusetts. It is currently operated in public/private partnership with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (dcr), which beautifully maintains the property and the buildings.

Groups may request private tours by calling 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

pening, however she couldn't explain the message she left for the representative telling her she was just leaving the courthouse and she was on her way to the church.

This was in contradiction to her statement to the officers that she was there to find out what was going on. Once inside the church, the representative was with a co worker who gave out the check and she immediately confirmed that this was the same woman who identified herself as Rose White.

Based on the information available, the officers charged the 58-year-old female resident of Weymouth with one count of larceny by false pretense over $250.00. Information came in that this female also scammed a church in Weymouth and another one in Quincy so there may be additional charges coming.

Nice Work!

EMERGENCY VEHICLES APPROACHING

• Always yield the right-of-way to fire engines, ambulances, police cars, and other emergency vehicles that are using a siren and/or emergency flashing lights.

• If an emergency vehicle is coming from any direction, you must pull as close as possible to the right side of the road. Stop until the vehicle has passed. Slowly rolling is not acceptable.

• Check your mirrors and find a safe place to pull over to the right. You should not pull your vehicle to the left or slam on your brakes. Do not stop suddenly. Use your right turn signal.

• NEVER stop in the middle of an intersection. Drive through the intersection and pull over as soon as it is safe.

• After the emergency vehicle has passed, use your left turn signal and make sure the lane is clear. Then you can merge back into traffic.

• Double check to make sure that there are no other emergency vehicles responding.

It is illegal to follow closer than 300 feet behind an emergency vehicle responding to an alarm.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With new facts to work with, you should feel more confident in moving ahead. But continue to do so at an unhurried pace so you can spot details you might otherwise miss.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Taking on that new workplace project could be one of your smarter career moves. Expect a surprising show of support from someone who had always been a critic.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel you're too busy to undertake a new responsibility. But check it out before making any decisions. What you learn could persuade you to change your mind.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You feel quite content enjoying all the comforts of home right now. But the urge to travel grows stronger, and by week's end, you could begin packing your bags.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hectic period begins to ease up, but that doesn't mean the Fine Feline can do much catnapping these days. You need to finish those old tasks and prepare for new ones.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect to get some good news about your financial situation by week's end. But it could still be too early to rush out with a long shopping list of things to buy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your management skills make an impression on some workplace VIPs who might be looking for someone like you to take on an upcoming project. Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Meeting a former adversary might be unsettling at first. But time has softened hard feelings, and you could be on the brink of starting a new relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A troubling situation close to home might cause you to change your travel plans. But getting all the facts before you act might cause you to reconsider.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might be quite alone right now in deciding to support a major workplace shift. But others will join you as new information supports your bold move.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A former coworker returns with news that could persuade you to reassess recently made plans. Be sure to consult with a trusted colleague before you act.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your motives behind a recent decision could be called into question by a rival. But once you present the facts, all doubts will be resolved. Enjoy an arts-rich weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: While you love being the center of attention, your generous heart allows you to share the attention with others.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- "Beautiful Mind" Oscar-winner Russell Crowe will play Roger Ailes, the late Fox TV executive who single-handedly inspired the "me too" movement with his sexual harassment of Fox TV employees, in a Showtime limited series. The script is based on the book "The Loudest Voice In the Room" and includes as least two U.S. presidents.

Mark Wahlberg is one busy dude. In addition to "Mile 22," with John Malkovich and Ronda Rousey (opening Aug. 17), and "Instant Family," with Rose Byrne and "The Help" Oscar-winner Octavia Spencer (awaiting a release date), he's just committed to the Netflix film "Wonderland." It's the reboot of Robert Parker's "Spencer," which was a TV series with Robert Urich from 1985-1988 and the basis for most of Tom Selleck's "Jessie Spencer" films. It will be Wahlberg's fifth collaboration with director and former actor Peter Berg.

Tiffany Haddish, whose work in "Girls Trip" (2017) led to the much-talked-about appearance on the Oscars when she presented with Maya Rudolph, is on fire, film-wise. She recently starred with Magic Johnson in "Uncle Drew" and is upcoming with Melissa McCarthy and Elizabeth Moss in "The Kitchen" (out Sept. 20); "Night School," with Kevin Hart (Sept. 28); and "Nobody's Fool," with Whoopi Goldberg and Amber Riley (Nov. 2). It's been a big year for the 38-year-old Haddish.

The success of "Murder on the Orient Express" ($352 million gross) has prompted director Kenneth Branaugh to do a remake of "Death on the Nile," which starred Oscar-winner Peter Ustinev as Hercule Poirot, as well as Bette Davis, Maggie Smith, Angela Lansbury and David Niven. But first we'll see Disney's "Artimus Fowl," which he produced and directed with Dame Judi Dench and Josh Gad, due in August 2019.

The Broadway smash hit "Wicked," which opened in 2003 and has become the seventh longest-running Broadway musical, will finally reach movie screens in December 2019. The "Wizard of Oz" themed musical is about Glinda and The Wicked Witch of the West, and Dorothy passes through for just a few minutes.

Tom Holland returns in "Spider Man: Far From Home," with Jack Gyllenhaal as baddie "Mysterio," along with Marisa Tomei and Michael Keaton, out July 5, 2019.

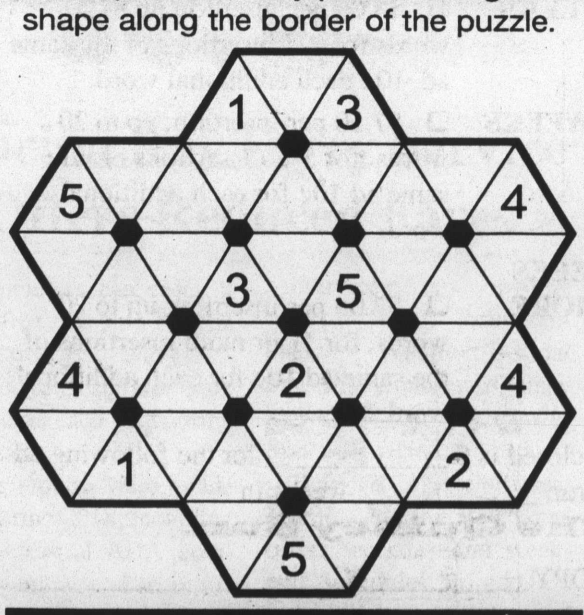

Chris Pratt, who was an out-of-shape comedian in "Parks & Recreation," will follow the $800 million-plus grosser "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom," with Disney's upcoming "Cowboy Ninja," based on the Image Comics comic book. Pratt became attached to the project in 2014 and director Michele MacLaren signed on in January. Filming finally began this month. From dinosaurs to ninja cowboys ... Chris is making good use of his "Pratt" falls!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Cutwork Picture --- The very thin, graceful lines, the black-and-gilt frame, and the cutwork initials and date "JB/1760" added up to a bid (with premium) of $2,460 at a Skinner auction in Massachusetts. Cutwork, or paper-cutting, has been an art form since the second century, after paper was invented in China. Most of the pictures were made by women as a hobby. Today, cutting is enjoyed in many countries. Each picture is a single sheet, not a collage. Scissor cuts are used with up to eight sheets of paper held together. Knife cutting is made with a few layers of paper on a soft waxy surface. It takes skill -- there is no erasing errors. The auctioned picture has a vase made by folding the paper, so the finished piece is symmetrical with many branches of flowers cut as single images. The white cutwork paper is attached to a black paper background.

Q: My mom has two blue glass lightning rod balls from my great-grandfather's house. She was trying to find out how much they are worth. Any suggestions on where to take them or what to look for?

A: Lightning rods are used on barns and houses to divert lightning strikes. Lightning rod balls fit onto the rod and are ornamental, designed to make the lightning rod more attractive. They come in many colors and different shapes. The most common are round and light blue or white. The colorful glass balls are collectible and often sell at bottle shows, Depression glass shows and auctions. Common balls sell for about $35 or less, while those with rare shapes and colors can sell for more than $100.

Q: Warwick Castle is pictured on my inherited Royal Doulton coffeepot. What can you tell me about it?

A: Warwick Castle is part of Royal Doulton's Castles & Churches series, which was made from about 1908 to the early 1950s. It is one of eight castles and five churches in the series. Retail price about $80.

How many different sides or faces does this figure have?

©2018 King Features Syndicate

Strange BUT TRUE

* You probably won't be surprised to learn that it was Albert Einstein who made the following sage observation: "A clever person solves a problem. A wise person avoids it."

* Ever wonder why blue jeans are blue? When they were first designed by Levi Strauss, the people most likely to wear them were those who did a great deal of manual labor. Strauss rightly assumed the work was likely to be dirty, so he dyed his new trousers indigo to help hide stains.

* Statistics on sporting events show that 17 of the 20 sporting events with the most attendees every year are NASCAR races.

* Before horror author Stephen King became famous for novels such as "Carrie," "The Stand" and "The Shining," he wrote four novels and 60 short stories that failed to be accepted for publication.

* Historians report that Napoleon Bonaparte, when he wasn't busy conquering, enjoyed ice skating.

* Do animals grieve their own? Perhaps so -- at least, some animals. When an elephant dies, other elephants in the herd will cover the body with leaves and branches and often will stay with it for days.

* You may be surprised to learn that a Boeing 747 jet is longer from wingtip to wingtip than the distance of the Wright Brothers' first airplane flight.

* If you're enjoying summer picnics, you might want to keep in mind the fact that there are 1,500 known species of fleas and 9,500 known species of ants. Then again, that might be a factoid you'd rather forget.

Thought for the Day: "Strike an average between what a woman thinks of her husband a month before she marries him and what she thinks of him a year afterward, and you will have the truth about him." -- H.L. Mencken

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "For gorgeous biscuits, add a bit of sugar to your biscuit mix. They brown well and have lovely golden tops. To add depth to your sausage gravy, add a tablespoon of strong coffee just before serving. My granny did both of these, and her biscuits and gravy were famously good." -- J.R. in Alabama

* "Tape pool noodles together to form a long line and secure across the width of your backyard pool to partition off an area just for the little kids. It's not about safety, since you should be watching your kids every minute. We do this so that the bigger kids -- who like to splash and dive -- don't run into the littler ones who are just floating or practicing swimming." -- W.L. in Florida

* "When my children were little, they liked to do puzzles. We had quite a lot of them. So we wouldn't get them mixed up, as soon as we opened the box, I would put a color on the back of all the pieces. Each puzzle had a different color, of course. It saved a of time and energy." -- P.H. in Pennsylvania

* "How to bring the squeak and shine to glassware: Put 1 tablespoon of white vinegar into the water and dish soap. Try it and you'll see it works!" -- T.G. in New York

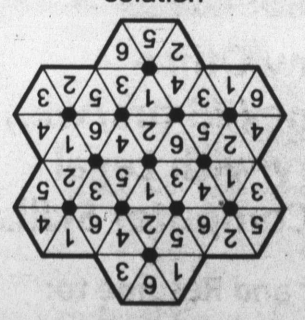

* Try a toilet brush from the dollar store to clean the gunk and dirt off your tires the next time you wash the car. It has stiff bristles that go in all directions, and a handy holder, to boot!

* Need to organize your ratchet wrenches? Use a tie rack or belt hanger and hang it off a nail on your shop wall.

Holy Spirit Novena

Holy Spirit. You who solve all problems, light all roads so I can obtain my goal; You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things as You confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with You in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. Say this prayer for three consecutive days, the favor will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor. K.M.D. 7/19

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

ABERDEEN ROAD WEST won this year's Squantum 4th of July parade float contest by putting The Kentucky Derby on display. Many of the children who participated are third and fourth generation Squantum residents. Many parents and grandparents, of the kids who participated, marched in the parade when they were the same age. Aberdeen West group plans to continue the tradition and submit a float next year to defend its title.

New Downtown Parking Signage, Construction Activity This Week

Beginning this week, Cottage Avenue will be restricted to traffic between Chestnut Street and Cottage Street (the street side of the Four's Restaurant) while construction of the new parking garage in that area is underway.

This section of Cottage Avenue will be closed to vehicular traffic during the day from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Work on Cottage Avenue will be progressing down toward Hancock Street as utilities and roadway improvements are being upgraded.

Work on the new sewer infrastructure continues at the intersection of McGrath Highway and Dennis Ryan Parkway. Contractors will be installing sewer pipe and a manhole which will tie into the existing sewer system in the intersection. Work for this operation will take place on the weekends (Saturday and Sunday) from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The work will progress north up Dennis Ryan Parkway. Once complete, the remaining sewer and water work in Dennis Ryan Parkway will take place during the weekdays from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Construction of a new 712-space public parking garage, civic space and public park, and a 15-story mixed-use tower in the Hancock Parking Lot is estimated to be complete within the next 18-24 months.

New signage has been posted throughout the downtown to highlight parking changes.

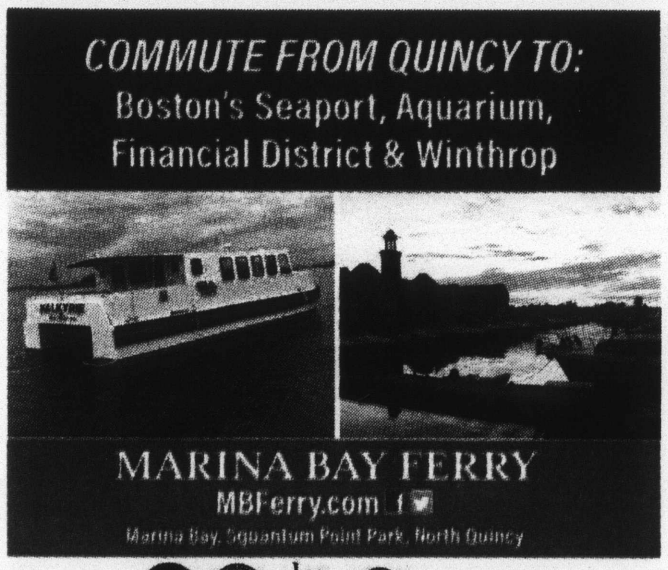

Weekday parking is available in the 400-space Ross parking area. Free weekend parking is available in the Quincy Mutual Insurance lot accessed via Foster Street Thursday through Saturday evenings beginning at 5 p.m. This is in addition to the existing 200 free spaces available every evening at the Bellotti Courthouse – directly across from the Chestnut Street entrance to the former Hancock Lot. On-street parking is also available.

Parking ambassadors will be working Thursday through Saturday on behalf of the city to guide drivers to both these lots in addition to the Ross lot.

WITH THE CLOSURE of the Hancock Parking Lot, free parking is available at the Francis X. Bellotti Court House after 5 p.m. The courthouse parking lot is located directly across from Dennis F. Ryan Parkway (Chestnut Street) entrance to the former Hancock lot. Weekday parking is available in the 400-space Ross parking area. Free weekend parking is available in the Quincy Mutual Insurance lot accessed via Foster Street Thursday through Saturday evenings beginning at 5 p.m.

QCAN Joins Push For Renewable Energy Initiatives

By TOM GORMAN

The Quincy Climate Action Committee (QCAN) is joining a push for lawmakers to pass a bill this month that would require the Bay State to use electricity generated by 100 percent renewable sources such as wind and solar power by 2047.

"We've been in close contact with members of the city's statehouse delegation as the House and Senate decide on crucial updates to the Commonwealth's energy policy," QCAN Chairman David Reich told a press conference held by the

Point Pawn Shop Rejected

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's licensing board rejected a proposal to open a pawn shop in Quincy Point after more than two dozen residents and the neighborhood's ward councillor voiced their opposition to the store.

Roman Vynnytski went before the Board of License Commissioners on July 17 to seek a pawnbroker's license and an old gold/silver license for the proposed store, Golden Circle Pawn. The business would have been located inside the strip mall at 503 Washington St., in the storefront most recently home to Pet Gossip.

Vynnytski said the store would have operated similar to the one featured on the television show "Pawn Stars," where people could buy or sell second-hand items such as jewelry, electronics and music. Customers looking to sell items would have to fill out the necessary paperwork and present a valid ID. The item and the ID would both be photographed, and the store would send a list of the items it acquired to Quincy police on a daily basis.

Vynnytski has operated a similar pawn shop in Falmouth for seven years. He submitted letters in support of his application from a Mashpee police sergeant and the Falmouth patrolmen's association.

"We've been working with them over time on any investigation," Vynnytski said. "They're welcome to check in on any items, if they are stolen or not."

Nine residents and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall spoke against the proposal

REMEMBERING SGT. MICHAEL CHESNA – Quincy joined communities throughout the Commonwealth in honoring fallen Weymouth Police Sgt. Michael Chesna who was shot and killed in the line of duty in Weymouth July 15. The Bossart family was among local families who showed their respect and support for Sgt. Chesna, his family and law enforcement with a blue exterior light at their Merrymount home. Flags were also lowered to half staff in memory of Sgt. Chesna who was laid to rest July 20th after thousands of police officers and other mourners attended his wake and funeral in Hanover. About 60 Quincy Police Officers joined in the tribute. Vera Adams, age 77, an innocent bystander, was also shot and killed in her home. A 20-year-old man, Emanuel Lopes, was arrested and pleaded not guilty to murder charges at his arraignment at Quincy District Court. He is being held without bail.

Municipal Police Training Fund Legislation Passes State Senate

The Massachusetts State Senate unanimously passed House Bill 4516, which will create a dedicated revenue source for the Commonwealth's municipal police training committee. The effort to fund municipal police training was spearheaded in the Senate by Sen. Julian Cyr (D-Truro).

"Police officers take an oath to serve and protect our communities. We have an obligation to provide them with the best training and equipment possible to help them do their work, and to keep them safe in the process," said state Sen. John Keenan of Quincy. "I am extremely appreciative for the hard work of my colleagues, the bi-partisan support this bill received, and that we were able to prioritize this critical funding."

The legislation will provide up to $10 million annually for police training, to be funded from a $2 fee per rental car transaction in the Commonwealth. Funding may also come from the Marijuana Regulation Fund, additional legislative appropriations, and from private sources such as grants, gifts and donations.

The dedicated funding stream will allow the Municipal Police Training Committee to maintain critical services and expand train-

Board Approves Two Gas Stations For Food Sales

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two gas stations recently received permission to sell pre-packaged food, becoming the first filling stations granted licenses to do so under a new city ordinance.

The Board of License Commissioners on July 17 approved the pre-packaged food licenses for AL Prime Energy, 571 Hancock St., and Parkway Mobil, 1269 Furnace Brook Pkwy.

In June, the City Council approved and Mayor Thomas Koch signed into law an ordinance allowing the board to grant the pre-packaged food licenses to gas stations. The ordinance overturned a decades-old city rule that prevented gas stations from selling food and beverage items, except those in vending machines.

Ed Enos, who spoke for AL Prime at the meeting, said the company would close the garage on site and renovate the service station so it can offer food for sale, as well as a coffee bar with K-Cups and pre-packaged cream and milk. Sandwiches made offsite will also be available, as will a microwave.

Enos said renovations would begin in late August and should take about a month to complete.

The board approved AL Prime's request unanimously.

Parkway Mobil's license was granted in a 4-1 vote, with City Clerk Nicole Crispo opposed, contigent on the installation of a hand-washing sink on the premises. Board members were initially hesitant to approve the license because Parkway Mobil's original plan did not include the sink, unlike AL Prime's proposal, but owner Paul Zoummar said he would install one.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the board's chairman, said all gas stations selling pre-packaged food and drinks would be required to have a hand-washing sink available inside the store, because the state's sanitary code requires it.

A third gas station, Prestige Quincy at 9 Franklin St., had also sought permission to sell pre-packaged food but withdrew its request without prejudice.

The withdrawal came after Tony Agnitti, the owner of the abutting property and others nearby, told the board Prestige has been a problematic neighbor. Agnitti said he has had multiple problems with the gas station and was told to leave the property when he tried to approach the manager. The owner, Agnitti added, never responded to phone calls and letters he wrote about the problems.

"To give them more ability to bring more people in, which they don't take care of now, to me is ludicrous," Agnitti said. "I hate to come to a public forum. I'd rather go man-to-man and talk about our issues."

Scott Green, who spoke for Prestige at the meeting, said he would reach out to Agnitti about his concerns.

Scheele said he could not support the request given Agnitti's concerns.

"I think you have to do something to make yourself a better neighbor," he said. "I don't think I could be in support of this until I hear from Mr. Agnitti to see how you respond to his concerns."

Crispo said she would

Garfield St. Townhouses Get First Approval

Planning Board OKs 13 Units; Project Needs Support Of Zoning Board Of Appeals

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave a developer its approval to construct 13 townhouse units at the site of an automotive repair shop on Garfield Street.

Derrick Fitzgerald is seeking to build eight townhouse units at 51 Garfield St., a 16,600-foot-parcel of land, and five units across the road 64 Garfield St., a 14,300-square-foot parcel.

The two parcels have been home to West Quincy Motors for more than 50 years.

The Planning Board approved the project, which was filed as two separate cases, at its meeting July 18. The plan requires approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals as well; that board is schedule to hear the plan at its meeting on Aug. 7.

Each of the townhouse units would have a garage on the ground floor with two floors of living space above. Each has two bedrooms, two-and-a-half bathrooms and between 1,600 and 1,800 square feet of living space.

Each unit's garage will have space for two vehicles. Three spots for guests will be available at 51 Garfield St., and two guest spots will be at 64 Garfield St. The two parcels are both in a Residential B zoning district, and the city's zoning code requires 1.75 parking spaces per dwelling unit in such an area.

Edward Fleming, the attorney representing Fitzgerald, told the board the developer had made several changes to the proposal since a June 13 public hearing to address concerns raised by an abutter the property.

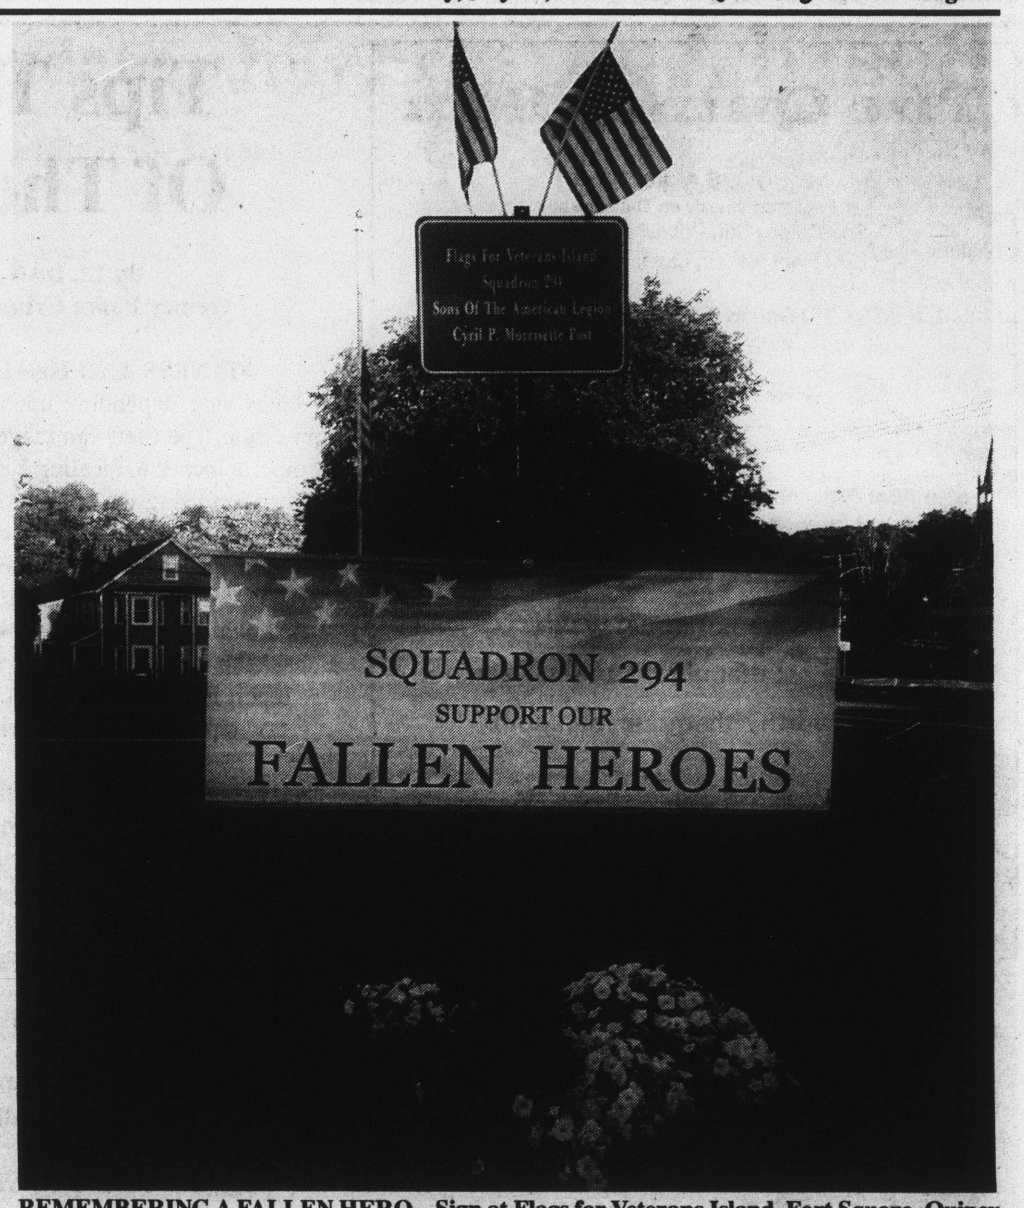

The neighbor, Michael Dlott, had raised concerns about the proximity of the fence at 51 Garfield St. to his home, because it would have made accessing air-conditioning units on the side of his house difficult. Fleming said the developer removed the fence to address that concern,

The abutter was also concerned about trash removal. Residents would have taken their trash to the curb to have it collected by the city's contractor under the original plan. The neighbor and board member Sean Callaghan both expressed concern about having all that waste left sitting curbside. To allay those concerns, Fleming said a private trash contractor would be hired to pick up waste and recycling at both 51 and 64 Garfield St.

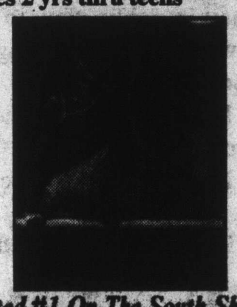

"What we agreed to do is hire a private contractor to address trash removal and recycling from the site by requiring the private contractor to pull into the site and to pick up trash and recycling in front of the garages," he said.

"We think we've done a nice job of addressing the concerns of not only Mr. Dlott but also of the [planning] department and of the board."

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly
Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you – refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still so low, lower than fixed-rate equity loans, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

Some additional facts: Rate/Annual Percentage Rate (APR) effective as of 07/18/18 and may change. Applies to 1-4 family owner-occupied homes. Assumes a maximum 80% loan-to-value and first mortgage position. Subject to credit approval. A 30-Year Loan would be repaid in 360 equal monthly principal plus interest payments of $5.22 per $1000 borrowed, which do not include taxes or insurance premiums, if applicable. So your actual monthly payment will be greater. NMLS # 409557

Bearing in mind that ultra violet is Pantone's 2018 Color of the Year, gemstones such as amethyst, tanzanite, and violet-blue hues of sapphire are particularly popular. Another gorgeous gemstone at this end of the color wheel is reddish-purple rhodolite, which is commonly referred to as "grape garnet." First discovered in Mozambique in 2015, this gemstone features red that sparkles through the purple. Not only is grape garnet relatively affordable but, unlike most gemstones, these garnets are known to display intense colors in even the smallest sizes. In fact, the magnificent purple color tends to become too oversaturated ("blacked out") in the larger sizes.

Rubies, sapphires, diamonds, and emeralds may first come to mind when naming beautiful gemstones, but don't overlook the other equally entrancing colored gems of the world when adding to your jewelry treasures or choosing something unique for a special friend. We feel it's important that if you don't know jewelry, be sure to know your jeweler. That way, you can be assured of knowledgeable, experienced counsel when planning to make an investment in fine jewelry. Tips To Prevent Being A Victim Of Theft In Health Clubs/Gyms

By Lt. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit

FITNESS AND HEALTH CLUB THEFT

Rates vary depending upon the facility's effort to prevent crime. The theft can range from taking change from a member's locker to stealing a car by removing keys from a locker, then using the remote on the key to locate and then take the car. The crime rate in a specific club is often dependent upon the actual physical set up of the club, the clientele and the effort made by the club to deter crime.

Although there are statistics about crime rates in health clubs, keep in mind that many victims may:

- report it just to the health club
- not report it at all, figuring there is nothing can be done.

• By reporting a theft, it helps health club management and the local Police Department create a pattern (a time period and specific items being taken) so that anti-crime measures can be taken specifically to stop the incidents. It also helps law enforcement in reviewing video from security cameras for suspects or putting undercover officers in the club.

• Always, report suspicious activity to staff and other members. You don't have to wait until someone steals a valuable to take action. Let a staff member monitor or question a person who is acting oddly.

WHO IS STEALING AT HEALTH CLUBS?

- There are professional rings who go from club to club, often cutting locks off of lockers.
- Crimes of opportunity – The thief sees a valuable left unattended, pockets the item and often leaves the premises. Cell phones left on a workout machine or on the sidelines during a game are left unattended and subject to being stolen.

Here are some suggestions to avoid becoming a victim:

• Don't bring valuables into the club. Leave items like your wallet, watch, phone, money, jewelry, etc. in your car, well hidden, preferably in the trunk.

Won't they break into my car? The clear majority of car breaks are due to unlocked doors. Parking in a visible, high traffic, well lit location are all deterrents. It is much safer to leave your valuables in the car than in a health club. Leaving valuables inside your car in plain view is often the reason a window is broken.

• The only item you ideally need is one key to your car and this should be with you at all times, especially if you do not shower at the facility. Tie it to your sneaker laces or secure it to clothing. Do not bring in the car remote. The thief with the remote can locate your car and access it, drive off or even worse, check your address off the registration and break into your house while you are unaware as you work out.

• When showering, be sure to secure your locker during that brief period of time. If you follow the suggestions above and only have a car key, hide the key within your belongings (inside a sock – who wants to look in there!) You could also covertly pin the key to the towel that you bring to the shower area.

• Use a quality padlock on your locker with a combination lock, not a key lock. Don't buy a $5.00 lock to secure a $500 phone.

• Completely secure your lock by giving it a tug before you walk away.

• Thieves sometimes bring in bolt cutters to cut through the thin metal in the lock, hitting numerous lockers at once. Again, use a quality padlock.

• Pick the locker closest to the locker room entrance/exit. It has the highest pedestrian traffic and is most visible.

• At some health clubs, there are smaller lockers in plain view. Some members believe in the honor system or believe that no one would steal in plain view. It is easy for someone to open numerous locker doors pretending to look for an available one and then take out a valuable sitting in a particular locker.

• If you need to bring in valuables, such as a cell phone, etc, consider using a fanny pack, which can be kept with you at all times with the exception of the shower.

Keep in mind that thieves know that valuables are kept in fanny packs too!

• Wallets – sometimes only one credit card is taken so it takes much longer to notice it is missing. Often times, the credit card company is the first to inform you that your card is gone. Think of what's in your wallet and/or purse and how long it would take to notify and replace credit cards, debit cards, club membership cards, etc. This can also be the initial step to "Identity Theft."

• Get creative! Disguise an empty hygiene container into a hiding place for valuables!

Use a small public locker as an option if you are not using the locker room.

Most health clubs offer free security lockers which are located in public view to secure your keys, I pads, phone and wallet. Take advantage of this safeguard.

Bottom line:

• Leave valuables at home or in your car, preferably in the trunk.

• Put valuables you need in the health club in a locker with a quality lock.

• Report suspicious behavior to club staff.

Municipal Police Training Fund Legislation Passes State Senate

ing, including additional field training, sexual assault investigator training, first-line supervision leadership training, as well as school resource officer training. It will also provide additional firearm, defensive tactic, first aid/CPR, and health and wellness training. The bill will also provide for continuous education in fair and impartial policing methods, procedural justice, and implicit bias.

This funding, when fully implemented, will help offset the costs of training currently paid by local cities and towns.

"Massachusetts is fortunate to have some of the best educated and trained police officers in the country," said Senator Keenan, "but we found ourselves falling behind, asking more of the officers, and yet not fully providing the training required to meet the demands of modern policing. The bill provides the funding for that training, with the result being officers better able to serve the public, and better able to do their jobs safely."

Having passed both the Senate and the House, the bill has been sent to the governor.

Koch Position On New Long Island Bridge 'Spot On'

READERS FORUM

Kudos to Quincy Mayor Tom Koch for clearly laying out what is going on with Boston Mayor Marty Walsh's plans to rebuild the Long Island Bridge and return the homeless and drug addicts back to an island treatment facility once again. As someone from Boston who lived in Quincy for 25 years and now has returned to Boston, I am siding with Mayor Koch when it comes to the political bullying that Quincy has been victimized by Boston elected officials.

The only reason Boston is running full steam ahead with bringing back the Long Island site is due to the fact that the area around Boston Medical Center has become known as "Methadone Mile" while this at risk population has declared squatters' rights. Boston wants this problem to go away but they just can't say that outloud. Not politically correct to do.

As I read the page one news story in the Quincy Sun (Koch:Agreement on L.I. Bridge Not Forthcoming, July 18) Mayor Koch's took on the issue getting thrown across the Neponset Bridge that Quincy is just going NIMBY on Boston. As Koch stated, 'Part of the argument that people are out there mouthing off about is 'Quincy doesn't want these people in their community.' The reality is Boston doesn't want them - that's why they want to put them on an island. Let's be serious. I don't know that warehousing people out there like that is a good idea in today's day and age."

Mayor Koch is spot on when it comes to this issue. Quincy gets attacked as not caring about the homeless and Boston gets to relocate Methadone Mile out of sight and mind.

AARP Massachusetts Fraud Update - July

BY CINDY CAMPBELL
AARP Massachusetts, Communications Director

Did you know that someone's identity gets stolen every two seconds?

The AARP Fraud Watch Network provides tips and resources to help spot and avoid identity theft and fraud so you can protect yourself and your family. AARP watchdog alerts keep you up to date on con artists' latest tricks. It's free of charge for everyone: AARP members, non-members, and people of all ages.

The AARP Fraud Watch Network is:

An Educator: Get real-time alerts about the latest scams, tips on how to spot them, and the inside scoop on how con artists think so you can outsmart them before they strike.

• A Watchdog: Our nationwide scam tracking map gives you access to a network of people who've spotted scams and the opportunity to pass along your own experiences, so together we can beat con artists at their own game.

• A Resource: Get connected to a real live person trained in how to avoid fraud and advise you if you or a loved one has been scammed by calling our fraud hotline or attending a forum in your community.

• Free for Everyone: Anyone, of any age, can access our resources at no cost.

SCAM ALERT #1:

Summer is a time for vacation, but as you book a rental property for your trip, be sure to use trusted websites. A rental owner may offer a discount if you pay outside of the official website to avoid certain fees, but it is not worth it! Scammers can send links to fake websites for payment, and only on check-in day do renters discover they've been scammed. Official rental websites can ensure your rental agreement and protect your money in these cases, but only if communication and payment happen through the official website. Exercise caution when booking your trips to ensure that you have the fun and relaxing experience you deserve.

SCAM ALERT #2:

As you travel this summer, it may be tempting to search out free Wi-Fi to access the internet. Please remember that free or public Wi-Fi does not guarantee a secure internet connection. On an open and unprotected network, online actions are not secure and can be tracked by hackers to steal personal information, login credentials, and even credit card information. In an effort to trick you scammers may also create fake networks that appear authentic. If you are at a location that offers free Wi-Fi, verify with an employee that you are on the correct network, especially if there are multiple network options that look legitimate. Please don't share sensitive information while using these unprotected connections!

SCAM ALERT #3:

Summer can be a great time to tackle home repair jobs, but be wary of uninvited repairmen and women who stop by without an appointment. They may claim to have just finished work at a neighbor's house and offer you a discount while they are in the area with leftover materials. Once a deposit is paid, the work may never begin! If you want work done at your house, seek out repair companies yourself or ask for recommendations from friends and neighbors directly. Check with state authorities to be sure they are properly licensed and to learn about your rights. Do thorough research to ensure the company or individual is trustworthy and will deliver high quality work before you pay for any services.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

Report scams to local law enforcement. Contact the AARP Fraud Watch Network at www.aarp.org/fraudwatchnetwork for more information on fraud prevention.

He Misses Sunrise Scavenger Trash Collection

I was very surprised that the city cancelled the contract with Sun Rise Scavenger.

As a lifelong city resident I felt that the trash collection service they provided was exceptional. I can remember much worse trash collectors. I always found them to be extremely polite hard working and very accommodating.

So far this has not been my experience with Capital Waste. Capital is far, far more selective in what they pick up. Collection times are very erratic and they are no where near as neat. Empty barrels are tossed all over the place, often they are not fully emptied and trash is often left to blow around. Granted Capital's crews are getting used to the city and the individual crews work hard.

Trash collection is a hard job and I've always felt the individual crews certainly earn their money doing a dirty, hard and often thankless job. That is why I always gift the crews at Christmas.

I can only hope that Capital will eventually be as good as Sun Rise was. I really miss them!

State, Federal Law Prohibits Drivers Hired To Transport Persons With Disabilities From Smoking

In my opinion, it is critical for everyone to know that persons with disabilities are protected by the laws (ADA, 1992 and MGL Chapter 270, Section 22) against drivers who are smoking and transporting them in their vehicles.

There is no safe level of exposure to second-hand smoke. Second-hand tobacco smoke has the potential to cause immediately life-threatening asthma attacks, and is the third-leading preventable cause of death in the United States. Second-hand tobacco can cause impairment with difficulty breathing and other ailments such as cardiovascular disorder that is caused or exacerbated by exposure to second-hand smoke.

Yet, it took me five months of advocating for my son with asthma to obtain a non-smoking driver, and a smoke-free van. It is important to know that once drivers get in their vehicle, they are not allowed to smoke until their shift ends.

This special population is protected legally because state money is used to pay for these transportation services. Our loved ones deserve to breath clean air!

Our children may be unable to advocate for themselves, however, we as the parents/guardians can.

A Few Questions For Mayor Koch

Dear Mayor Koch:

I have lived near the Thomas Crane library for 6 years. I am a QHS graduate, I grew up in Quincy and I have one question for you - why did you sell out the residents of Quincy?

I see the restaurant where I met my husband torn down, indeed the whole block is torn down. For what? The holy God of condo development?

I have seen the homeless population grow and grow as the condo developments grow. The homeless population can be rude, loud and some are downright dangerous.

I have seen about 5 times someone just walk into traffic, not waiting for the light because they were so high. This was right in front of City Hall and in fact occurred this morning as I walked to the MBTA station.

Mayor Koch, do you ever walk around your new and shiny condo city? Who can afford the high rents of the new developments? I have many questions and unfortunately, I do not see you answering any time soon.

I'm sure you have developers to meet with and do not have time to actually walk through Quincy Square, stand at the library and look around at what you've created.

8-Ward Plan On Election Ballot

Sept. 6, Nov. 6, and Dec. 4 should be dates for Quincy voters to remember this year.

The City Council was expected to unanimously approve a plan to hold a referendum vote on the 8 Ward Redistricting plan Sept. 6. The primary election would then be held Nov. 6 and the final election Dec. 4.

The proposed action was being taken in an effort with the "one man, one vote" recent court decision.

As presently constituted, the original boundaries were set in 1889 when Quincy became a city. Under the present configuration Wards 1, 5 and 6 are large than Wards 2, 3 and 4.

The eight-ward plan was devised to comply with the court decision. (Editor's note: The eight-ward plan was defeated and the ward lines for the six wards were redrawn to comply with the court's decision.)

Students Complete Kindness Project

EIGHTH GRADE STUDENTS at the Atlantic Middle School recently completed the Kindness Project. Megan Murphy started the Kindness Rocks Project by displaying vibrantly painted rocks bearing inspirational messages at locations around Cape Cod. Her thought was that one positive message at just the right time can change your whole day. Atlantic Middle School eighth grade students, along with their teacher Terri Zauft, worked on this project in health education classes. "I am retiring this year and wanted to make an ongoing impact on the students," said teacher Wendy Hanlon. "I am so proud of the 8th grade students, they really came through for their final project at Atlantic Middle School." Photos Courtesy Wendy Hanlon

Quincy Citizen Teacher Honored With President's Volunteer Service Award

Each year, the President of the United States recognizes volunteers throughout the country with the President's Volunteer Service Awards (PVSA).

Quincy resident Lorraine Andrews is among this year's winners at the bronze level. Andrews volunteers as a Citizen Teacher with the national non-profit Citizen Schools. As Citizen Teachers, these volunteers spend several hours each week sharing their professional "know-how" with middle school students in low-income communities during after school hours. The mentorship and support they provide is helping close the opportunity gap which exists between students in underserved communities and their peers from more affluent communities.

During the 2017-2018 school year, nearly 4,000 volunteers worked in our classrooms impacting over 29,000 students across the country. This year's PVSA winners worked in expanded learning time apprenticeships during after-school hours this school year teaching focusing on a field they either work in or have a particular expertise in. These apprenticeships run for ten weeks each semester, offering hands-on, project-based learning that help students connect the lessons they learn during school hours with real-world applications beyond the classroom. Many of the apprenticeships focus heavily on STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) – and include Lego Robotics, Rocket Science, Mock Trial, 3-D Printing, Social Justice, and more.

Honorees show a notable commitment to service.

"We thank our PVSA winners for their unparalleled commitment to our students, communities and the mission of Citizen Schools," said Citizen Schools CEO Emily McCann. "Their gifts of time and talent help our students access and explore potential career pathways and support students' academic and social emotional growth. Their work lies at the heart of our mission."

Sala By Fratelli's Celebrates Grand Opening

Sala by Fratelli's – a family-run dessert bar and lounge – recently celebrated its grand opening with Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch.

Sala by Fratelli's brings a taste of Italy to Quincy with a menu of hand-crafted cakes and pastries, signature drinks, custom-created dessert cocktails, authentic cordials and rich coffee drinks, served in a cozy, inviting setting.

This new addition to the Quincy food and drink scene, located at 470 Southern Artery, next to Fratelli's Bakery, is owned and operated by Emily Milone and her husband Matthew Martin, her sister Lauren and parents Susan and Giovanni Milone.

Sala by Fratelli's was inspired by the dessert bars found in Torino, Italy, Giovanni Fratelli's hometown.

The Milone family's goal in creating the dessert bar was to reimagine the gathering spots of Giovanni's youth, tapping into more than 35 years in the bakery business to create a dessert-focused destination like no other. In developing the menu, they take the classic Italian desserts that made Fratelli's a local legend, to the next level by adding new and extravagant cakes and pastries. Rounding out the offerings are signature cocktails that pair perfectly with the desserts, including decadent martinis, Italian cordials and indulgent coffee drinks.

Open Thursday through Sunday evenings, Sala by Fratelli's is also available for special events.

George Burke Awards Six $1,000 Scholarships To Quincy Students

Attorney George Burke recently awarded six $1,000 scholarships to Quincy studnets to attend his alma mater, the University of Massachusetts.

The names of the Quincy High School recipients are James Robinson, attending UMass Amherst; Patrick Deery (UMass Amherst); and Julie Hong (UMass Boston).

The names of the North Quincy High School recipients are Alan Chen, attending the University of Massachusetts Amherst; Steven Chen (UMass Amherst) and Sydney Ly (UMass Boston).

Burke has now donated 182 scholarships to Quincy students totaling $182,000.

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children Thursday, July 26 through Wednesday, Aug. 1.

Online Summer Reading Challenge

This summer from July 1st through Aug. 31st track your reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading program. Sign up, log books, and complete activities.

As you add books and complete activities you will earn online badges and points toward our end of summer raffle. We'll have a drawing for the raffle prizes the first week in September. We have two programs one for babies and young children up to age 6 and the other for ages 7-13. Teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

Looking for some good books to read? When you sign up for the online summer reading program you will begin receiving weekly emails with book suggestions. Parents of younger children will also receive an early literacy tip to extend your reading experience for older children these suggestions are a great way to find new books and authors to try.

Animal World Experience @ Wollaston
Thursday, July 26th
at 10 a.m.
Ages 3 and older accompanied by an adult

Join Matt Gabriel from Animal World Experience as he tells us all about animals local and exotic. We are never quite sure which animals will be visiting with Matt but in the past he has brought us turtles, exotic frogs, a chinchilla and a very large snake!

This is a hands-on program for children ages 3 and older accompanied by and adult. You will get a chance to touch the animals, if you want.

No registration is required.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Music and Movement with Rubi
Friday, July 27th

Preschool Discovery – Sound @ North Quincy
Monday, July 30th
at 10 a.m.
Ages 2-5

Bring your preschooler in for some noisemaking fun! We'll explore drums, textures, rattles and more. Be prepared for lots of banging and twanging!

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop-in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 - 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

Monday, Main Library; Tuesday, Adams Shore; Wednesday, Wollaston; Thursday, North Quincy.

Drop in from 2 to 4 p.m. up to age 8 Craft for the Week of July 30th - Accordion.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Children's Movie @ North Quincy - Tarzan
Monday, July 30th
at 2 p.m.
Rated G

Disney's magnificent adaptation of Edgar Rice Burroughs' story begins deep within the jungle when baby Tarzan is adopted by a family of gorillas. But his 'Two Worlds' collide with the arrival of humans, forcing Tarzan to choose between a 'civilized' life with the beautiful Jane and the life he shares with his fun-loving friends and his gorilla family.

This movie is rated G and runs for 88 minutes.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Movie Under the Stars @ Adams Shore – Paddington 2 Monday, July 30th
at 8 p.m.
Rated PG

Join us for an outdoor twilight showing of Paddington 2. Please bring along blankets, beach towels or lawn chairs for seating.

While searching for the perfect present for his beloved Aunt Lucy's hundredth birthday, Paddington sees a unique pop-up book in Mr. Gruber's antique shop, and embarks upon a series of odd jobs to buy it. But when the book is stolen, it's up to Paddington and the Browns to unmask the thief.

Rated PG Runs for 104 min.

Sponsored by Discover Quincy

Storytelling at the Wollaston Playground (the Tot Lot)
Tuesday, July 31st
at 10:30 a.m.
All ages

Join us at the Wollaston Beach Playground Park on the corner of Sachem Street next to the Clam Box across from Wollaston Beach each Tuesday in July for stories, songs and more.

Stop by to hear a story or two and pick up a calendar listing all of the summer events. If it is raining we will hold storytime at the Main Library on 40 Washington St.

Cosponsored by Discover Quincy.

Summer Library Quests
All month long beginning Aug. 1st
All ages, little ones will need an adult's help.

This summer, turn a walk around the library into a scavenger hunt. In the Children's room at the Main Library or at the North Quincy Branch, children can follow directions to hunt for letter clues to spell out a mystery phrase.

Younger children can search just in the Children's Room; older kids age 10 and up can try their luck with a puzzle that allows them to explore all the floors of the library. This is aimed at children who are able to read, but can be enjoyed by younger ones with the help of a parent.

Music and Movement with Rubi

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Peanut Butter Cookies

By MARIE

Following my grandson, Tyler's, First Holy Communion, we all gathered at my daughter Nancy and Jed's house for a variety of food.

I wanted to bring something for dessert that was different than the norm and found today's recipe for peanut butter cookies in a cookbook. I decided to try them and bring them as part of the dessert. Thankfully, no one was allergic to peanuts so they were really enjoyed.

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees, grease a cookie sheet or line a cookie sheet with parchment paper.

RECIPE

2 egg whites
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup crunchy peanut butter

Beat egg whites until stiff, beat in sugar and vanilla and the fold in the peanut butter, and mix until well blended.

Drop batter by the spoonful on to a prepared cookie sheet. Bake 13 to 15 minutes in a 350-degree oven.

Cool briefly before removing from cookie sheet.

Pad Thai

By SUSIE

Who needs take-out when you can make some fresh healthy Pad Thai at home?

8 oz pad thai rice noodles, cooked according to package directions, immediately rinsed with cold water and cooled

2 tablespoons virgin coconut oil
1 1/2 cups COOKED chicken, shrimp or any other COOKED protein of choice
4 cups broccoli florettes and thinly sliced stems
4 cloves garlic, minced
2 cups scallion, chopped into 1 inch pieces
1 cup lightly packed cilantro, chopped
4 oz mung bean sprouts (optional)

For the sauce:
2 tablespoons tomato paste
5 tablespoons tamari (wheat free soy sauce)
6 tablespoons coconut sap crystals (healthy sweetener) or brown sugar
1/4 cup fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons Sriracha
2 tablespoons mellow white miso
1/4 cup water

To serve:
3/4 cup chopped roasted cashews
Extra lime wedges

In the meantime, mix together all of the ingredients for the sauce and set aside.

Cook the broccoli in oil with a little salt. Cover the pan in between stirring, to get it to cook faster. It should take about 5 minutes, and be lightly charred in some places. Transfer to the same plate as the chicken.

Now we'll cook the sauce.

Lower heat to medium. Cook the garlic in the remaining oil very briefly, about 15 seconds. Add the scallion and cilantro and toss just to get it wilted.

Now pour in about half the sauce and get it heated through.

Add the noodles and toss to coat. Then add back the chicken and broccoli, the mung beans and the remaining sauce, and toss to coat.

Serve immediately, topped with cashews and lime wedges, plus extra cilantro if desired.

Apple-Raisin Roll

By MARIE

Recently there was one pie crust left in my refrigerator and two medium sized apples and out of that I made an apple-raisin roll. In hardly any time at all it was already baking in the oven.

Not only was it easy to make but so easy to cut and serve!

Prepare cookie sheet with parchment paper

Preheat oven to 400 degrees

Recipe:

1 pie crust
2 medium apples, sliced thin (I used a mandoline kitchen slicer but any sharp knife will do)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Juice of half a lemon
¼ cup of raisins
3 tablespoons of sugar
1 egg for egg wash

On a prepared cookie sheet lay out the pie crust and place the thinly sliced apples side by side all around the whole crust.

Sprinkle with the lemon juice, then sprinkle the cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar all around the apples. Now spread the raisins all around.

Roll the crust tucking in the sides.

Mix 1 egg with a little water and brush the apple roll.

Cut a few holes on the top with a fork or tip of a knife.

Bake 15 minutes at 400 degrees and then at 350 degrees until top is light brown and crispy. When cooled cut into slices.

You can serve with whipped cream or ice cream or just have it plain.

What Is A Dupuytren's Contracture?

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

A Dupuytren's contracture is a localized formation of scar tissue around the tendons that flex the fingers beneath the skin of the palm of the hand. The scarring accumulates in a tissue (palmar fascia) that typically covers the tendons that pull the fingers to grip.

As a Dupuytren's contracture progresses, more of the fascia becomes thickened and shortened. Dimpling and puckering of the skin over the area eventually transpires and eventually can make it impossible to fully extend the fingers (as in laying the hand flat on a tabletop). A Dupuytren's contracture commonly progresses slowly over years. However, in rare cases, it can advance more rapidly.

The precise cause of a Dupuytren's contracture is not known. However, it is recognized that it occurs more frequently in patients with diabetes mellitus, seizure disorders such as epilepsy, and alcoholism.

A Dupuytren's contracture can also be inherited. In medical terms, the inherited form of a Dupuytren's contracture is transferred in the family as a so-called autosomal dominant trait with incomplete penetrance and partial sex-limitation. This means that the gene for a Dupuytren's contracture is not on an X or Y chromosome (sex chromosome) but on one of the other 44 chromosomes.

Subsequently, one version of the gene is enough to cause the disorder (it is dominant), but not everyone who has the gene has the disorder (the gene is not fully penetrant), and the disorder is most frequent in males. Typically, a Dupuytren's contractures occur in males over the age of 50, and it is more commonplace in males of Northern European descent. The ring and little finger are the digits that are affected most frequently.

A Dupuytren's contracture initially may cause only a minor painless lump in the palm of the hand near the base of the finger(s). As stated, Dupuytren's contracture most commonly affects the ring (fourth) finger and little finger, but it can affect any finger. The contracture can also affect one or both hands. As it progresses, it can lead to an inability to fully extend the affected finger from the flexed position. This can result in a loss of normal grasping. A Dupuytren's contracture is seldom associated with much, if any, pain unless the affected fingers are inadvertently forcefully hyperextended.

Interestingly, a Dupuytren's contracture is sometimes associated with inflammation and thickening of the fascia tissue in a similar manner of the sole of the foot. This condition is called Ledderhose disease, or plantar fascial fibromatosis, and is sometimes associated with plantar fasciitis. It can sometimes be felt as a nodule or group of nodules in the middle of the sole of the foot.

A Dupuytren's contracture is diagnosed by the healthcare provider during the physical examination of the affected hand. X-rays and other tests are usually not necessary. Previous burns or hand injury can lead to scar formation in the palm of the hand that can mimic true a Dupuytren's contracture.

The treatment of this contracture depends on the severity and any underlying conditions of the affected individual. Most patients with a Dupuytren's contracture require reassurance and stretching exercises coupled with heat application. When the palm is repeatedly sore with grasping, ultrasound treatments can be beneficial. Sometimes local inflammation is successfully relieved with cortisone injections. For those patients with considerable fixed flexed posture (contracture) of the fingers from a Dupuytren's contracture, when nonsurgical treatments have failed, surgical procedures can remove the scarred tissue to relax the fingers and release the tendons. Ultimately these procedures can return function to a disabled hand. Keep in mind, minor nodule formation and/or skin thickening of the palm is not a reason to operate. Occasionally, the surgeon can release the scarred tissue by carefully cutting it with a needle. This technique is referred to as a needle aponeurotomy or needle fasciotomy. A newer treatment for a Dupuytren's contracture is collagenase (Xiaflex) injection. Xiaflex is an injectable formulation of purified collagenase derived from the bacterium, Clostridium histolyticum. It is used for treating these contractures. Since a Dupuytren's contraction is caused by an abnormal accumulation of collagen (scar) in the tissue beneath the skin of the palm of the hand, the use of Xiaflex breaks down the excessive collagen by disrupting its chemical structure. Collagenase is an enzyme that breaks up the collagen, which can then loosen the contracted tissue to restore finger mobility. Collagenase is directly injected into the contracted cord of scar tissue that causes the Dupuytren's contracture.

The main complication of Dupuytren's contractures is loss of extension of the involved fingers. As a result, grasping certain objects can be impaired. Occasionally, the flexed finger(s) can get in the way when using the hand, such as in dressing or performing other various activities that require manual dexterity.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Fallon Health's NaviCare Program Expands Services With South Cove Community Health Center

Fallon Health, a nationally recognized, not-for-profit health care services organization, announces that members of its statewide NaviCare program—a Medicare Advantage Special Needs Plan and Senior Care Options program—now have access to South Cove Community Health Center in Boston, Quincy and Malden.

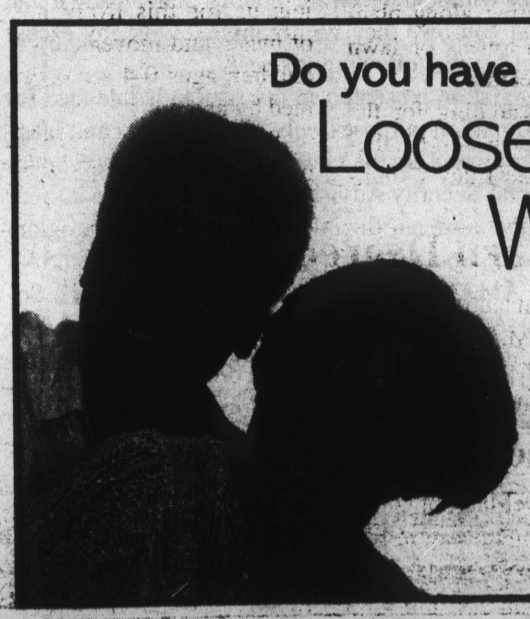

South Cove Community Health Center, an affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, is the largest Asian community health center in Massachusetts. Since 1972, South Cove Community Health Center has brought care and health services to many underserved residents of the greater Boston community.

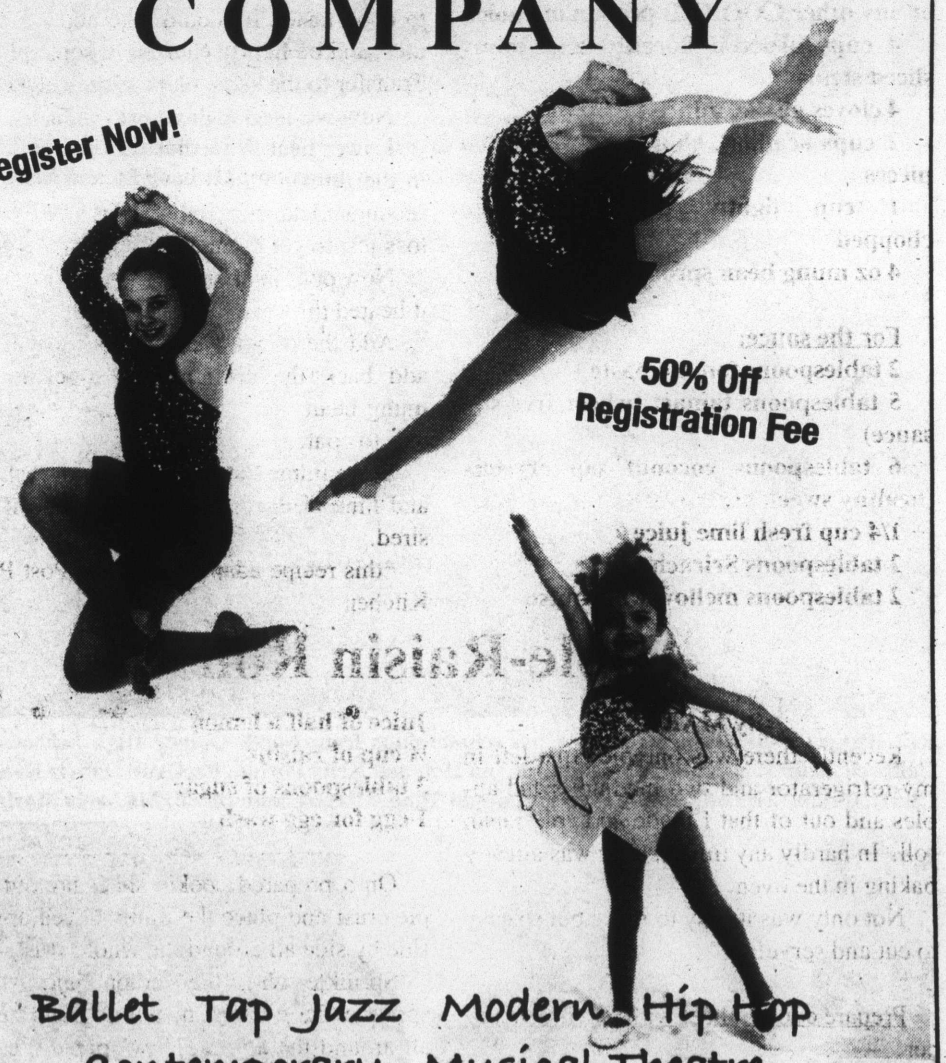

Fallon Health's NaviCare program integrates care for adults age 65 and older. A personalized care team manages and coordinates the NaviCare member's health care by working with each member, the member's family and health care providers. The goal is to ensure that each member remains living as independently and safely as possible in the community.

"We've seen the NaviCare program improve the health and well-being of thousands of older adults throughout Massachusetts," said Deb Daviau, Fallon Health's executive director of its NaviCare program. "Our partnership with South Cove Community Health Center is another step we're taking to ensure that a high level of care and personalized service is available to more residents in the Quincy region."

South Cove offers services with health care professionals who are fluent in Chinese (Mandarin, Cantonese, Toisanese, Taiwanese) and Vietnamese. Services include, but are not limited to, adult medicine, obstetrics/gynecology and specialties such as cardiology, neurology and podiatry.

Doreen Smith was recently installed as the Quincy Lions Club's 78th president at a ceremony held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

While Doreen "officially" joined the Quincy Lions Club in 2011, she has been a part of the club for decades. Her husband David became a member of the club in 1978, and served as president in 1987 - 1988 and 2015 - 2016.

Prior to her joining the club, Doreen was always present and supportive of the Quincy Lions Club, through her volunteerism and participation in the Quincy Lions Club's efforts to support the community of Quincy. Most recently, Doreen has played an integral part in the club's Evening for Sight fundraising event, as well as the club's annual Halloween Pancake Breakfast that is held at 1000 Southern Artery.

Doreen shared her reason for joining the club, as well as her hopes for her year as president.

"After years of association with the Quincy Lions Club I decided it was time to join and do my part to help continue the great work Lions do and my hope for the upcoming year is to continue the great work of the Lions, and increase membership and community awareness."

Other Quincy Lions Club members installed as officers for 2018-2019 are: David Sawyer and Joyce Hogan, first vice presidents; Amy Huber, second vice president; Charles Phelan, secretary; and Josephine Vidal and Jennifer Amate, co-treasurers. Board Members are Jean Kenney, Steve Mansfield, David Smith, Karen Giovaniello, Tom Hogan, Paula Rowe, Joe Reardon, Joe Doyle, Serenity Belo, Kris Richardson-Smith, Thomas Williams, Lucille Cassis, Jeff Poirier, Tom Zukauskas, Don Uvanitte, and Jeff Poirier.

The Lions' motto is "We Serve." During the Quincy Lions Club's 77 years members have supported the community of Quincy through various goodwill efforts, such as high school student scholarships, youth speech contests, art peace poster contests, KidSight vision screenings, eyeglass recycling programs and more.

For more information about the Quincy Lions Club or its service projects, visit www.quincylionsclub.com or email the club at quincylionsclub@gmail.com

Ask Rusty – Going Back To Work After Retiring

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I am 63 ½ and I am officially retiring from my job on August 1 because I'm physically unable to do the work anymore. I have qualified for a pension from work and I also want to start receiving my Social Security benefits. What happens if I choose to go back to work full time or part time in the future? Do I continue to receive Social Security? Do I lose anything if this happens? Or have I just frozen my benefits at the current rate? Signed: Retiring Soon

Dear Retiring: Since your full retirement age (FRA) is 66 years of age, you should be aware that if you start your Social Security before you reach your full retirement age your benefit amount will be reduced by 5/9 of 1% for each month early that you claim, so at 63 1/2 the reduction will be 16.7%,.and that reduction is permanent. If you claim benefits early and you go back to work before you reach age 66, you will still receive your Social Security benefits, but you will be subject to Social Security's earnings limit, which for 2018 is $17,040. If your annual earnings exceed that limit they will withhold future benefits equal to $1 for every $2 over the limit you are, until the year you reach your full retirement age. In that year, the earnings limit goes way up (by about 2 1/2 times) and the withholding amount is less ($1 for every $3 over the limit). Note that the earnings limits change annually, but the 2018 limit for those who reach their full retirement age this year is $45,360 and $17,040 in the year prior to the year you reach your FRA. If you exceed the earnings limit Social Security will withhold your Social Security benefits until they recover what you owe them due to exceeding the limit. Then, when you reach your full retirement age, they'll give you time credit for any months you didn't receive a benefit due to exceeding the earnings limit and will recompute your benefit amount as though you applied later than you actually did. By doing this your benefit amount at your FRA will be increased to eventually offset the loss of benefits you suffered while you were working and collecting. Note that Social Security asks that you advise them as soon as you know you will exceed the earnings limit, rather than waiting until they eventually catch up to you when you file your Federal Income Tax Return. And please also note that they don't withhold partial benefits; they withhold the entire month's benefit, and if that is more than you owe they will reimburse you any excess they withheld in the following tax year.

Point Pawn Shop Rejected

at the meeting, and board members received letters from 19 others expressing their opposition to Vynnytski's request.

Jack Mayo, a Claremont Avenue resident, said Quincy Point was once home to many "less-than-savory establishments," but the area has changed in recent years. A pawn shop, he said, would be a step backwards.

"When someone says pawn shop to me, I think Combat Zone, Downtown Boston," Mayo said. "I think it's disgusting that we would even consider in this city doing anything like this."

Germain Avenue resident Veronica Hillery expressed a similar sentiment.

"It's really come away from what I remember it as," she said of Quincy Point. "I'm totally against this. It will do absolutely nothing for the area or the people in it."

Michael Lorenzano, a Germain Avenue resident and middle school health teacher, said he was worried the pawn shop could attract people desperate to make quick money to purchase illicit drugs.

"We work really hard as a community to fight this opioid epidemic that we're dealing with," he said. "As a kid, I remember growing up and in the back of that strip mall seeing people overdosing…I'm afraid that's going to happen again."

Croall, the neighborhood's ward councillor, said he is supportive of the business community but could not support the application for the pawn shop given the neighborhood opposition.

"I have always – and I know you have always – been supportive of the business community and my plan is – when it makes sense in the neighborhoods for the constituents that I represent – to be supportive," Croall said.

"But in this case I heard what you heard, which was quite a declaration of this type of business is going in the opposite direction as to where we're trying to advance the community down in Quincy Point. With that, I would respectfully ask that you all consider voting no on this application."

In response to the residents' concerns, Vynnytski said pawn shops were problematic 10 or 20 years ago, but the industry has changed for the better since then.

"It's a completely whole new industry," he said. "It's well monitored by local authorities and the state."

The board voted 5-0 against the request to open the pawn shop.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the board's chairman, said he believed Vynnytski has a good concept and a good reputation at his store in Falmouth. Scheele, however, said he could not recall a proposal receiving such a strong opposition from residents.

"It sounds like you have a really good concept. It sounds like you've done a good job down in Falmouth. I do hear every single neighbor here and I've never had this many people actually come to a meeting and this many letters," Scheele said.

"When I listen to all the neighbors, some of what they say I agree with, some I don't agree with it, but it's their neighborhood."

City Clerk Nicole likewise said she could not vote in favor of the application given the neighborhood's opposition to it.

"I do believe you run a good business," she said. "I agree with the chairman that this isn't the location for it."

Scheele suggested Vynnytski consider a location in Quincy Center, noting that two jewelry stores in the area already have pawnbrokers' licenses. Vynnytski said he would take a look at other properties.

Dear Friends:

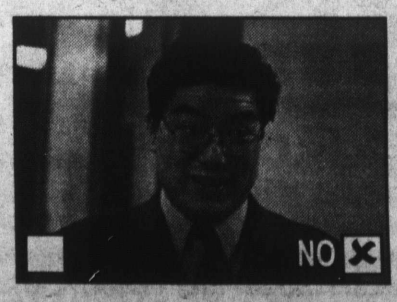

Recently the Massachusetts legislature passed the so called "grand bargain" bill. This bill does four things: increases our state minimum wage to $15 an hour, establishes a permanent sales tax free day per year, establishes a program of paid family and medical leave in the Commonwealth, funded by taxing the income of the employed via a direct pay deduction on your check and taxing the employer an amount matching the portion the employee pays. Fourth will be the elimination of over time pay for Holidays and Sundays now enjoyed by all workers in the Commonwealth.

Although I support the raise in minimum wage and the family leave fund, I am upset that Beacon Hill made a deal with the retail association to cut workers pay by thirty three percent this year while last year voting to increase their own pay by forty percent. Down right inconsiderate and underhanded if you ask me. I believe the $15 an hour ballot question and the family leave ballot question would have been passed by the voters of Massachusetts thus having no need for a giveaway of our overtime pay to big corporations. But the corporations pass out money and contribute to campaigns. The man I am trying to replace on Beacon Hill voted to increase his pay and voted to give you a pay cut. Please help me tell politicians that if you are for yourself and not the people, they will replace you. Vote Bill Burke in November please and thank you.

Sincerely,

William F. Burke

Doreen Smith was recently installed as the Quincy Lions Club's 78th president at a ceremony held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

While Doreen "officially" joined the Quincy Lions Club in 2011, she has been a part of the club for decades. Her husband David became a member of the club in 1978, and served as president in 1987 - 1988 and 2015 - 2016.

Prior to her joining the club, Doreen was always present and supportive of the Quincy Lions Club, through her volunteerism and participation in the Quincy Lions Club's efforts to support the community of Quincy. Most recently, Doreen has played an integral part in the club's Evening for Sight fundraising event, as well as the club's annual Halloween Pancake Breakfast that is held at 1000 Southern Artery.

Doreen shared her reason for joining the club, as well as her hopes for her year as president.

"After years of association with the Quincy Lions Club I decided it was time to join and do my part to help continue the great work Lions do and my hope for the upcoming year is to continue the great work of the Lions, and increase membership and community awareness."

Other Quincy Lions Club members installed as officers for 2018-2019 are: David Sawyer and Joyce Hogan, first vice presidents; Amy Huber, second vice president; Charles Phelan, secretary; and Josephine Vidal and Jennifer Amate, co-treasurers. Board Members are Jean Kenney, Steve Mansfield, David Smith, Karen Giovaniello, Tom Hogan, Paula Rowe, Joe Reardon, Joe Doyle, Serenity Belo, Kris Richardson-Smith, Thomas Williams, Lucille Cassis, Jeff Poirier, Tom Zukauskas, Don Uvanitte, and Jeff Poirier.

The Lions' motto is "We Serve." During the Quincy Lions Club's 77 years members have supported the community of Quincy through various goodwill efforts, such as high school student scholarships, youth speech contests, art peace poster contests, KidSight vision screenings, eyeglass recycling programs and more.

Registry Of Deeds Prints 36,000th Book Of Recorded Land Documents

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell announces the Registry recently reached an important milestone: the completed printing of its 36,000th book of recorded land documents.

"The printing of our 36,000th book, which includes land documents such as deeds, mortgages, homesteads and mortgage discharges, is truly a significant development and a testament to the volume of work completed each and every business day here at the Registry of Deeds," O'Donnell said. "As the Registry recently celebrated its 225th birthday celebration, the printing of Book 36,000 links us to the Registry's rich history that dates back to 1793, when George Washington was President of the United States.

"While we continue to print books, it should be noted the Registry continues to embrace and utilize cutting edge technologies allowing us to record land documents instantaneously. Documents are scanned and available for viewing within 24 business hours of recording at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"Our computer systems are backed up on a nightly and weekly basis. This redundancy allows the Registry to maintain a permanent record of all land document recordings in the event of a disaster affecting our building at 649 High St., Dedham. Additionally, the Registry also microfilms all recorded land documents and ships the microfilm offsite to a secure location to be retrieved in the event of a catastrophe," O'Donnell noted.

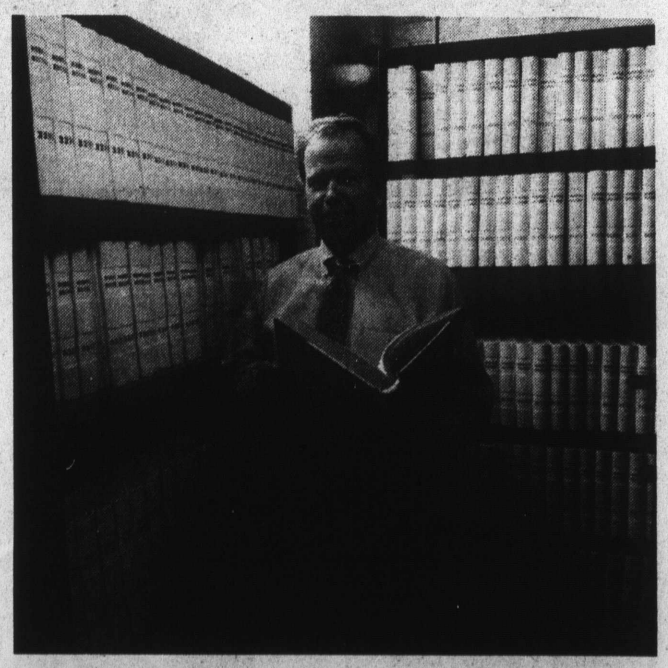

Residents and those with an interest in Norfolk County property are encouraged to visit the Registry of Deeds. Users of the Registry have options to view land documents by whichever means they are comfortable. Either hard copy via books or on-line by one of our many computer workstations available to the public or from the convenience of their home or work computer.

"The core mission of the Registry of Deeds is to record land documents in a safe, secure and accessible manner," O'Donnell said. "Part of this charge is to serve as a depository for over six million land documents recorded from the Registry's beginning in 1793 right up to the present day. While we have embraced the latest technologies to improve efficiencies, the printing of books allows us to keep a permanent record of each land document on-site."

Ofo Out, Lime In As City's Dockless Bicycle Provider

The City of Quincy will be transitioning its dockless bike sharing program to Lime after ofo announced a dramatic reduction in its North American operations over the weekend, announces Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We are looking forward to a new partnership with Lime,' Koch said. "The people of this city showed a great affinity for dockless bike sharing over the past few months, and we believe that Lime will be able to provide a long-term solution to those last-mile commuting challenges here in Quincy.'

Lime, which operates a fleet of bicycles, scooters and e-assisted bikes, recently won an RFP with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council to provide dockless bike sharing in 15 Massachusetts communities. Lime anticipates expanding its service on the South Shore in the coming weeks, and bringing the service to Quincy is a natural fit for the California based company.

"We are thrilled to bring our industry leading technology and operations to Quincy," said Scott Mullen, Lime's director of Expansion Northeast. "Quincy will be the 16th municipality in the metro-Boston region to host Lime vehicles and we're excited to offer a safe, reliable and fun transportation option for everyone."

Ofo has committed to removing all Quincy-based bikes by July 27th, at which time ofo will no longer have any official operating capacity in Quincy. Lime will launch its Quincy operation strategically throughout the MBTA corridor and in certain popular areas identified during the ofo's time in Quincy. Lime anticipates beginning operations in Quincy in early August. The Quincy Department of Traffic, Parking, Alarm & Lighting can be contacted at 617-376-1936 with any questions about the departing ofo bikes or the incoming Lime bikes.

Garfield St. Townhouses Get First Approval

The project underwent a peer review by engineering firm Woodard & Curran, and the developer was able to address all comments raised during that process.

"At this point in time, the applicant has addressed all of Woodard & Curran's comments and there are no outstanding comments at this time," said Scott Salvucci, a project engineer for the firm.

As a condition of the Planning Board's approval, the developer will be required to coordinate utility work with the city as it begins to replace the water main on Garfield Street later this year and repave the roadway next spring.

The applicant will also be required to consult with the Quincy Health Department on noise mitigation measures because the properties are located in a residential neighborhood.

In other business July 18, the board continued until its next meeting on Aug. 1 a public hearing on a proposal to build a 14-unit condominium building at the corner of East Howard Street and Quincy Avenue.

Developer Don Gillespie has proposed constructing the five-story building at 484 Quincy Ave., a mostly undeveloped 27,800-square-foot parcel of land. Gillespie's plan includes 35 parking spaces – 15 in the first floor of the building and 20 in a driveway in a parking lot between Quincy Avenue and the front of the building.

The plan went before the Planning Board for the first time on May 9. At that meeting, Rep. Ron Mariano and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall both raised concerns about having the only entrance to the site on Quincy Avenue. Mariano, the House majority leader, said he would work with the Massachusetts Department of Transportation so the developer could receive an exemption from the moratorium on opening up that portion of East Howard Street to have the entrance there.

Fleming, who is representing Gillespie, on June 13 said the developer had received permission to add the entrance on East Howard Street.

Fleming sought a continuance to Aug. 1 at the July 18 meeting because the applicant had received comments from the city's traffic engineer the week before, and did not have to time to respond to those comments.

Gallery Of Wall Mirrors

While looking through my clip file recently, I found a picture of a gallery of wall mirrors that I would like to duplicate in my home. What should I consider when selecting mirrors and can I employ this idea in any room? Charles Kudos for keeping a clip file! For those of you unfamiliar with this term, it is a collection of photos you "clip" from magazines, catalogues, and other sources. Many people start clip files in advance of a renovation project but it's really fun to build one and add to it at any time. My clip file is organized by categories and is a great source of inspiration for client projects.

Back to your questions … When in doubt, go back to the design basics I frequently share with you. In this case, they include size, shape, texture, color, and, what can make or break a gallery wall of any kind - harmony and variety.

Let's start with harmony with all the pieces the same color and/or style. So choose, for example, all gold framed mirrors, all square mirrors, or even all the exact same pieces.

Yet, variety adds interest. Vary the sizes, shapes and textures of the mirrors. In other words, use small and medium sizes as well as square, rectangular, round, and oval mirrors for an appealing combination. Textures come into play if you can add a mirror with a beveled (mirror) edge or a mosaic mirror to the collection.

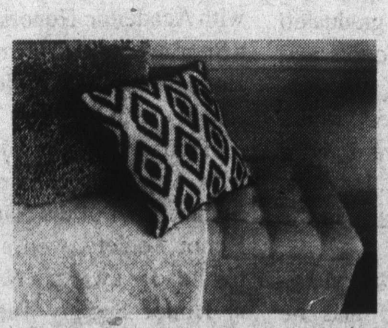

Before you decide where to place the collection, here are a few rules to consider. Have something across the room (inside or out!) that is pretty to reflect in the mirrors. Placing them across from a window will help spread natural light through the room, too. Don't place mirrors above a television or headboard or across from other mirrors. Finally, if placing the gallery above a piece of furniture, the overall width should be approximately 2/3 the width of the furniture piece above which it hangs.

Other than a kitchen, I could see a beautiful focal wall of mirrors in any room. It would look awesome above a long dresser in the bedroom or long vanity in the bathroom. Yet it would look equally stunning in a living room or dining room.

Airman Liam Cain Member Of Air Force Honor Guard

As Airman 1st Class Liam Cain, U.S. Air Force Honor Guard ceremonial guardsman, started marching, cheers erupted from the crowd of parade goers dressed in green. Large groups of attendees lined the city streets as parade performers strode in kilts to Irish themed music while the sounds of bagpipes bounced off the city buildings.

It was the beginning of the South Boston St. Patrick's Day Parade, March 18.

"We are supposed to have our head and eyes straight forward the whole time while we march, but sometimes you just can't help and glance at all the people on both sides of the street," Cain said. "You could tell as we marched along the way that people were cheering for the Air Force as a whole. It's inspiring to witness the love and support we have around the country."

Cain, a Quincy native, was part of the Air Force Honor Guard's U.S. northeastern outreach tour from March 16-19. More than 40 guardsmen traveled to New York and Massachusetts to showcase Air Force excellence.

"The main point of us coming out to these places is to support the Air Force recruiting effort," said Capt. Riley Platt, Air Force Honor Guard support flight and drill team commander. "We do this by traveling out of the local Washington, D.C., area and interacting with the public, displaying attention to detail, service to the country and discipline of not only the honor guard, but the Air Force as a whole."

Cain said the trip was different from his previous temporary duty assignments. It offered him the unique opportunity to present his Air Force pride to his hometown of Boston. He said that he has a special connection with the parade because growing up it was tradition to go out and celebrate his Irish heritage by watching it.

"I've been going to this parade for many years and it was kind of weird seeing it from the other side," Cain said. "It felt amazing, and it was a cool opportunity to march down the streets that I walked around as a kid."

More than 20 friends and family members came out to offer their support as they watched him perform as a guardsman for the first time.

"I was so excited when I saw him go by," said Kathleen Cain, Liam's mother. "We brought the whole family out to cheer for him. It was wonderful to see him, and the Air Force looked so sharp during the parade."

Not only did Cain and his fellow Honor Guard members get to march in Boston, but they also got the chance to display Air Force heritage by marching in the New York City St. Patrick's Day Parade, the oldest St. Paddy's Day parade, first held in 1762. Each year, over 150,000 people participate in the parade and nearly 3 million people line the parade route to watch.

In addition to these large-scale events, the honor guardsmen got to interact with the public on an intimate level by heading out to four high schools in the local area. They performed a color presentation and drill team performance for students. After the presentation, students had an opportunity to talk to guardsmen and ask any questions they have about the Air Force.

"Myself and the other students were so excited when we found out the Air Force Honor Guard was coming to our school," said Joclin Tapia, Aviation Career & Technical Education High School student. "It was my first time seeing them perform, and I thought it was amazing."

It's Summer Kids, Let's Get Reading!

Gracie Warren Reviews 'I Love You, Michael Collins

By GRACIE WARREN

Kids, are you bored? Would you like a recommendation for your summer reading list? Here is one I think you'll like.

I LOVE YOU, MICHAEL COLLINS
By Lauren Baratz-Logsted
Age 8 and above

The year is 1969 and man is about to walk on the moon. Mamie and her classmates are writing to the astronauts going into space that summer. The girls are writing to Neil Armstrong ("so dreamy") and the boys to Buzz Aldrin (because "he's got the coolest name!").

Mamie decides to write to Michael Collins. The other kids in class tease her, saying Michael isn't the one going to the moon, but that doesn't make any difference to Mamie.

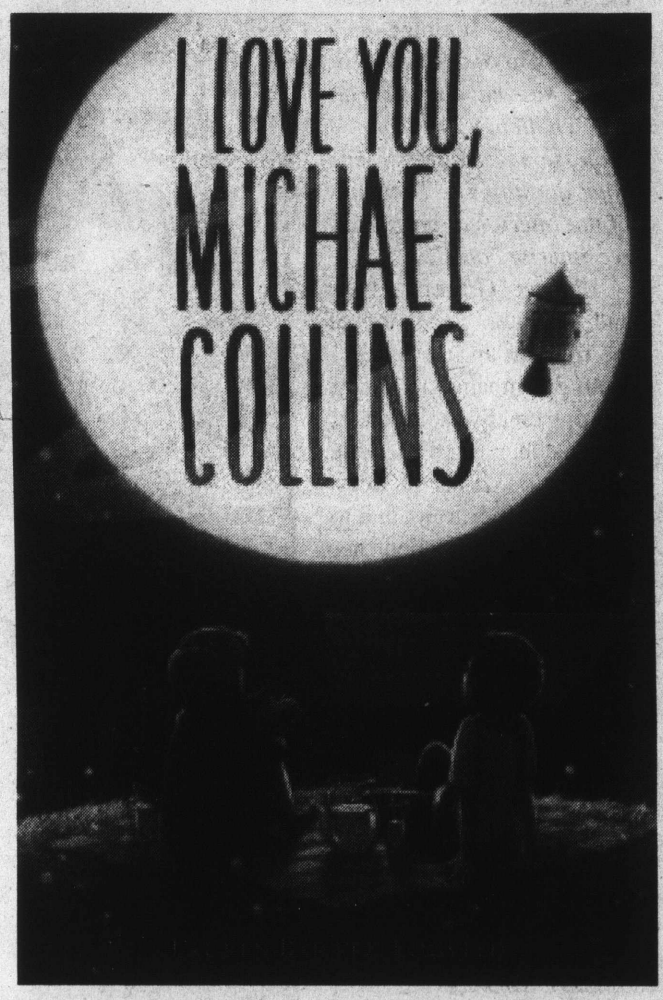

School ends in June, but Mamie keeps writing letters to Michael Collins to help her from being lonely. She writes to him about friendship, her family problems, and the upcoming moonwalk. Mamie thinks she and Michael Collins are different, but that summer, they both experience fear, sadness, loneliness, hope, courage and finally, amazement.

Mamie is an inspiring young girl that stays brave and hopeful during a very uncertain time in her life, mimicking Michael Collins' journey to the moon during the summer of 1969.

Quincy Credit Union Summer Program Promotes Financial Literacy

Quincy Credit Union is promoting and encouraging financial education throughout the summer with the introduction of the Learn & Earn Summer Literacy Program.

The program is underway and will continue to Aug. 18. It combines reading and mathematics in the financial learning process. This program is geared towards parents of children ages 4 to 8 years old.

Each week during the promotion features themed reading and a coordinating activity focused on various financial education lessons including saving, wants and needs, spending, coin counting, earning and setting goals. For every book read and activity submitted either online or to a branch, an entry is earned, up to a maximum of 6, into a prize drawing.

The prizes include a stay at Great Wolf Lodge, a craft party at Michaels (for up to 8 children) and a painting party at Plaster Fun Time (for up to 12 children). The more lessons learned, the more kids earn! For more information and complete rules and regulations regarding the Learn & Earn Summer Literacy Program visit http://www.qcu.org/home/about/promo.

QUINCY CLIMATE ACTION Network (QCAN) Chairman David Reich, right, notes Quincy is saving $500,000 annually since the city installed solar panels on municipal buildings.

AUDREY NELSON of Environment Mass. Research & Policy Center details a report on the state's increased use of renewable energy.

renewable energy sources. Hawaii was the first state to require 100 percent renewable energy use. Similar measures in Massachusetts and California have cleared major hurdles this year.

Last month, the state Senate approved a bill that eliminates caps on solar projects including net metering and would require 50 percent of electricity use to be generated by renewable energy by 2030 and 100 percent by 2047.

According to Environment Massachusetts Research & Policy Center, the House approved a watered-down version that would not meet the goal of 100 percent renewable energy use by 2050. The House and Senate are now debating the bill.

"In order to pass a law this year, the House and Senate must come to an agreement before July 31," said Reich.

Seven Massachusetts communities have adopted 100 percent renewable energy use goals while there are similar commitments pending in other cities and towns, according to the report. Boston University and Harvard University have committed to purchase their electricity from 100 renewable sources. Hampshire College is entirely powered by an on-campus solar array.

The report also explained that 131 major corporations including Proctor & Gamble, Google and Biogen are committed to power their facilities with 100 percent clean energy.

Reich said that QCAN was instrumental in bringing the state sponsored Solarize program to Quincy that helped fund solar arrays on 165 homes and businesses that are producing some 600 kilowatts of power.

"They're now benefiting from clean, affordable solar power," he said. "And, the air we breathe is just a little bit cleaner."

Reich said the city government has taken steps to increase its use of renewable energy, noting that most schools and some other municipal buildings have been using solar power for the past four years. The NeighborWorks office is one of the buildings in the city utilizing the rooftop solar panels.

According to Reich, Quincy recently signed agreements to purchase all available net metering credits from several Eastern Massachusetts utility solar farms.

"The city's foray into solar energy is yielding annual savings to taxpayers of roughly $500,000 in addition to helping protect human health and fight climate change by reducing emissions from gas and oil-fired generating plants," he said. "All the solar panels also help cancel out the need for projects like the proposed Fore River Compressor Station, which we at QCAN are fighting alongside our colleagues at FRRACS (Fore River Residents Against the Compressor Station) and most Quincy officeholders."

Other energy saving efforts the city has undertaken include replacing old boilers with new energy efficient ones, upgrading HVAC systems and conducting a citywide conversion to LED streetlights. The new streetlights, Reich said, have resulted in a five percent reduction in the municipality's total energy use.

Some studies have shown that emissions from fossil fuels have contributed to climate change that some say contributes to warming temperatures and an increasing number of severe storms. Organizations such as QCAN and Environment Massachusetts Research & Policy Center are spearheading efforts for the country to move toward alternative, clean energy sources.

Reich said the effort to increase the use of clean energy is not supported by President Donald Trump's administration.

"We now have a federal government that denies the plain facts of climate change," he said. "You don't need to be a climate activist to know exactly what we'll get from the Trump EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) and the Trump Interior Department. More coal, more oil, more fracked gas. More asthma and cancer and heart disease and more climate changing greenhouse gas emissions. If we want to make progress on climate between now and 2020, we have to do it on the state and local level."

Grenier concurred with Reich that climate change is real, pointing to this winter's mega-storm that caused flooding of historic proportions in Houghs Neck.

"This isn't a theory, it's a real practical problem," he said. "Just ask the people in Houghs Neck. They never saw anything like it."

Reich said QCAN is continuing its efforts for renewable energy use.

"This year, we've been working to bring green municipal aggregation to the city, which would be another step, larger than any we've taken to date, in greening the city's energy supply," he said. "Green aggregation allows residents to buy electricity with more renewable content than you'd get from the utility's basic service, at a comparable, and sometimes lower, price."

Reich said that city Councillor Ian Cain backed QCAN's request to draft a proposal authorizing the city to seek a green provider and negotiate terms. Hearings on the proposal will be held in the coming months.

In a statement, Rep. Bruce Ayers said he supports the clean energy initiatives that not only addresses the effects of climate change, but, provides new jobs.

"Supporting clean, renewable energy in Massachusetts is the best and most effective way to combat the negative effects of climate change," he said. "In Quincy, we are significantly impacted by coastal flooding and other consequences of climate change."

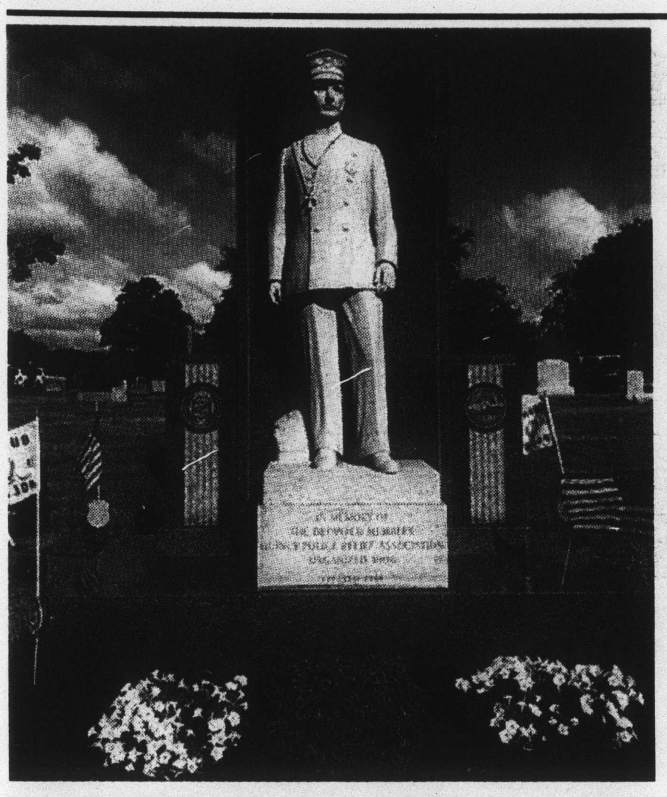

Also supporting the initiative is at-large Councillor Nina Liang. She said in a statement:

"Massachusetts has seen significant progress, making us a leader on clean energy. To continue that leadership and success, we need to build upon the great work being done on the local level such as the efforts taking place here in Quincy. Supporting and expanding upon community-based efforts such as those led by Quincy Climate Action Network will allow us to continue the path forward to achieving long-term, effective and sustainable success in clean energy."

Although much progress has been made in the move toward renewable energy, Reich said the city and QCAN still have work to do.

"We in Quincy have a long, long way to go before we eliminate our contribution to anthropogenic climate change," he said.

Long-Awaited Championship Makes 13th Annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tourney Special

It looked like another year would pass without a championship for Dan Duggan's team in the O'Connell-Thomson basketball tournament after a first-round loss to a squad captained by Braintree native Matt Bailey on July 14.

But an improbable seven-game winning streak, including five straight victories on Day 2, culminated with a win in a championship rematch with Bailey's squad in the 13th annual double-elimination tourney.

It was an especially meaningful title for Duggan, who was close friends with John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson. Members of North Quincy High's Class of 2002, O'Connell and Thomson died tragically in 2005 and 2004, respectively.

A basketball tournament was created in the summer of 2006 by North Quincy alum Jimmy Finn to remember the former standout athletes and to raise money for their scholarship funds at NQHS.

The event has always been a two-day affair with 16 men's teams competing in a double-elimination tourney. The rosters have changed over the years, with the overall talent level increasing significantly to include many current and former college players as word of the tournament has spread. The weekend also includes a four-team women's tournament.

Duggan, who helped Finn in the early years and has been the sole organizer of the tourney for the past six years, has entered a team every year. His roster initially was comprised of many class of 2002 teammates, but there has been turnover as friends have hung up their basketball sneakers. His team was the runner-up three times between 2009-13, but the window to compete with younger talent appeared to be closed after early exits in three straight years.

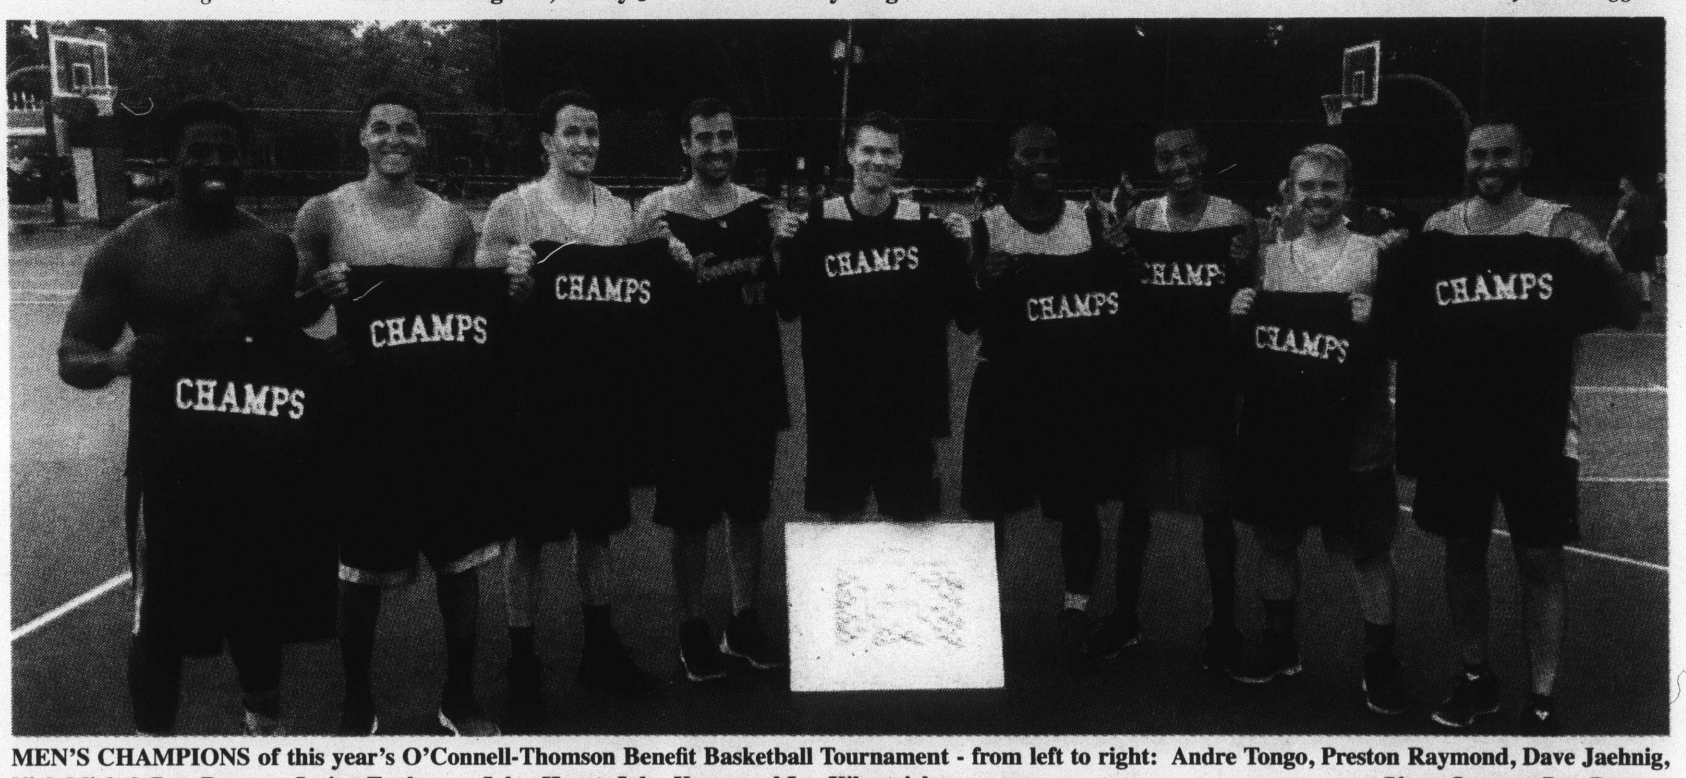

It seemed that trend would continue after the first-round loss to Bailey's squad in a close game. But Duggan's team survived with a pair of wins on Saturday, including a short-handed effort in the final game of the day. Dave Jaehnig, who had won four titles with his former Westfield State teammates, was a key addition for that game. Jaehnig was an instrumental piece on Sunday, which was capped with his record fifth tourney title.

The closest call on Sunday came in the quarterfinals when a potential game-tying 3-pointer by Matt Devine, who has played professionally in Spain and Portugal, came up short at the buzzer. Andre Tongo, who averaged 13 points per game at Stonehill as a senior in 2012, led Duggan's squad on Sunday's magical win streak. Irving Eggleston, who was twice named the Commonwealth Coast Conference player of the year during his career at Nichols College, also played a key role.

Preston Raymond, who has played with Duggan's team numerous times in the past, had a huge tournament with tough baskets inside and strong work on the boards. Newton native Ian Kilpatrick, who was the only other member of Duggan's initial roster still playing, was on fire all weekend and made three clutch 3-pointers in the second half of the championship game to build a lead that wouldn't be relinquished. Duggan's squad held off a late charge to emerge with a six-point victory.

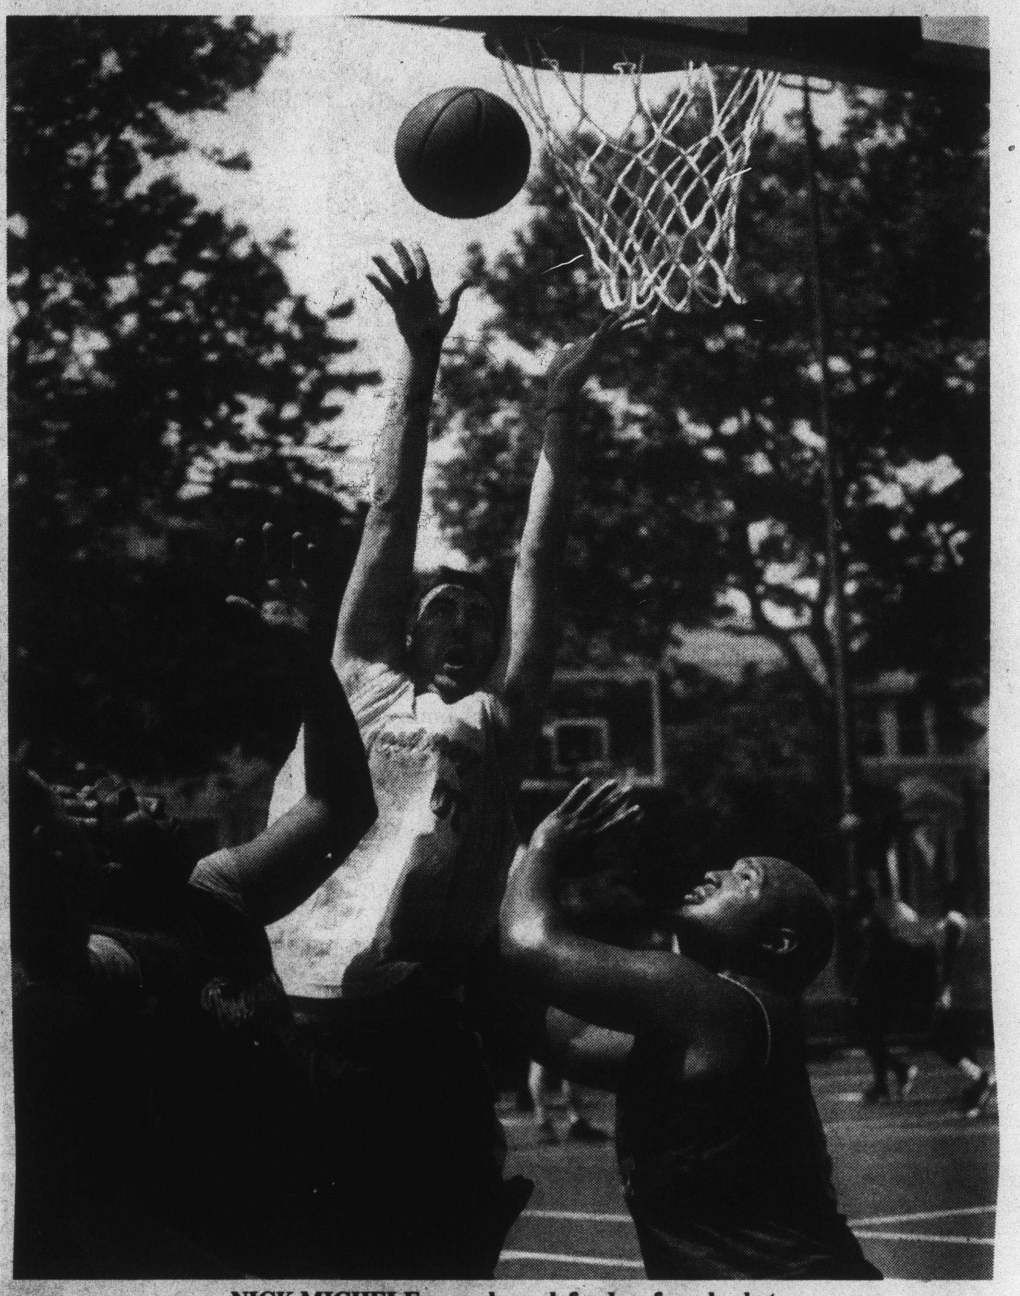

The four-team women's tournament was won by a team featuring Quincy natives Casey Ridge, Liana Cunningham, Alyssa Camara and Gabby Jerahian.

The tournament raised $1,400 to be split between the two scholarship funds. The event has generated more than $42,000 since 2006. Most importantly, the tournament again provided great memories and a platform to remember two great young men taken far too early.

The tournament will return next July for the 14th installment. And the first as defending champs for Duggan's team.

Squirrel Run Road Race Raises Over $43,000 For ALS

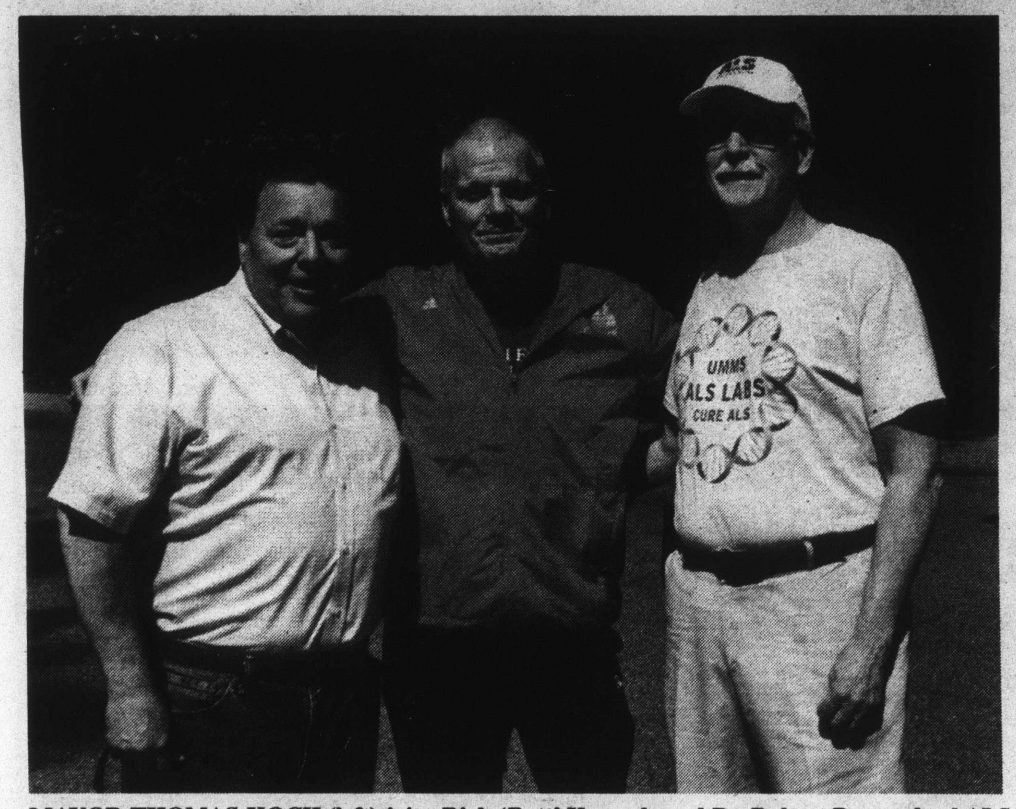

RICH 'RATT' KENNEDY speaks to the runners before the start of the 21st annual Squirrel Run Road Race for ALS Research held in Quincy June 9. This year's race raised more than $43,000 for the Angel Fund for ALS Research bringing the 21-year total of the event to $885,000. Kennedy, race founder and coordinator, and his wife, Wendy, have been leaders in the fight against ALS for more than 20 years. Rich has been battling ALS for two years. The race is held in memory of Jimmy Kennedy, Rich's brother, who lost his courageous battle against ALS in in 1997 at the age of 31. The Angel Fund is a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

SOME 628 RUNNERS, walkers and children participated in the 21st annual Squirrel Run Road Race for ALS Research. More than $43,000 was raised for ALS research. Below: race coordinator Rich 'Ratt' Kennedy takes a moment to thank members of the Quincy Police Motorcycle Patrol for supporting this year's race.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH (left) joins Rich 'Ratt' Kennedy and Dr. Robert Brown, lead ALS Researcher, at the 21st annual Squirrel Run Road Race for ALS Research held in Quincy June 9. The community has supported the race for 21 years raising $885,000 for ALS research. Among the local volunteers who helped out this year were new North Quincy High School football coach Ryan Craig and players who manned the Caddy Park water station during the event.

ALSO SUPPORTING THIS year's Squirrel Run were staff from Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance. Members of the Peak team completed either a 2.5 mile walk or a 5-mile run; participating were Shannon Delaney, practice manager at the Quincy/Hanover locations of Peak; Meghan Harrington, DPT, Quincy manager; Kim Shnider, Quincy office manager; and Ashley Joyce, billing manager. The Angel Fund for ALS Research (Angel Fund, Inc.) is an independent non-profit charity dedicated to supporting ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) investigations at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

STEVE BARRETT MEMORIAL CLUB Softball Champions – Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball's Mary Pratt 12-14 year old Division recently completed a very successful and competitive season. The Steve Barrett Memorial Club needed to defeat Dairy Freeze twice in the finals and did so by scores of 7-6 and 9-8 to capture the 2018 Mary Pratt Softball Championship. Both finals games were very well played and all the girls from both teams did a great job. VOLUNTEERS FROM State Street Corporation recently joined Save the Harbor/Save the Bay in a day of service at the Department of Recreation and Conservation (DCR)'s Carson Beach in South Boston. The group of 40, including Shawna Caldwell of Quincy (second from right), cleaned, swept, and weeded over a mile throughout the day maintain the three-mile long beach. Volunteers picked up litter and swept the beach from the water to find trash that needed to be removed. They also spent the day weeding, cutting and pulling out plants growing under and up through the boardwalk. Another incredibly important job was invasive species removal on both the beach and in nearby Moakley Park. This included digging up sumac bushes along the seawall and cutting away vines growing around tree trunks.

Discover Quincy Sponsoring Tavern Night Aug. 2 At The Church Of The Presidents

Discover Quincy will sponsor a Tavern Night featuring the cast of the Boston Tea Party Ships & Museum at the historic Church of the Presidents on Thursday, Aug 2.

The cast portray John abd Abigail Adams, Samuel Adams, John Hancock, Dorothy Quincy and other Sons and Daughters of Liberty. They will lift their glasses in celebration and raise their voices in song as they determine the fate of Colonial America.

Attendees will have an opportunity to sample rustic fare, play authentic games, and learn boisterous songs in a tavern atmosphere.

The show will start at 7 p.m.

Complimentary tours of the Adams crypt and Church of the Presidents will be available from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Advance tickets required. Cost is $45 per person and includes buffet dinner and desert catered by Craig's Cafe, tax and gratuity. There will be a cash bar.

All ages welcome. Buy tickets online at Discover-Quincy.com.

Free parking is available diagonally across the street at Coddington Hall, 34 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

"The Boston Tea Party Ship & Museum presents this program regularly in Boston and being the hometown of the Adams and Hancock families, we are excited to bring this historic dinner theater to Quincy," said Discover Quincy Executive Director Margaret Laforest. "We have been working to cultivate relationships with partner organizations to offer high quality arts and cultural progamming. This is a unique experience you won't want to miss."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, July 16, at approximately 9:30 a.m., anti-crime officers Ryan Donnelly and William Lanergan were on Coddington Street in an unmarked cruiser when they spotted a man wearing a backpack standing in the parking lot next to Faxon Field urinating in full view of pedestrians and drivers. The parking lot in question is maintained an owned by Quincy Public Schools for exclusive use by students and faculty.

From the officers' vantage point, they could clearly see a stream of urine coming from the man's private parts. The officers pulled into the parking lot, exited the cruiser and identified themselves as police officer. The man was just finishing urinating and putting his private parts away when the officers questioned him.

The man said he had to go to the bathroom. Officer Donnelly asked the man why he would urinate in public in full view of the Faxon Field Track where there were small kids playing at the time. He was also in full view of the YMCA, which houses a day camp for youths this time of year, and in full view of Quincy High, which is hosting summer school today in the classrooms that directly overlook where he was.

When asked why he did not even attempt to conceal himself in the adjacent weeded and wooded area he was standing next to, the male said 'the rocks are sharp,' which made no sense since he had shoes on. As for the safety of the children, the male responded 'f$#% the kids."

There were several businesses near the location of the incidents that have bathrooms available including the YMCA, Beards service station, McDonalds and the Quincy Police Department. There is also a port-a-potty at the track in view of where the male was urinating.

The officers asked the male to take off his backpack, which he did. He said he did not have and identification on him. The male said he had been driving or two miles and could not find a better place to relieve himself.

The officers decided to place the male under arrest and handcuffed him. The male then told the officers he had a loaded Glock 9mm semi-automatic handgun in his backpack. While Officer Donnelly retrieved the weapon, Officer Lanergan asked the male his he had an active license to carry for the gun. He stated that he did but he left the license at his house.

LT. DAN MINTON

After being handcuffed, the male suddenly turned angry and hostile, yelling that the officers were liars.

The 60-year-old Quincy resident was charged with indecent exposure and possession of a firearm on school property. The gun and one ammunition magazine with 15 rounds of 9mm ammunition were placed into evidence.

Nice work!

Another Job Well Done:

On Monday, July 16, at approximately 5:30 p.m., Officer Paul Foley and his K-9 partner were dispatched to a hold-up-alarm call at the TD Bank located at 323 Hancock St., called in by TD Bank security.

Quincy Police Communications updated responding units that they also received a 9-1-1 call from the bank reporting a robbery. They described the suspect as a male wearing a white hat and shirt with a brace on his elbow who passed a note saying he had a weapon.

As Officer Foley was arriving at the bank, communications updated that they also receive a call from 3SI security, a GPS-monitoring subcontractor for TD Bank, reporting a GPS cash tracker activation at the same bank and that the GPS tracker was on the move.

QPD dispatcher Bowes updated responding units of the location of the GPS cash tracker as he spoke with the 3SI supervisor who was viewing its location on his computer screen via telephone. The GPS cash tracker was tracked as it traveled westbound on West Squantum Street at 17 mph passing Belmont Street, then Harriet Avenue before turning right onto Montclair Avenue where it came to a stop in front of 114 Montclair Ave.

During this time, Officer Foley interviewed the assistant manager and teller of the bank who received the robbery note from the suspect. The note read 'cash now I have a gun now quietly.' The teller said that upon seeing the note she opened her cash drawer, retrieved a GPS tracker along with other cash and handed it to the suspect. She said the suspect, who had tattoos on his forearms, ran out the Hancock Street exit. She said as soon as the suspect exited the bank, she pressed the hold-up alarm.

Approximately nine minutes later, Det. Rick Walsh observed a male matching the description of the suspect walking in the area of 181 Harriet Ave., a short distance down the street from the bank. When Det. Walsh identified himself and attempted to speak with him, the suspect sprinted away, running down the street and into the rear yard of 167 Harriet Ave. before disappearing over a fence in the direction of Montclair Avenue.

The suspect's reckless and tumultuous behavior alarmed residents in the area and created a risk to Det. Walsh and other officers who were actively searching for a bank robbery suspect and who claimed to be armed with a gun.

Det. Sgt. R. Tapper created a perimeter around the area and Officer Kent Yee and K-9 partner Lexi responded to the scene. Patrol Sgt. Joseph Lencki arrived a short time later and assisted in coordinating the search for the suspect.

At approximately 6 p.m., the GPS tracker and U.S. currency were found dismantled around 114 Montclair Ave. Dets. Coen and Walsh also located U.S. currency in front of 181 Harriet Ave.

At approximately 6:15 p.m., Det. Cassidy noticed a resident returning to their home on Montclair Avenue and de-

Houghs Neck Congregational Church

The Sunday morning worship service at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. starts at 10 a.m.

Pastor Steve Vandergrift will lead the service and preach his sermon.

Gayle Mackay, liturgist, will welcome and call to worship. Maureen and Joseph Flores will serve for the Diaconate. Steve Reed, minister of Music will provide music and play the organ for the Hymn Sing. Come prepared to choose a hymn.

Following the service a fellowship coffee hour is hosted by Nancy Jacobs.

Lighthouse Fellowship Texas Team

Lighthouse Fellowship, 6 Newbury Ave., North Quincy is sending a team of 7 people to Pearland, Texas from Aug. 19 - 24. They will be working with Samaritan's Purse to restore or rebuild homes devastated by Hurricane Harvey last fall.

Harvey hit Rockport, Texas as a category 4 storm, causing great damage. As it moved inland the torrential rains flooded Houston and Pearland, ruining hundreds of thousands of homes. Samaritan's Purse volunteers have been assisting homeowners in these areas since the storm hit by mudding out homes and clearing debris. The Lighthouse team includes Pastor Mike Fehan, Gene Carter, Becky Carter, Joe Facada, Pam Glover, Arlene Winton and Jacquelyn Friberg. They will help in the second phase of the recovery effort which includes the rebuilding of homes for those populations unable to rebuild on their own.

In an effort to fund this trip Lighthouse Fellowship is accepting donations of used, clean, soft textiles i.e. clothing, linens, towels, and bedding, as well as shoes and other accessories. Items may be dropped at the church on Sunday, July 29 from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Aug. 4 and 5 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Any day until Aug. 5 items may also be left at 16 Gladstone St., Squantum. All donations will be greatly appreciated.

Along with rebuilding efforts the team looks forward to interacting with the community there and bringing encouragement and hope.

Bethany Congregational Church

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have a Worship Service Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

The Rev. Martha Swanson will conduct the service. Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has an active Outreach Committee doing various charity works.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Visit the church-Web Page: www.bethanycongchurch.org for updates and activities.

The Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6 p.m. on Thursdays and 10 a.m. on Sundays on Channel 8.

The church is wheelchair accessible.

Quincy Point Congregational Church

Rev. Kimberly Murphy will be preaching God's word this Sunday, July 29th at 10 a.m. in the air-conditioned sanctuary at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

The building is accessible to all via the Abbey Road side of the building with designated parking and an elevator.

After worship fellowship hour takes place in the social hall. There will be light refreshments and conversation. While there sign the birthday and "thinking of you" cards.

Summer "One Room" Sunday school is available during worship during the summer months.

Bring children to the classroom adjacent to the kitchen (on the basement level) before worship.

'Christianity And The 12 Steps' Sermon Sunday On Step 5 At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will continue its Summer Sermon series of "Christianity and the 12-Steps" during the 10:30 a.m. Sunday morning worship service.

Sunday, July 29th the series will focus on Step 5: "Admitted to God, ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs."

The Quincy Police Department is nationally known for its innovation and promotion of the use of Narcan in helping those who struggle with the experience of opioid addiction and possible overdose.

"As a community of faith that is dedicated to opening our doors to Recovery Programs we are aware of many of the struggles of those who come into our building seeking hope and assistance," said Rev. Rebecca Baumann, church pastor. "In light of the opioid crisis, we have invited Lt. Det. Patrick Glynn of the Quincy Police Department to speak about the crisis and the Quincy Police Department's steps to address this problem."

Lt. Detective Glynn will join the church gathering at 11:30 a.m., following worship to provide a lecture and information regarding the history and use of Narcan. He will bring samples and provide a hands-on demonstration as to how to administer Narcan. Lt. Det. Glynn will follow up his lecture with a question and answer period.

The event is open to the public. The public is invited to join in worship at 10:30 a.m. and/or in Fellowship Hall at 11:30 a.m. for this presentation.

OBITUARIES

Robert E. Manning

A funeral Mass for Robert E. Manning, of Quincy, formerly of Milton, was celebrated Tuesday in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mr. Manning died July 18.

He was devoted to his loving family, especially his children and grandchildren. In his early days he enjoyed coaching little league baseball and was one of the original founders of the Milton Boosters Club. He was an avid reader, a Milton High School graduate, class of 1951, and a Boston College graduate, class of 1955. Mr. Manning worked for many years as a senior executive with Jordan Marsh in Boston.

ROBERT E. MANNING

Beloved husband of Maralin (Mandros) Manning of Quincy. Loving father of Patrice Flavin and her husband Paul of Green Harbor, Moira Shigo and her husband Alexis of CT, Robert E. Manning II and his wife Paige of VT, Gregory Manning and his wife Linda of Andover, Theodore Manning and his wife Cindy of VT, and Michael Manning and his wife Susan of Hingham. Cherished "Papa" to Jim, Taylor Fradette, Casey & Kevin Flavin; Nicholas & Susanna Shigo; Ryan, Connor, Shay, Keegan, Britt & Fionn Manning; Jillian & Morgan Manning; and Michael, Jr., Catherine & John Manning. Also survived by 2 great-grandchildren.

Interment at Milton Cemetery.

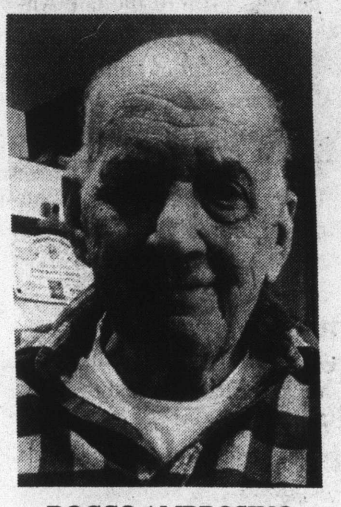

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Maria Droste Counseling Services, 1354 Hancock St., Ste. 209, Quincy, MA 02169.

Rocco Ambrosino, 96

A funeral service for Rocco Ambrosino, 96, of Mendon, formerly of Quincy, was held July 21 at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. Ambrosino died July 17.

ROCCO AMBROSINO

Born in Boston, he was the son of the late Norcento and Loretta (Talgeri) Ambrosino. Beloved husband of the late Katherine (Doherty). Brother of the late Anthony, Frank, Bernard, and Mary Ambrosino, Anna Arra, Santina Russo, and Lena Pacella. Brother-in-law of Mary Cicerone, and Joseph Doherty. Also survived by many nieces and nephews, grand-nieces and nephews, and great-grand nieces and nephews.

Mr. Ambrosino was a United States Navy WWII veteran and worked his entire career as a machine operator at the Charlestown Navy Yard. He also worked for many years at the Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts in Quincy.

He will be most remembered for his patriotism, his love for Italian Opera, his Boston Red Sox, and most importantly the children in his life whether it be family or the children he worked with at the cerebral palsy school.

Interment at St. Michael's Cemetery, Roslindale.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the visiting hours on Saturday from 9-10.

Memorial donations may be made to Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts/Tempus Unlimited, 600 Technology Center Drive, Stoughton, MA 02072, or visit masscp.org.

Robert P. Hayes, 82

A funeral Mass for Robert P. Hayes, 82, in Stuart, Fla., formerly of Quincy, was celebrated June 21 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Hayes died July 13 surrounded by his family.

ROBERT P. HAYES

The beloved husband of the late M. Audrey (Finn) Hayes. Loving father of Susan Rizzotti of Rockland, Marsha Hayes of Stuart, FL, Doreen Hayward and husband Tim of Quincy, and Robert Hayes and wife Melanie of Tampa, FL. Also, his loving grandchildren Meaghan & Lauren Rizzotti, Josh Hayward and Colin and Michael Hayes. Son of the late Daniel W. Hayes and Alice (Renton) Hayes. Brother of Dorothy Schofield and late brother-in-law Thomas Schofield of Squantum. Also, the brother-in-law to Richard Reinhardt of FL and the late sister in law Beverly Reinhardt. He is survived by his many loving nieces and nephews. He also leaves his longtime companion Pat Kyle.

Mr. Hayes was a longtime Quincy resident. He worked for New England Telephone for 35 years retiring back in 1990. He graduated from North Quincy High School in 1954, where he met the love of his life, his high school sweetheart, Audrey Finn. Mr. Hayes was a member of the Knights of Columbus both in North Quincy and Stuart, Fla. He also played semi-pro hockey for the Braintree Black Hawks after graduation. He also coached B.C. High varsity hockey team from 1984 to 1987; during that time frame, his teams went onto 3 consecutive state hockey tournaments and winning the Catholic Conference Championship for the first time in school history.

Mr. Hayes had a passion for hockey; this love of the sport drove him and his wife Audrey to become the founders of Quincy Youth Hockey Association. Their dream helped rally the community and many others that would later develop into the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena that touched and inspired so many children. Mr. Hayes' goal was to create an organization that not only helped develop athletic skills but would also help build confidence and positive relationships that would last for many years. Their effort lives on through the many programs the Quincy Youth Hockey Association has today.

It would be difficult to know just how many lives have been touched by Mr. Hayes' dream. He was an inspiration to the city of Quincy. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes have forever given Quincy Youth Hockey Association kids a place to call home. Mr. Hayes will be sadly missed, but he will never be forgotten.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Quincy Youth Hockey, 60 Murphy Memorial Dr., Quincy, MA 02169.

Mary A. Marchese

A funeral Mass for Mary A. (Corcoran) Marchese, a longtime Quincy resident, formerly of Dorchester, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Marchese died peacefully July 19 at home surrounded by her loving family.

MARY A. MARCHESE

She was born in Boston to the late Martin and Annie (Coyne) Corcoran. She was raised in Dorchester and was a graduate of the Jeremiah E. Burke High School for Girls, Class of 1943. She had lived in Quincy for fifty-seven years and was a winter resident of Cocoa Beach, Fla., for over twenty-five years and also enjoyed summers in Marshfield.

She was employed for eighteen years as an administrator in the disbursing office at the former Chelsea Naval Hospital. A devout Catholic, Mrs. Marchese was an active member of St. John the Baptist Parish in Quincy for many years. She was a former religious education teacher, Girl Scout leader and member of the St. John's Ladies Sodality and St. John's bowling league.

She was a lifelong blood donor and blood drive volunteer for over twenty years with the American Red Cross. In Cocoa Beach, Fla., she was an active member of Our Savior's Catholic Church and a volunteer at the Cape Canaveral Hospital for over twenty years.

Mrs. Marchese had sparkling blue eyes and enjoyed dancing, bowling and traveling. She always had kind words to say and could find kind deeds to do. She was well known for her Italian sauce and her Irish bread. Most of all, she was dedicated to her family and especially to her grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved wife for forty-eight years of the late Joseph S. Marchese. Devoted mother of Michael J. Marchese and his wife Kathleen of Hanover, Joseph C. Marchese and his wife Molly of Springfield, Georgia and Molly Marchese Mullin and her husband Christopher of Quincy. Loving grandmother and "Maydo" of Kevin and Rachel Mullin, Paige, Lindsay, Katie, Ella and Lucy Marchese.

One of seven siblings, she was the dear sister of Anna Corcoran and Theresa Corcoran both of Marshfield and Florida and predeceased by Marguerite Lee, Elizabeth Murphy, Patrick J. Corcoran and Martin F. Corcoran. Sister-in-law of Rose Marie Renda of Weymouth, Ann Kelliher of Quincy and Dorothy Corcoran of North Carolina. Lionel A. Lumaghini, 85

LIONEL A. LUMAGHINI

A funeral Mass for Lionel A. Lumaghini, age 65, recently of Norwell, formerly a lifelong Quincy resident, was celebrated Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Saint Mary of the Sacred Heart Church, 392 Hanover St. (Route 139), Hanover.

Mr. Lumaghini died peacefully July 21 at home, surrounded by his loving family, after a relentless and courageous battle with a rare bile duct cancer, cholangiocarcinoma.

Lionel was born in Paris, France to the late Rene and Odette S. (Degen) Lumaghini. He immigrated to the United States as a child and was raised in Quincy. He graduated from Quincy High School, Class of 1970, and attended Curry College.

Lionel was the owner and operator of JCM Computers of Abington for 27 years. Previously, he had worked 14 years for the Xerox Corporation after beginning his career in auto body restoration.

He loved all types of technology and automation, including smart home features. He was extremely "hands on" and could fix anything mechanical.

Lionel proudly served in the Army National Guard of Massachusetts for six years, during which time he attended the U.S. Army School of Engineering.

A longtime motorcycle enthusiast, he enjoyed riding his Harley Davidson. He was an avid Boston sports fan and New England Patriots season ticket holder for many years and a member of the South Quincy Bocce Club.

Most of all, Lionel's passion was his family and especially his grandchildren, actively supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved husband for 41 years and best friend of his high school sweetheart, Marilyn M. (Bertoni) Lumaghini.

Devoted father of Jason A. Lumaghini and his wife Jessica of Hanover, Christopher A. Lumaghini and his wife Erica of Brandon, Mississippi, and Melissa M. Champagne and her husband Russell of Lafayette, Louisiana.

Loving "Grampy" of Stephanie, Jonathan, Brianna, Lily Cate, Ava Ren, and Hallie Anne Lumaghini, and soon to arrive, Baby Champagne.

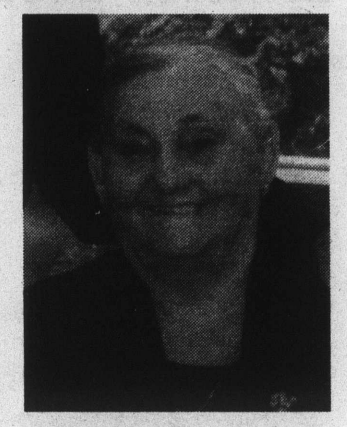

Dear brother of Jessica M. Baldino and her husband George, the late Rene Lumaghini, Jr. and his wife Marie Lumaghini of Quincy. Lionel is also survived by many nieces, nephews, cousins, in-laws, and friends.

Funeral arrangements were mde by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment, with military honors, at Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Areti P. Sakellaris, 96

ARETI P. SAKELLARIS

A funeral service for Areti P. Sakellaris, 96, was held Monday in St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church, Braintree.

Mrs. Sakellaris was born in Vassara, Sparta, Greece, on Feb. 22, 1922, and died peacefully on July 19 at the age of 96 in Braintree. She was surrounded by all four of her four children, along with some of her grandchildren and other relatives.

She was married for 72 years to the love of her life, Panos Sakellaris, who passed away in 2013 at the age of 98. She is survived by her loving and devoted children and their spouses, Pota Pappas of Sharon, Helen and Peter Canellos of North Quincy, George and Cathy Sakellaris of Milton and Arthur and Vasiliki Sakellaris of Milton, along with her 11 grandchildren, and her 14 great grandchildren.

Mrs. Sakellaris defined her life with devotion to her family and to her church, embodying the idea of a true grand matriarch. During the Greek Civil War she experienced extreme hardships, not only due to the tumultuous political climate, but also due to her husband being forced back and forth between home and the warfront, and the responsibility of raising four kids. Instead of losing hope or withering in this time, she instead became the foundation of strength and love for her immediate family, and the generations to come. Despite not having finished elementary school, Mrs. Sakellaris understood the importance in education, and instilled such a value for knowledge and education in her children, not for the purpose of personal gain, but to help one's family and others. Above all else, she prioritized and taught that family and church come first, a dictum that has passed from generation to generation.

Mrs. Sakellaris did not preach these morals, however. She ingrained such values into her children through her own work ethic, toughness, and unconditional love for her family. Never once did she complain, instead forging on to take care of her children during the most violent era of the '40s and early '50s in Greece. This care for others was not centered on her family, however. In conjunction with the teachings of high morals in the Greek church, Mrs. Sakellaris' desire to help others extended beyond her family. She prioritized philanthropy, and consistently went out of her way to help others, giving food to those in need even when she herself did not have much, and offering a helping hand to others around the village. She played an instrumental role in motivating her family and others to help in the construction of the new St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church in Braintree. Even in later years after she and her family had moved to the United States, these codes of hard work, selflessness, and familial love and devotion showed themselves in her lineage, her children and grandchildren going on to find their own successes, but doing so for familial loyalty and compassion. Being good to one's family meant being a good person of high integrity and high morals. Most of all, she taught her children that they could achieve anything they wanted if they set their minds to it. However, she not only taught them the road to success, she taught them the most important reason to seek success: to be good people.

Interment at Milton Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Catherine's Church.

Kelly M. Bradley, 31

KELLY M. BRADLEY

Funeral services for Kelly M. Bradley, age 31, a lifelong Quincy resident, were held Monday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Ms. Bradley died July 17 at the Quincy Medical Center, after a long struggle with addiction.

She was born and raised in Quincy and was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 2005. She had worked as a hairdresser and as a landscaper. Ms. Bradley loved the outdoors and had a sense of adventure, and even tried skydiving.

Most of all, Mrs. Bradley's passion was for her family and especially her two nieces. She had a heart of gold.

Beloved daughter of John W. and Tammy (Chick) Bradley of Quincy.Devoted sister of Sara A. Bradley of Quincy and Hanover. Loving aunt of her Goddaughter Kailey and niece Savana. Cherished granddaughter of Carol Harris of Weymouth. She is also survived by many dear aunts, uncles, cousins and friends.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

STAMATIOS A. PAPAMARKOS

A funeral service for Stamatios A. Papamarkos, 85, of Quincy, and Andros, Greece, will be held today (Thursday) at 11 a.m. in St. Catherine Greek Orthodox Church, Braintree.

Mr. Papamarkos died July 20.

Born in Andros, Greece he was a son of the late Anthony Papamarkos and Irene (Raisi) Papamarkou.

Beloved husband of 59 years of Adamantia (Katsikis) Papamarkou. Devoted father of Irene Papamarkou of Braintree, and the late Maria Papamarkou. Brother of Dina Douras of Andros, Greece, and the late Anastasia Voltis, Mary Palyaros, and Dimitri, Augustus, and John Papamarkos. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Stamatios was devoted to his family, and truly enjoyed returning to Andros, to tend to his farm.

Visiting hours were 4 to 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial in Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Senate Passes Major Legislation Aimed at Addressing Opioid Crisis

The Massachusetts Senate last week passed S.2609, an act for prevention and access to appropriate care and treatment of addiction. This bill would provide an additional set of tools to address the opioid crisis and establish the Commonwealth as a national leader in the fight against this epidemic.

This legislation is the result of extensive work researching evidence-based best practices and collaborating with healthcare researchers and clinicians, hospitals, behavioral health providers, law enforcement officials, patient advocates, and individuals with lived experience, to develop policies to address the opioid epidemic.

"We took important steps towards providing better prevention, harm reduction, and proper care and treatment options in our efforts to combat the opioid epidemic. I want to thank all my colleagues, especially Senator Cindy Friedman and Senator Karen Spilka, whose strong leadership and skillful crafting led to the success of this legislation," said Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy), Senate vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health, Substance Use and Recovery said. He continued: "This comprehensive bi-partisan effort will provide proper care to incarcerated individuals, a pathway to long-term care through emergency room departments, and options for alternative pain-management. In addition, it will hold pharmaceutical manufacturers financially accountable to properly collect and dispose of their pills."

Help Trees Beat Summer Heat: Tips For Perfect Watering

With summer heating up, it's essential to seek the shade, and there's no better place to find it than under a tree's cool canopy.

While Quincy's trees work hard to keep us cool, they need protection from the hot sun, too.

"Recent dry conditions and abnormally high temperatures leave trees parched," says Jim Doyle, a certified arborist at Hartney Greymont, a Davey company. "But well-hydrated trees cope better with the heat."

Doyle recommends making sure mature and new trees in your yard have enough water to make it through the dry summer months.

But how much water do trees need? And when is the right time to water them?

Trees generally have enough water if the upper 12 inches of soil is moist. If it hasn't rained for several weeks, check to see if your tree needs a drink.

Follow Doyle's easy tips below to ensure your trees are getting just the right amount of water.

Check If Your Tree Needs Water

"There are a number of ways to see if your tree needs water," Doyle says. Try one of the below.

1. Poke a long screwdriver into the dirt beneath the tree. If it's hard to push in, you probably need to water your tree.

2. Dig down about 6-8 inches, pick up a handful of the soil and roll into a ball. If it doesn't hold its shape, the soil is too dry.

3. Moisture meters work well, and of course, common sense. If it hasn't rained in a few weeks, it's safe to say you should water.

4. Look for tell-tale signs of dehydration. Keep an eye out for curling, wilting or small leaves that may turn brown at the tips or edges. Often, they'll change color or drop early, too.

Tips for Perfect Tree Watering in Summer

• Water the area beneath the tree canopy. One inch per week is usually sufficient for mature trees. For new trees, there's no specific amount of water they need. Instead, you want to make sure the top 12 inches of soil around the root ball remains well-watered.

• The best time to water is in the morning.

• Tree roots are deeper than turf roots, so water about three times as long as you water your lawn to make sure enough moisture reaches the root zone.

Three Ways to Water

1. Use rain barrels and reclaimed water whenever possible. Rain barrels collect runoff from your home's gutter system by connecting to the downspout. Add a spigot or hose connector to drain water and use to refresh your landscape.

2. Deeply and slowly water mature trees with a simple soaker hose, slow drip from a garden hose, an overhead with either a frog eye or pincushion design or root feeder probe. If you use a drip irrigation system, adjust it to increase the amount of water and disperse it further out towards the tree's drip zone.

a. Avoid directly spraying the trunk of the tree, as increased moisture can create root rot. Instead, soak the ground toward the edge of the tree canopy. Use a hose faucet timer, available at most hardware stores, to prevent overwatering.

b. "Place a coffee or soup can in the drip zone, the area directly beneath the trees' foliage. Run the sprinkler slowly until one inch of water has collected in the can,"

Among the successful provisions included within the legislation three priorities introduced by Senator Keenan: Increasing access to medication-assisted treatment (MAT), broadening patients' access to all pain management options, and establishing a permanent drug-stewardship program.

With this legislation, an individual who receives treatment for an opioid overdose in an emergency department (ED) will now have the opportunity to begin treatment for their substance use disorder (SUD) before they leave the ED. The bill requires all hospitals to have the capacity to initiate voluntary SUD treatment, including opioid agonist treatment, through their emergency departments after treatment for overdose. Today, most emergency departments cannot initiate treatment, and only refer persons to outpatient treatment which may take several days or weeks to access.

This bill also makes significant strides towards extending access to medication assisted treatment (MAT) in correctional facilities. In Massachusetts, nearly 1 out of every 11 individuals dying from opioid-related overdoses has a history of incarceration in state jails and prisons. In 2015 alone, nearly 50 percent of all deaths among those released from incarceration were opioid-related.

In an attempt to ensure that those experiencing chronic pain have access to the medications and therapy they need, the bill establishes a MCPAP for Pain program to provide remote consultations to primary care practices, nurse practitioners and other health care providers who are caring for chronic pain patients. Moreover, this bill will also direct insurance companies to develop comprehensive plans to offer alternative pain management options, and makes those plans subject to state approval.

This bill was referred to the House for approval and then to the governor.

cided to check their yard first to ensure it was safe for them. As Det. Cassidy went to the rear of the yard, he looked under the porch and saw the suspect hiding in a pile of debris. The suspect was cornered and removed from under the porch. He was also laying on top of numerous bills of U.S. currency, including two of the GPS cash tracker bills.

He was placed under arrests by Officers Fitzgerald and Paccioretti and held at the scene until witnesses/employees could be brought by to identify him. During this time, the suspect volunteered, 'you guys probably saved by life. I'd be done.' Employees soon confirmed the identity of the suspect.

The suspect, a 37-year-old Rockland resident, was charged with disorderly conduct and bank robbery.

A total of $580 was taken during the robbery, according to TD Bank.

On Behalf of the Quincy Police Department:

Chief Paul Keenan would like to express his appreciation to the community for the words of support and kindness during the past week after the tragic death of fellow Weymouth Sgt. Chesna.

"The efforts of businesses dropping off food, citizens consoling and offering words of encouragement, to the children sponsoring lemonade stands to help raise money, shows how fortunate we all are to be part of the city of Quincy."

Move over law:

Stationary police vehicles, ambulances and fire trucks, along with highway maintenance vehicles and tow trucks on the roadways of Massachusetts risk being struck by vehicular traffic, putting at risk employees performing a service for the public.

Because of the increase in injuries from being struck by other vehicles, the following law was enacted to help protect workers:

Upon approaching a stationary emergency vehicle, highway maintenance vehicle or recovery vehicle with flashing light, an operator shall:

(1) Proceed with due caution, reduce the speed of the vehicle to that of a reasonable and safe speed for road conditions, and, if practicable and on a highway having at least four lanes with not less than two lanes proceeding in the same direction as the operator's vehicle, yield the right-of-way by making a lane change into a lane not adjacent to that of the emergency response vehicle, highway maintenance or recovery vehicle; or

(2) If changing lanes is not practicable, proceed with due caution and reduce speed of the vehicle to that of a reasonable and safe speed for road conditions.

(3) Violations of this section shall be punished by a fine if not more than $100.

'The Clergy Corner'

Spiritual Journey Can Be Quite Refreshing

(Edutor's Note: This week The Quincy Sun debuts a new feature called "The Clergy Corner." Local clergy are invited to submit a column for publication on a topic of their choosing. If interested, email Quincy Sun editor Robert Bosworth at thequincysun@verizon.net.)

By REV. REBECCA E. BAUMANN Pastor Quincy Community UMC

Today, I have been contemplating my faith journey and wondering if there is any similarity between my spiritual endeavors and ice cubes. Indeed, a very odd and unusual metaphor. Probably, today's fascination with ice cubes stems from the fact that I am hot, tired, cranky and thirsty. A glass of cold iced tea would be a welcome diversion. I cannot erase the image of a tall glass filled with tea and clanging cubes. It calls to me from the kitchen counter.

I envision a glass that would be cold and wet to the touch as the ice-cold drink makes contact with the humid hot air that surrounds it. I love to watch the water droplets cascade along the side of the glass as the liquid refreshment beckons me to pick it up and enjoy it. I love to swish the glass to and fro and watch and hear the cubes hit the side of the glass as they simultaneously hit against each other. I think that a glass of tea, without the ice cubes, would be less interesting, less enticing, less enjoyable and less refreshing.

When the weather turns warm and I begin to get thirsty, it seems that there are never enough ice cubes. I am always filling ice cube trays. My desire for an iced cold drink presents as a deep longing. An unquenchable thirst haunts me until I begin to satisfy the desire. All too often, I reach for the longed-for ice cubes only to discover that the bin is empty and the trays idly remain upon the kitchen counter. Living by myself, I cannot blame a roommate or partner or child for not refilling the ice cube trays. It is my responsibility to keep the trays filled. I can enjoy the gift of ice cubes only if I take the time and the trouble to refill the trays. I need to plan ahead for my anticipated need for the cubes and try to keep up with the future demand for ice.

I so often get lost in savoring the delectable thirst-quenching and refreshing glass of iced beverages. Thus, putting aside the need to refill the tray. Enjoying the experience in the moment often overtakes my good intentions of refilling the tray so that I will be prepared in the future when the desire for ice again visits me. I am continually reminded that tray all too often tray sits empty upon the counter.

Suddenly realizing the need to fill the tray and return it to the freezer requires an admission that once again I have fallen short of paying attention and of taking care of myself. Now, I must be patient as I fill the trays, return them to the freezer and wait the several hours necessary to create the cubes that will eventually be used to satisfy my thirst. I have learned that a half-frozen ice cube will provide much satisfaction as its delicate ice cold liquid seeps out into my mouth. But, all too quickly, this type of ice cube vanishes and the need to cool off the drink is lost when the cube is not fully set. Again, I must learn to be patient.

For a while, I keep up with the ice cube demand. I delay my desire for gratification in drinking the beverage and I take the time to fill the trays and return them to the space that will transform them from tap water into ice cubes. With good intention, I vow to keep up with the ice cube trays, knowing that I will experience the full joy of the cooled drink when I reach for it. I am able to do this for only a short period of time.

Suddenly, I am back to reaching for the ice cube that has not yet set. I am back to my need to wait and to be patient as I refill the trays and allow the freezer to do its thing and create, anew, the fresh new tray of ice cubes. My desired yearning to be filled with an iced beverage learns to be disciplined and learns to rest in the moments of waiting.

I think my spiritual journey is very much like my experience with ice cubes. I recognize a yearning and desire to be filled. I often know just what I need in order to begin filling my spirit and quenching that thirst. I can envision what is needed, I can imagine it, I can pursue it.

Sometimes, that which is needed is already available and the thirst is satisfied. Often; however, I have neglected to tend to the fire of my spirit and I must be patient, as I allow God to make the transformation necessary to create, anew, the refreshing experience of enlightenment and joy. In the end, it is God who provides the desire. It is God who creates the ways in which the desire is fulfilled. It is the loving and transformative nature of God that satisfies the longing. The work of preparing, anticipating, becoming patient, and accepting the power of the spiritual gifts given by a loving God is the work that I am tasked to complete. The journey is often repetitious, like the refilling of the ice cube tray.

Together, we work with God and in so doing we learn to be open to God's nudging and gifts that will ultimately fill us with a joyful spiritual relationship with the Creator. How do you quench your thirst?

Doyle says.

3. Going out of town? Fill up a reusable irrigation bag, and they'll water for you.

Other Ways To Boost Your Trees' Health

• Mulch, but do it correctly. "Do NOT build mulch into a volcano," Doyle warns. "This can kill the tree as it cuts off the crown roots and decreases air circulation."

• Mulch two to three inches around the tree to reduce moisture loss and moderate soil temperature. Mulch should be pulled back 6 inches from the trunk of the tree in a saucer-like fashion.

• Fertilize trees annually (in spring or fall) to keep them nourished throughout summer's high temperatures.

Following these watering guidelines will ensure trees survive the sizzling summer heat and can continue being the most valuable asset in the landscape.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A longtime situation starts to move into a new phase. The question for the uncertain Lamb right now is whether to move with it. Facts emerge by midmonth to help you decide.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A talent for organizing your priorities allows the Divine Bovine to enjoy a busy social life and not miss a beat in meeting all workplace and/or family commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) What began as a dubious undertaking has now become one of your favorite projects. Your enthusiasm for it rallies support from other doubters-turned-believers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Accept the help of friends to get you through an unexpectedly difficult situation. There'll be time enough later to investigate how all this could have happened so fast.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Change is a major factor for the Big Cat through midmonth. Be prepared to deal with it on a number of levels, including travel plans and workplace situations.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not like all the changes that have begun to take place around you. But try to find something positive in at least some of them that you can put to good use.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's unsettling experience could create more problems if it's not handled with care and love. And who's the best one to offer all that? You, of course.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It might not be the right time for you to start a new venture. But it's a good time to start gathering facts and figures so you'll be set when the GO! sign lights up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sagacious Sagittarius should have no trouble deciding between those who can and those who cannot be trusted to carry out a workplace commitment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Surprise, surprise. It looks as if that one person you once thought you could never hope to win over to your side suddenly just might choose to join you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might have to set aside your pride for now and accept a change that isn't to your advantage. Cheer up. There'll be time later to turn this around in your favor.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your creative self emerges as dominant through midmonth. This should help you restart that writing or arts project you've left on the shelf for far too long.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of encouraging others by example to come out from the shadows and enjoy life to the fullest.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Scarlett Johansson received so much backlash for her decision to play transgender massage-parlor owner Dante "Tex" Gill in the mob thriller "Rub and Tug" that she has withdrawn from the project. Scarlett is no stranger to controversy, after playing a white-washed Asian character in "Ghost in the Shell" (2017), which didn't do well at the box office. Ironically, it would've been for the same director of "Ghost in the Shell," Rupert Sanders.

John Krasinski, fresh off his success producing, directing and starring in "A Quiet Place," will co-produce (and probably direct and star) with Matt Damon in "The King of Oil," based on the bestselling book "The King of Oil: The Secret Life of Mark Rich." Rich was pardoned by President Bill Clinton on Clinton's final day in office. Rich died in 2013 at 78.

"Sopranos" fans rejoice! The prequel has found a director in Alan Taylor, who helmed multiple episodes of the original series as well as "Game of Thrones," "Thor: The Dark World" and "Terminator: Genisys."

"It: Chapter Two" is in the works with Bill Hader playing the grown-up Richie Tozier (played by Finn Wolfhard) and James MacAvoy (as a grown-up Bill Denbrough (played by Jaeden Lieberher). Bill Skarsgard returns as "It."

Tim Allen's series "Last Man Standing (which he produced and starred in) ran for six seasons on ABC. Now it's returning, but to Fox, not ABC. Coincidentally, 20th Century Fox produces the show. However, they've lost two cast members: Molly Ephraim, who played middle daughter Mandy, and Flynn Morrison, who played grandson Boyd. When the show was canceled, they were released from their contracts and opted not to return. Their roles will be recast.

Jeff Goldblum is having no trouble finding film roles at age 65. In 2017 he appeared in "Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2" and "Thor: Ragnarok," and in 2018 was busy with a plum voice role in Wes Anderson's animated film "Isle of Dogs," with Bryan Cranston, Edward Norton and Bill Murray. He also has starring roles in "Hotel Artemis," with Jodie Foster, Sterling K. Brown and Zachary Quinto, who plays Spock in the new "Star Trek" movies. Jeff played opposite the original Mr. Spock, Leonard Nimoy, in "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" (1978). He currently can be seen in the $1 billion wonder "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom."

Goldblum was Oscar nominated in 1996 for "Little Surprises," a short live action film he directed, with Julie Harris and Rod Steiger. He's been married three times, once to Oscar-winner Geena Davis (1987-1990), but it's his current marriage to Emilie Livingston that has produced a son (in 2015 at 62) and a daughter (at 64). Fatherhood at 62 is pure Gold(blum).

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Chinese Porcelain --- Chinese porcelains are among the hardest for an average collector to identify and date. They have been made for centuries, and it is considered a tribute -- not an attempt to fool a customer -- to copy a piece perfectly, including the original mark. Unfortunately, today there also are some who deliberately make and sell excellent copies of antiques. The pictured vase is named "Five Boys." It is a piece of "famille rose" porcelain and has a six-character mark on the bottom. The boys are climbing or standing on the vase. One has a ruyi scepter; the others are helping each other to the top. The famille rose decoration could be several hundred years old or new. The color and clever three-dimensional figures helped the vase sell for $1,476, its decorative value. If it were 300 years old, it would sell for much more.

Q: My Rookwood mug is old, dated 1884. It is covered with line drawings of what look like comic book figures. The name Cranch is in block letters, and the usual Rookwood marks also are on the bottom. It is yellowish-white with black lines. Who is Cranch?

A: E.P. Cranch was a lawyer in Cincinnati who also was working for the Rookwood pottery from its beginning, as well as a poet, a storyteller and an artist. Cranch used the words and often humorous pictures of activities described in ballads and folklore. He remembered a ballad sung to him by Noah Webster's nephew 50 years earlier and wrote it down and illustrated it. Cranch seems best-known for his Rookwood pieces decorated with the Uncle Remus stories. His art appears on beer mugs, pitchers, jugs, plates, bottles and vases, most made in the 1880s. Although they are very different in style than most early Rookwood, with colored glazes and realistic decorations of flowers or perhaps Indian portraits, Cranch's work sells quickly. A 6 3/4-inch-high Cranch jug sold recently for $1,610. It was decorated with scenes and the words of the poem "Three Wise Men of Gotham Went to Sea in a Bowl."

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was French playwright Albert Guinon who made the following sage observation: "There are people who, instead of listening to what is being said to them, are already listening to what they are going to say themselves."

* You may not be surprised to learn that, according to a poll conducted by The Associated Press, Americans hate math twice as much as any other subject.

* A study published in 2008 showed that the price of a pain medication had an effect on its efficacy. In the study people were given placebo pills, some at the regular price and some at a discounted price. Those who paid full price for the medication reported more relief than those who paid less.

* During Elizabethan times, it was customary in England for a wife to wear her wedding ring on her thumb.

* It seems no one can adequately explain the reason why women tend to strike matches away from themselves, while men tend to strike them toward themselves.

* Dominique Bouhours, a Frenchman who lived in the 17th century, was a priest, an essayist and a grammarian. The love of language may have been closest to his heart, though; it's been reported that the final words he uttered on his deathbed were, "I am about to -- or I am going to -- die; either expression is used."

* Those who study such things say that sea slugs have 25,000 teeth.

* The town of Waco, Texas, has an entire museum dedicated to the popular soda Dr Pepper. Even more surprising is the fact that it gets more than a hundred visitors a day, on average.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* You can save dollars in the bathroom by installing low-flow showerheads. These days, there are several models that are earth-friendly but still give you a good showering experience. Always turn the water off while brushing your teeth, too!

* "While going through the junk drawers, I found about a million packets of assorted condiments. I felt bad junking them, but I have no idea how old they are. I put an empty cup in the fridge, and now we'll toss new ones in there -- and look to use them in lunches before they go bad." -- T. in Ohio

* "Got a plastic item that needs a bit of scrubbing? Fill a tub with hot to warm water and a capful of sudsy ammonia. Cover your hands with plastic dishwashing gloves, but add a pair of cotton gloves over top. Then, your hands are the scrubbers, and you can clean items like blinds in a flash." -- F.L. in Missouri

* "My friends and I have a summer vegetable club. Each week one of us goes to the farmer's market and buys several varieties of fruits and vegetables. Then we split it up among us. Since many of us are in single households, it makes getting a small amount of fresh produce possible, and it's always a great surprise to see what we'll be getting for the week." -- C.C. in Virginia

* "We are just beginning to formulate our end-of-year plans with family. Our rule of thumb: for every three days, plan no more than two activities. This way, there is down time for either a spontaneous activity or to just relax catching up with friends and family." -- D.W. in Florida

(Never known to fail!)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

Veterans' Stadium Field Turf Being Replaced

THE 12-YEAR-OLD field turf at Veterans' Memorial Stadium is being replaced with new turf this summer. The new turf is expected to be ready for use by the end of August.

The City of Quincy Park Department is removing the existing turf at Veterans' Memorial Stadium and will replace it with new field turf next month.

Rubber and sand infill are being suctioned and contained for recycling and strips of old turf are cut and rolled for recycling as well. This preliminary work will continue for the next two weeks.

The turf has been in place for 12 years, which is the average life for this type of surface. Every year, the turf is professionally groomed to help increase the lifespan of the surface. In addition, the Park Department has the turf tested for safety every two years. Over time, the grassy leaves become brittle from exposure to UV sunlight rays and with use, they break. With not enough cushion, the surface becomes no longer safe for the athletes using the field.

Veterans Memorial Stadium is used by North Quincy High School and Quincy High School football, semi-pro football as well as youth, club and high school soccer, lacrosse and marching bands. Offseason August workouts for high school football and adult soccer groups will be redirected to Creedon Field in North Quincy.

Once the new turf is complete, additional lines are being added for cross width soccer so two games can be played at once for youth and club teams.

The project is expected to cost $500,000 from the C.I.P. bond. The new turf installation will complete by the end of August for immediate use.

Absentee Voting Begins In MA Primary

Aug. 15 Last Day To Register To Vote For Sept. 4 Primary

By SCOTT JACKSON

Absentee voting for September's state primary election began Monday and will continue through the end of this month.

This year's state primary includes contested U.S. Senate and House races, as well as contested races for governor and other statewide constitutional offices.

Quincy voters can cast absentee ballots at the City Clerk's Office located on the second floor of the glass city hall annex building at 1305 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. City hall hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and the deadline to cast an absentee ballot is 5 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 31.

The primary election will take place on Tuesday, Sept. 4. The deadline to register to vote in the primary is 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 15.

The general election is set for Tuesday, Nov. 6. The cut off to register to vote ahead of that election is Wednesday, Oct. 17, at 8 p.m.

Nearly 600 Residential Units Planned For Former QMC Site

By TOM GORMAN

The shuttered Quincy Medical Center site on Whitwell Street would be turned into a development of mixed rental homes and townhouses totaling 598 units under a proposal by the developer, FoxRock Properties.

The developer's design team outlined plans during an informational meeting attended by more than 70 residents and city officials at Central Middle School on July 24. The team presented draft plans on landscaping and drainage improvements and results of a traffic study. FoxRock officials say they would submit their redevelopment proposal to the planning board in the fall.

"What we have tried to figure out is the best use for the site and create the best-in-class community that is a great community to live in that complements the best-in-class community that surrounds it," said FoxRock Properties Project Manager Jason Ward.

MICHAEL LeBLANC of Utile Architecture & Planning tells residents a proposed development of 598 residential units at the site of the former Quincy Medical Center would have "a nice balance of units and scale." Quincy Sun photo/Tom

The developer's plan calls for all the buildings on the 14.9 acre Quincy Medical Center campus, except the administration building, to be demolished. In their place, several structures would be built, a combination of flats, duplexes, and row houses.

"It's a nice balance of units and scale," said Michael LeBlanc of Utile Architecture & Planning. He added the exact mixes have not yet been determined.

The administration building in front would be flanked by townhouses. In back there would be two buildings, four row houses and a pool. Facing the Roselin Avenue side would be several duplexes.

The plan also includes a one-level, underground parking garage and a few ground level parking areas. The underground parking facility would be within the footprint of the structures.

The developer also said there would be plenty of greenspace and the adjacent Glendale Park would be maintained. Additionally, the site's three existing driveways would be utilized and there would be no vehicle access from the development to Euclid Avenue. Fencing and landscape buffering would surround the development's perimeter.

Ward explained the original redevelopment plan for the Whitwell Street property has been scaled back.

EARLY VOTERS – Before leaving for their first year at college, summer interns Anthony Zero and Alyssa Reynolds cast their absentee ballot at Quincy City Hall for the State Primary, which takes place on Tuesday Sept. 4th. Anthony will be attending George Washington University in Washington D.C. and Alyssa will be attending Salem State University. For college bound students or those who might be out of the city or state on election day, absentee voting is available at Quincy City Hall Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. until Friday, Aug. 31. Photo Quincy Election Department

Nearly 600 Residential Units Planned For QMC Site

The maximum height of the buildings has been reduced from the proposed eight stories to six. Density has been cut back and there would be a minimum of 20 percent open space.

Some residents voiced frustration that no updated renderings of the plan were available during the informational meeting. An outline of the proposal was shown during a PowerPoint presentation that residents complained lacked detail.

"I was hoping for more details on what these structures would look like," Hospital Hill Association President Ted Mulrane told the developers.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes agreed and said that renderings would be available for viewing prior to the proposal going before the planning board.

"I would have liked to see more definitive renderings," she said, adding, that another public meeting would be held before the plan is submitted to the city.

LeBlanc explained that the plans are still being finalized. Ward added that the exact placement of the structures is still being worked out.

"We want to make sure our site plan is correct when we get to the point of putting an architectural face on it," said Ward.

Several residents raised concerns that the proposed development would impact traffic, the neighborhood, and the city's municipal infrastructure.

Cassandra Beck, a lifelong Hospital Hill resident, opined that adding nearly 600 houses to the neighborhood would lead to overburdening the schools, police and fire departments and surrounding streets.

"There's such a bigger picture here to think about than just building a whole bunch of houses and putting up fences and talking about what you're going to do about privacy and water runoff and this, that and the other thing," she said.

Mulrane questioned whether residents of the new development would park on surrounding streets.

Ward said there likely would be no incentive for residents to park off site.

"The last thing we want is to create a situation that would clog streets," he said.

Traffic engineer Rob Woodland said a study was conducted during school days on 24 surrounding intersections during peak morning and afternoon times. The study included a seven-year projection of additional traffic in the area plus the additional vehicles expected to be generated by the development.

Woodland said the proposed development would generate "substantially less" than the 300 cars the hospital added to the neighborhood streets during peak hours when it was in operation. He concluded that the proposed development's impact would be "relatively minor."

A resident voiced concern about the Adams and Whitwell streets intersection that she said backs up during the morning and afternoon rush hours and adding what she opined would be two cars from each unit of the development would further impact the area.

"Our city cannot handle any more traffic," she said.

Woodland said the project is "transit-oriented," meaning that residents have access to the MBTA bus line that runs on Whitwell Street that would likely reduce some vehicular traffic.

Another resident was concerned that proposed rooftop gardens on the buildings would allow people to look down on her yard. LeBlanc said the gardens would designed to be back far enough so that neighborhood privacy would be not be impacted.

Landscape architect Kaki Martin of Klopfer Martin Design Group said there would be a combination of public, semi-private and private greenspaces throughout the project.

'The intention is a mix of spaces that support all ages of people," she said.

Martin noted that Glendale Park would be improved and maintained and its current use as an informal gathering spot would be retained.

LeBlanc said the existing administration building would be renovated and serve as the "front door" to the site. He said the coffee

Legislature Passes Consumer Data Security Law

The Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate voted unanimously July 26 to pass House Bill 4806, an act relative to consumer protection from security breaches.

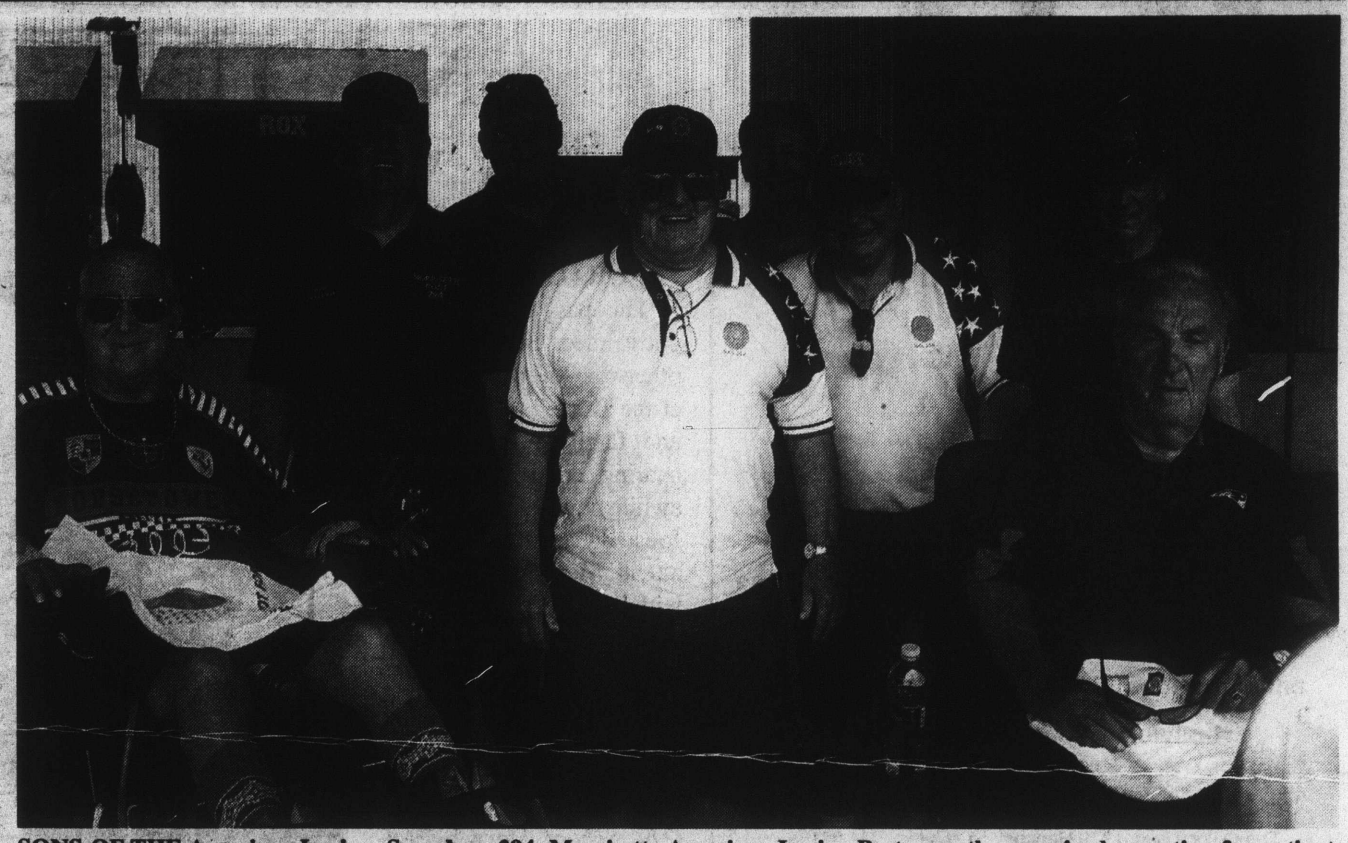

The bill represents a compromise reached between House and Senate conference committee negotiators, led by Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure Chairpeople Tackey Chan (D-Quincy) and Barbara L'Italien (D-Andover), along with members Rep. Dan Hunt (D-Boston), Rep. Randy Hunt (R-Sandwich), Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy), and Sen. Ryan Fattman (R-Webster). The compromise builds on recently passed federal regulations mandating the removal of all fees for consumers who elect to place, lift, or remove a credit freeze from a consumer reporting agency.

The Massachusetts legislation also updates the state's laws to reflect modern technological processes, updates notification requirements, and mandates free credit monitoring services if a security breach occurs.

"We are proud to have Massachusetts continue to lead in providing comprehensive consumer protections in cases of security breaches," said Rep. Chan. "Each of us entrust our information to others to protect and this legislation gives consumers new resources and greater awareness of the tools they can take advantage of to protect their credit. Through the dedicated efforts of the entire committee and conference members, we were able to work through a very comprehensive bill involving federal and state laws and regulations and are extremely proud of the legislation passed today."

H4806 updates laws to include electronic and verbal communication procedures for consumers' interactions with consumer reporting agencies, updates public notice requirements through the Attorney General's Office and the Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation, requires additional credit monitoring services be provided in cases of security breaches, and mandates that credit bureaus must disclose how to access a free credit freeze before offering any paid services. Following a breach of a business entity,

Poetry, Beachcombing Tour Saturday At Squaw Rock Park

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program is offering a free poetry and beachcombing tour at Squaw Rock Park on Saturday, Aug. 11 at 4:30 p.m.

Ilani D'Alfonso will read some of her poems about the ocean while participants stroll through the park followed by an exploration of the beach at low tide with coastal citizen scientist Peter Fifield. Participants should bring water, bug spray and wear long pants and socks that can cover pants bottoms (to minimize tick exposure).

The tour will begin in the parking lot of the Nickerson Post at the end of Dorchester Street in Squantum.

For more information, call 617-472-0799.

LGBTQuincy Meetup Social At Alba Aug. 8

LGBTQuincy Meetup will host a casual evening social on Wednesday, Aug. 8th at 6 p.m., on the roof deck of Alba Restaurant in Quincy Center.

The social is open to all members of the LGBT community in Quincy, and across the South Shore.

Light appetizers and a cash bar will be provided. Cover charge is $10 per person. RSVP by emailing Frank Rubino at frank55887@gmail.com.

GREEN WITHOUT ENVY

The birthstone for the month of August is peridot, the rare gem-quality variety of the mineral olivine. This is one of the few gemstones that only comes in one color-olive green with a slight yellowish tint. This is due to the fact that its signature green hue comes from the composition of the mineral itself, not from impurities (as is the case with so many other gemstones). As far as the history of the gemstone is concerned, it is believed that Cleopatra's famous emerald collection actually consisted of peridots. Peridot is referred to as the "evening emerald" because its color always remains the same, even in artificial light. When beautifully faceted, peridot evokes the beauty of late summer.

August's birthstone peridot stands on its own as a stunning focal point for rings, earrings, bracelets, pendants and pins. And its shimmering green color complements many other gemstones including diamond, sapphire and pearl. Having trouble making a decision between gemstones, settings and precious metals? Our experienced, friendly staff will be happy to show you fine jewelry in a wide range of styles, gem types, design and budget considerations. Come enjoy a visit with Rogers Jewelry soon at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center (617-773-3636).

Should you go back to a 30-year mortgage?

People are thinking about mortgages differently. Right now we're seeing borrowers who went with shorter terms going back to a 30-year loan. Some are tapping their equity for home improvements, college tuition or to consolidate other debt at a locked-in guaranteed low rate. Others just want a more comfortable monthly payment, less stress and more cash flow. It works because mortgage rates are still so low. And if you want, you can always pay the new 30-year loan off more aggressively, but you don't have to. Would a new 30-year mortgage make sense for you? Come see us or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

Now That's A Good Kid! A Visit With Bridget Kelley

By GRACIE WARREN

This past week, I finally got to meet Bridget Kelley, otherwise known as "Bridget the Brave" to her friends and family. I have been hearing about Bridget for awhile now from my friends Joe and Garrett Griffin, who attend Merrymount School with her.

When she was out of school with her illness, our family was one of many in Quincy that prayed for her. I was a little nervous to meet her, so I brought her a book (The School Story by Andrew Clements) and donuts from The Donut King. She and her sister Fiona loved the donuts and we hit it off right away. Bridget is just as awesome as Joe and Garrett promised. While we played on their swingset, my Mum chatted with their dad Dan about their new project, The Kelley Kids Foundation.

Bridget's family created the nonprofit foundation "as a way to pay it forward after receiving so much support from other organizations and individuals after Bridget's diagnosis." On Saturday, July 21, they hosted their first blood and bone marrow drive at The Merrymount School.

Bridget's father told us "Over 40 people came to donate blood, which helps over 100 patients at Boston Children's Hospital. An organization called Be the Match contacted us that they have started seeing several people registering to become bone marrow donors through the foundation's efforts." There was another blood drive scheduled for Saturday, July 28th in Brookline.

Bridget is having a great summer and was thrilled to come back to school this past year. She's read the entire Harry Potter series – I'm impressed! She's very excited about her new puppy, Lucky, a 10-week old Cavachon. I got to meet Lucky, and he is totally adorable.

BRIDGET KELLEY (right), her sister, Fiona (middle) and Gracie Warren enjoy some fun on a recent summer day. Bridget and her family have created a non-profit foundation to help families in need. They have also hosted blood and bone marrow drives. Photo Courtesy Amy Warren

Here are a few questions I had for Bridget:

GW: Describe yourself in five words or less.

BK: Dad, I need help on this one!

DK (Bridget's Dad): Brave, smart, kind, hilarious, curious, happy, helpful...

GW: What's your favorite movie and book?

BK: My favorite movie is "Star Wars" and my favorite book is Percy Jackson by Rick Riordan. I love J.K. Rowling too.

GW: What's your idea of the perfect day?

BK: It would be a sunny Saturday, where I can read outside or play with my new puppy Lucky.

GW: That does sound like a great day. What do you like to do for fun?

BK: I like to play on my iPad and I LOVE to read. I also like to play hide and seek with my friends and find them without opening my eyes.

GW: What's your favorite sport?

BK: Quidditch. But if you mean my favorite sport to play, its soccer.

GW: What do you love most about school?

BK: I love seeing my friends at school and English is my favorite class.

GW: Me too! We have a lot in common. If you could have one super power, what would it be?

BK: I always thought having x-ray vision would be cool.

GW: Yes, it would be. What do you love about living in Quincy?

BK: I like history and I like living in a city, close to a lot of people.

My last question was, what makes your family so amazing?

Her Dad said they have these family rules: be nice, be polite, be kind, and be HAPPY. Bridget is definitely all of those things. She's a true inspiration. Now, THAT'S a good kid!

Federal, States Laws Prohibit Drivers Hired To Transport Person With Disabilities From Smoking

In my opinion, it is critical for everyone to know that persons with disabilities are protected by the laws (ADA, 1992) and (M.G.L. Chapter 270, Section 22) against drivers who are smoking and transporting them in their vehicles.

There is no safe level exposure to secondhand tobacco smoke. (ADA). Secondhand tobacco smoke has the potential to cause immediately life threatening asthma attacks, and is the third leading preventable cause of death in the United States. Secondhand tobacco can cause impairment with difficulty breathing, and other ailments such as cardiovascular disorder that is caused or exacerbated by exposure to secondhand smoke.

Yet, it took me five months of advocating for my son with asthma to obtain a nonsmoking driver, and a smoke free van. It is important to know that once the drivers get in their vehicle, they are not allowed to smoke until their shift ends.

This special population are protected legally because state money is used to pay for these transportation services. Our loved ones deserve to breathe clean air!

Our children may be unable to advocate for themselves, however, we as the parents/guardians can.

Wind, Solar Dependence

Regarding QCAN and their push for 100 percent renewable resources by 2047.

Their plan depends solely on climate, what is their Plan B? As right now due to weather conditions in parts of Europe they are becalmed, wind solar generation stopped. The planet has lots of active volcanos, all it takes is a major event to obstruct the sun. Even the Sahara desert sand blowing across the Atlantic reflecting sun has an effect.

With the climatic changes that are happening rather quickly and the volcanic activity that might happen, the climate and planet in 2047 might be a lot different than now. Putting all your dependence on wind and solar is risky.

Passaganeset Park Project Will Replant, Reclaim Waterfront Home Of Chief Chickatawbut, MA Natives

Fundraising Effort By Quincy Parks Conservancy Will Pay Homage To State's Natural And Native American History

A bold new waterfront project will reconnect Massachusetts with its natural and Native American history – and Bay State citizens are invited to help make it a reality.

The Quincy Parks Conservancy is raising funds to plant groves of indigenous and decorative flora on Passanageset Park, a sprawling 103-acre tidal salt marsh with hiking trails on Quincy's historic Town River, just 10 miles from downtown Boston. The park was home of Chief Chickatawbut and the Massachusetts natives for whom the state gets its name.

"Each dollar raised will bring us one step closer to re-building and re-beautifying this green space while paying homage to our community's expansive natural history," said David Murphy, president of the Quincy Parks Conservancy.

The fundraising effort will allow the Conservancy to supplement the park's existing grasslands with trees, shrubs, bushes, plants and ornamental flowers, such as honey locust, bayberry and sea holly, among many others.

The first phase will plant five to six groves along Passanageset's six miles of hiking trails. The park already supports more than 150 species of birds, plus other wildlife, and a wide variety of crustaceans, shellfish and marine animals that thrive in its nutrient-rich waters. Cornell University lists Passanageset as a global birding hotspot.

"This planting project will make Passanageset an even greater haven for plant, animal and human activity," said Murphy. "The flowers will attract bees, the bushes and trees will welcome birds of all kinds – not to mention provide more opportunities for our communities of bird watchers. These new groves will also be attractive centerpieces for hikers who walk or jog the trails. There is even room for canoeing and kayaking on Passanageset's waterfront."

HISTORY OF PASSANAGESET

Passaganset was the favored residence of Chickatawbut, the great sachem of the Massachusetts people. Records show that Chickatawbut's mother was buried here, leading researchers to believe Passanageset may be Chickatawbut's birthplace and ancestral homeland.

The natives here engaged in a long list of agricultural and industrial activities, trapping and hunting game, gathering shellfish, harvesting corn, squash, beans, greens, wild grains and herbs, along with mining, whaling, and fishing.

State researchers unearthed a rare treasure trove of native artifacts in nearby Caddy Park on Wollaston Beach in 2009, re-confirming records that coastal Quincy was a major center of life for the Massachusetts people.

The Massachusetts people left Passanageset for Moswetuset Hummock on the north end of Wollaston Beach after being decimated by plague following the arrival of Europeans. Town River later became a center of industry and shipbuilding, while Passanageset was mined for stone and the park later covered by soil dredged from Town River. The name Passanagest passed from the history books.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers from 2009 to 2013 excavated dredged material at Passanageset and reduced the surface elevation to more natural levels, reintroducing tidal flushing of the salt marsh system in 2011, for the first time in many decades.

The history of Passanageset was brought to public light in 2014 by a group of students at Broad Meadows Middle School dubbed "the History Girls" (the school borders the park). They mustered local and state resources to recognize the salt marsh by its native name, Passanageset, introducing signage and re-introducing the legacy of the park and its history for future generations.

"The Quincy Parks Conservancy wants to continue to build upon all these great past efforts and make a Passanageset a center of waterfront recreation," said Conservancy president Dave Murphy.

HOW TO DONATE

Information about donating to the Passanagest Park Project can be found here at the Quincy Parks Conservancy website.

The Conservancy offers a variety of sponsorship levels for those who want to help re-forest Passanageset Park. Images of the types and variety of plant-life expected to be used can be found here.

All of the categories below will directly support the re-forestation project at Passanageset park. Specific applications may change as conditions and needs change.

Personal donations (any amount) – Every dollar raised will aid the re-forestation of Passanageset Park. Your donation will be used where it is most needed and your help is greatly appreciated.

Petal Sponsor ($100) – Supports planting a variety of indigenous and other flowering plants that will provide color to the groves at Passanageset Park, drawing honey bees, humming birds and other life essential to the park's sustainability.

Branch Sponsor ($250) – Provides both flowering and deciduous shrubs that will enhance the look and bio-sustainability of Passanageset's groves.

Garden Sponsor ($500) –Offera variety of flowering plants, shrubs and small bushes to complement the tree groves and enhance the rest-a-while areas for walkers, joggers and other recreational users of the Passanageset Park.

Grove Sponsor ($1,000) – The initial phasePassanageset Park will have five to six groves containing a variety of indigenous trees that provide shade for smaller plantings and for recreational users, homes for many species of birds indigenous to the area, as well as for other wildlife, and also provide the soil sustainability essential to protecting tidal marshes.

Sustaining Sponsor ($2,000) – At just over 100 acres, Passanageset Park is a large area that needs consistent care. Sustaining sponsors will help provide regular watering, arborist care and maintenance to sustain to reforestation efforts.

Curator Circle ($5,000) – Hardscaping will play a part in the revitalization of this treasure. Along with the many miles of walking trails and multiple planting groves, Passanageset Park will have shaded resting areas where visitors can sit to rest, or simply enjoy to beauty of the area, including its scenic waterfront views. Curators will help us establish benches, informational kiosks and other hardscaping to enhance time spent in Passanageset Park.

PASSANAGESET LOCATION & ACCESS

Passanageset Park is located between Town River and Sea Street in Quincy, Mass., just 10 miles from downtown Boston.

It is accessible via trails located at Quincy Youth Arena (60 Murphy Memorial Drive) and Broad Meadows Middle School (50 Calvin Road). There is public parking at both locations.

Passanageset is accessible by public transportation, located one mile from Quincy Center T station on the MBTA Red Line and commuter rail. The MBTA's 214 and 216 bus routes stop on Sea Street, a short distance outside Passanageset.

McIntyre Seeks $700,000 For New FR Bridge Design

Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre is seeking a $700,000 state allocation to pave the way for a new $11 million Fore River Bridge.

McIntyre asked Governor Francis W. Sargent this week to request the funds from the House Ways and Means Committee for the design, plans and specifications for the new vertical lift-type bridge.

McIntyre wrote to Sargent in a letter, that the new bridge would enable the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard to bid on super-sized aircraft carriers and tankers, which now cannot get through the present bridge.

State Public Works Commissioner Edward J. Ribbs last week estimated the cost of a new vertical lift-bridge at $11 million.

GERORGE BURKE, RICHARD BARRY BREAKING UP LONG-TIME TEAM

One of Quincy's youngest but most prominent political-professional teams is breaking up.

District Attorney George G. Burke, 37, and First Assistant Richard W. Barry, 35, a virtual definition of "togetherness" for nearly 20 years, are parting.

They will go their separate ways at the end of August, but remain as close friends as ever. Barry is voluntarily stepping down as Burke's first assistant at the end of the month to devote full-time to his private law practice.

"I hate to see Dick leave," said Burke. "During the past several years handled a number of big cases, including several murders and never lost one."

Local Women Create Dresses For Poverty-Stricken Girls

Aid 'Dress A Girl Around The World' Organization

Imagine a world where every little girl owned her own dress! And imagine if that dress was made by you.

On Saturday, June 30, a group of local women met at the Wollaston Congregational Church to create precious little dresses for the Dress A Girl Around the World (DAG) organization. Dress A Girl provides dresses for vulnerable girls suffering from extreme poverty and abuse in over 80 countries around the world, including the United States. Being given a beautiful new dress, and being told it was made just for her, can give a young lady a sense of dignity and self worth.

Hosted by Joan Donovan and instructed by DAG Co-Ambassadors Kendra Arocho and Gail McCarthy, the ladies sewed 16 adorable sun dresses that will be sent to the girls by way of missionaries, and Operation Christmas Child.

Those interested in helping can visit the official DAG website for instructions to make a dress at home. Those who don't sew can sponsor a dress, donate fabric and trim, or attend a workshop to help with ironing, measuring and packaging.

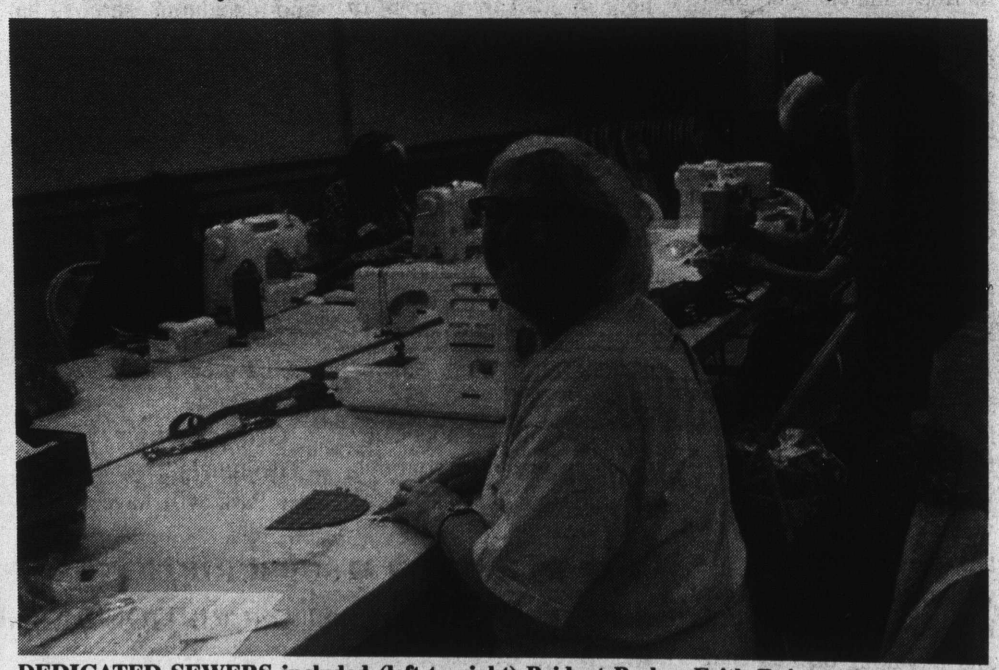

For more information, contact either Kendra or Gail at dressagirlmari@hotmail.com, visit the Dress A Girl Facebook page, or visit www.dressagirlaroundtheworld.com, the official DAG website.

Jennifer Bruce Running Falmouth RR In Support Of Joe Andruzzi Foundation

The Joe Andruzzi Foundation (JAF) – an organization committed to providing financial assistance to New England cancer patients and their family members when it is needed most – announces Jennifer Bruce of Quincy will run the 2018 New Balance Falmouth Road Race in support of the Foundation's mission.

On Sunday, Aug. 19, over 60 "Team JAF" runners will take strides against cancer and represent the foundation in the scenic 7-mile race on Cape Cod. Last year's team raised more than $100,000, and the 2018 team hopes to continue to raise the bar.

Back in 2016, Bruce took on the Falmouth Road Race for the first time. As her first ever road race, she is the first to admit that while it is certainly challenging, it is also extremely rewarding. Since then, she's taken on several races and two half marathons.

Her first Falmouth Road Race experience was one she will never forget. On that day, she met a number of charity runners and instantly knew that she wanted to return to the race as a runner for a special team that she could stand behind. She was drawn to JAF and its mission of helping cancer patients and their families focus on living a happy life. This year, she is thrilled to use running as a way to raise money and awareness for an important cause that is close to her heart, as several of her friends and family members have battled the terrible disease.

JENNIFER BRUCE of Quincy will run the 2018 New Balance Falmouth Road Race in support of the The Joe Andruzzi Foundation, an organization that provides financial assistance to New England cancer patients and their families.

"We are very excited to have Jennifer as a Foundation ambassador this summer and are thankful for all she is doing to further our mission," said Jen Andruzzi, executive dDirector of JAF. "Jennifer's efforts are directly benefitting cancer patients and families in need throughout New England. We are grateful for the efforts our runners are making to prepare for this race and we are excited to come together as a team this August."

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children Friday, Aug. 3 through through Wednesday, Aug. 8.

Online Summer Reading Challenge

This summer from July 1st through Aug. 31st track your reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading program. Sign up, log books, and complete activities.

As you add books and complete activities you will earn online badges and points toward our end of summer raffle. We'll have a drawing for the raffle prizes the first week in September. We have two programs one for babies and young children up to age 6 and the other for ages 7-13. Teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

Looking for some good books to read? When you sign up for the online summer reading program you will begin receiving weekly emails with book suggestions. Parents of younger children will also receive an early literacy tip to extend your reading experience for older children these suggestions are a great way to find new books and authors to try.

Esther Day Celebration
Friday, Aug. 3rd
from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.
All ages

Esther Earl, a local Quincy resident, passed away from cancer in 2010. Her moving story This Star Won't Go Out, inspired millions of readers. We will be celebrating her birthday with fun outdoor activities: games, music, and more.

In case of inclement weather we will move indoors and play games there.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop-in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 to 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

Monday, Main Library; Tuesday, Adams Shore; Wednesday, Wollaston; Thursday, North Quincy

Drop in from 2 to 4 p.m. up to age 8 Craft for the Week of Aug. 6th – Hand drum.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Children's Movie @ North Quincy—
Princess and the Frog Monday, Aug. 6th
at 2 p.m.
Rated G

Set in the great city of New Orleans, a beautiful girl named Tiana meets a frog prince who desperately wants to be human again, and a fateful kiss leads them both on a hilarious adventure through the mystical bayous of Louisiana.

This movie is rated G and runs for 98 minutes.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Teddy Bear Storytime
Wednesday, Aug. 8th
at 10 a.m.
Ages 2-5

Join children's librarian Cathy deVeer and Quinn Z. Bear, for stories, songs and more.

This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. No registration required.

Zucchini Crisps

By MARIE

Today's recipe for zucchini crisps is a bit different from the usual zucchini fritters because for the fritters we shred the zucchini but in today's recipe, we slice the zucchini.

The recipe calls for sliced and breaded zucchini and the result is a tasty, crispy snack which can also be used as a side dish.

RECIPE:

2 zucchini sliced ¼ inch thick, set aside
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup flour
½ cup vegetable oil for the sauté
1 cup of panko breadcrumb (or you can use cornflake crumbs instead)
½ cup parmesan cheese

Add the parmesan cheese to the flour and blend well.

Slice the zucchini and dip into the cheese and flour mixture. Then dip the zucchini into the beaten egg and then the bread crumb.

In a large skillet, heat the oil and sauté the zucchini until browned on each side.

Drain on paper towel.

If you are not going to eat them right away put them on a cookie sheet and keep in a warming oven until you are ready to serve.

Fava Bean Hummus

By SUSIE

In addition to being a lean protein choice with lots of fiber, fava beans contain vitamin K, vitamin B6, zinc, copper, iron, magnesium and more.

If that isn't enough, they're also some of the top high-folate foods around. You gain 177 micrograms of folate in just one cup of cooked fava beans.

That is why I am showing you this delicious recipe for hummus made with Fava beans rather than chick peas.

In a blender, or food processor, mix 2 cups cooked fava beans, 2 garlic minced garlic cloves, and ¼ cup extra virgin olive oil with half of an avocado, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and some sea salt. Mix until blended.

This is great on a baguette.

What Are Probiotics And What Do They Do?

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Probiotics are live microorganisms that are intended to have health benefits. Products sold as probiotics include foods, such as yogurt, dietary supplements, and products that aren't used orally, such as skin creams. Even though people often think of bacteria and other microorganisms as harmful germs, many microorganisms assist our bodies to function properly.

For instance, bacteria that are normally present in our intestines help digest food, destroy disease-causing microorganisms, and produce vitamins. A sizeable amount of microorganisms live on and in our bodies. As a matter of fact, microorganisms in the human body outnumber human cells by 10 to 1. Many of the microorganisms in probiotic products are identical or similar to microorganisms that naturally live in our bodies.

Probiotics may comprise a variety of microorganisms. The most common are bacteria that are members of groups called Lactobacillus and Bifidobacterium. Each of these two broad classifications includes many types of bacteria. Other bacteria may also be used as probiotics, and so may yeasts such as Saccharomyces boulardii.

RUTH JONES

Researchers have examined probiotics to find out whether they might help prevent or treat a variety of health problems, including:

- Digestive disorders such as diarrhea caused by infections, antibiotic-associated diarrhea, irritable bowel syndrome, and inflammatory bowel disease
- Allergic disorders such as atopic dermatitis (eczema) and allergic rhinitis (hay fever)
- Tooth decay, periodontal disease, and other oral health problems
- Colic in infants
- Liver disease
- The common cold
- Prevention of necrotizing enterocolitis in very low birth weight infants.

There's preliminary substantiation that some probiotics are useful in preventing diarrhea caused by infections and antibiotics and in improving symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome, but more research needs to be performed. We still don't know which probiotics are helpful and which are of no use. We also are not aware of how much of the probiotic people would have to consume or which candidates would most likely benefit from taking probiotics. Researchers are still working toward finding these answers, even for the conditions that have been studied most frequently. While some probiotics have shown promise in research studies, strong scientific evidence to support precise uses of probiotics for most health conditions is deficient. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has not approved any probiotics for preventing or treating any health problem or specific disease. Experts have cautioned that the rapid growth in the marketing and use of probiotics may have overtaken actual scientific research for many of their suggested uses and proposed benefits.

Probiotics may have a variety of effects in the body, and different probiotics may act in different ways.

Probiotics might:

- Help to maintain a desirable community of microorganisms
- Stabilize the digestive tract's barriers against undesirable microorganisms or produce substances that inhibit their growth
- Help the community of microorganisms in the digestive tract return to normal after being disturbed (for example, by an antibiotic or a disease)
- Outcompete undesirable microorganisms
- Stimulate the immune response.

Government regulation of probiotics in the United States is complicated. Depending on a probiotic product's intended use, the FDA might regulate it as a dietary supplement, a food ingredient, or a drug. Many probiotics are sold as dietary supplements, which do not require FDA approval before they are marketed. Dietary supplement labels may create claims about how the product affects the structure or function of the body without FDA approval; however they cannot make health claims (claims that the product reduces the risk of a disease) without the FDA's consent. Whether probiotics are likely to be safe for you depends on the state of your health. In people who are usually healthy, probiotics have a positive safety record. Side effects, if they occur at all, typically consist only of mild digestive symptoms such as gas. Conversely, there have been reports associating probiotics to severe side effects, such as critical infections, in people with serious underlying medical issues. Those who are most at risk of severe side effects include gravely ill patients, those who have had surgery, extremely ill infants, and people with weakened immune systems

Even for those who are healthy, there are uncertainties about the safety of probiotics. Because many research studies on probiotics haven't focused on safety, information regarding this is lacking. Most of our knowledge about safety comes from studies of Lactobacillus and Bifidobacterium; less is understood about other probiotics. Information on the long-term safety of probiotics is limited, and safety may differ from one type of probiotic to another.

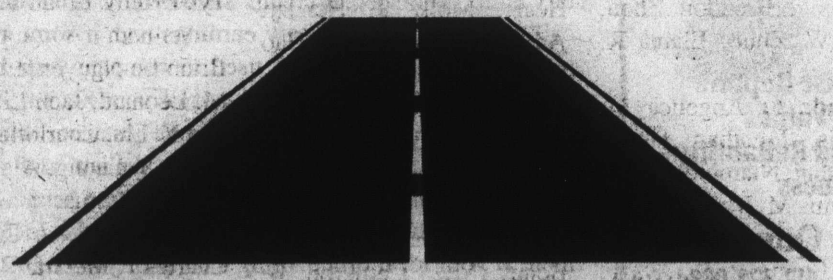

If you or your family are planning to use probiotics, keep these points in mind:

- Don't replace scientifically proven treatments with unproven products and practices. Don't use a complementary health product, such as probiotics, as a reason to delay seeing your health care provider about any health problem.
- If you're considering a probiotic dietary supplement, consult your health care provider first. This is especially important if you have health issues. Anyone with a serious underlying health condition should be monitored closely while taking probiotics.
- If you're pregnant or nursing a child, or if you're considering giving a child a dietary supplement, such as probiotics, it's especially important to consult your (or your child's) health care provider.
- Tell all your health care providers about any complementary or integrative health approaches you use. This will help ensure coordinated and prudent care.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

City of Quincy's TPAL (Traffic, Parking, Alarm)
Department will present an interactive workshop at the Kennedy Center.

Friday, August 3rd at 11AM

Learn how Quincy's streets are designed and how you can have input in the process. The workshop will show you all the ins and outs of the process of street designing, taking into consideration how to provide for safe, reliable mobility for the uses of our roadways, walkways trails and transit systems. The complete street program considers the needs of pedestrians, bicyclists, transit riders, motorist, commercial vehicles and emergency vehicles. Refreshments will be served. This promises to be a fun and informative workshop. Registration is required, please call 617-376-1506 to register.

Special Extra Earnings For Military Service

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

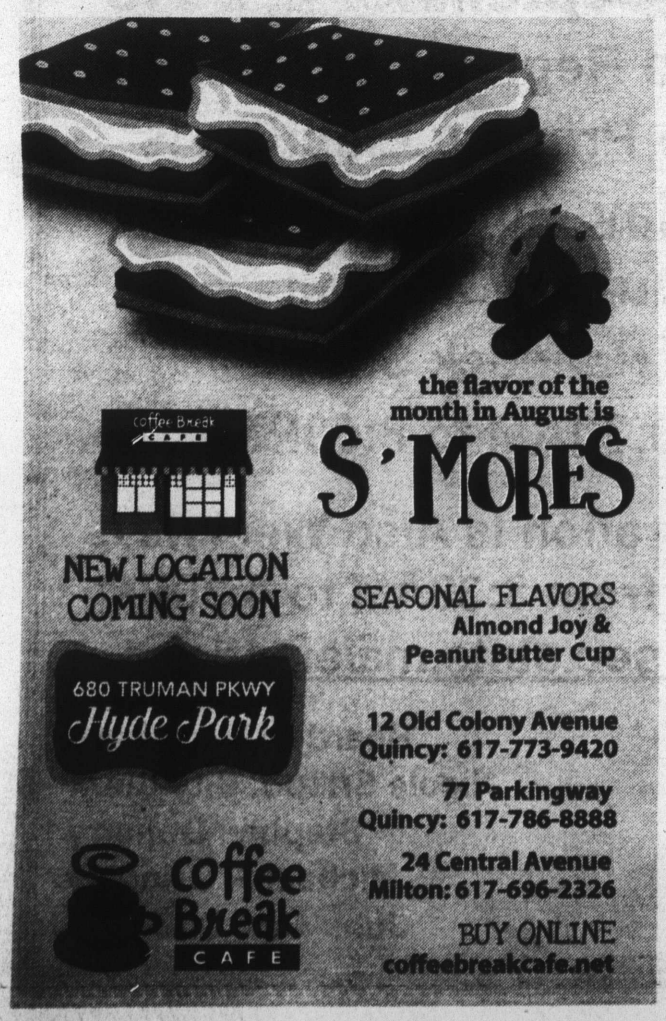

Dear Rusty: Both my cousin and I served in the military starting in 1964. He completed his 4 years and got out; I served for 20 years. A few years ago we were visiting and he asked me if I was getting my Special Extra Earnings - approximately $300 - from Social Security? He said it's because we served in the military when the pay was so low. When I returned home I checked with our local Social Security office and was told I was not getting the Special Extra Earnings because after I got out of the service I made too much money; I accepted their answer. Then I read a Social Security column in a local newspaper. The columnist recommended anytime Social Security turns down a claim that you file an appeal. I did have a good job after I left the Military, but it wasn't like I was making millions. Do you think I should file a claim asking them to reconsider my request for Special Extra Earnings? Signed: Military Service Veteran

Dear Veteran: Please accept my gratitude for your many years of military service. The "special extra earnings" of which you speak are extra earnings credited to your military pay for those years you served between1957 and 2001. The credit is $300 for each quarter of active military service between the years 1957 and 1977 and, for the period 1978 – 2001, an additional $100 in earnings for every $300 in active duty pay up to a maximum of $1200 per year. It's important to note that these are credits to your military earnings record, not an additional amount added to your Social Security benefit. Those credits should have been automatically applied to your earnings record when you applied for benefits, but whether they affected your Social Security benefit depends upon whether any of your years of military service were included in the 35 used to compute your benefit.

To determine your benefit, Social Security adjusts all years of your lifetime earnings (including military earnings) for inflation and then uses the 35 highest-earning years as the basis for your benefit. Typically, the earnings in your later years of employment are the highest of your career, which is probably why the Social Security representative said you didn't get the credits because you "made too much money" after you got out of the service. It's more probable that the credits were automatically applied to your military earnings and that only some of your latter years of military service were used to compute your benefit. The best way to check this is to get your Earnings Statement from Social Security and examine your lifetime earnings to see which years are highest, keeping in mind that Social Security only counts earnings up to the FICA payroll tax cap for each year. By doing this you can see which years of your military earnings were included in your benefit computation. You can get your Earnings Statement by creating an online "My Social Security" account at www.ssa.gov , or by requesting one from your local Social Security office.

For information about the special earnings credit for military service visit: https://www.ssa.gov/planners/retire/military.html. The special credits should have been automatically added to your military earnings and, if some of your military service years were used to compute your benefit, should already be included as part of your Social Security payment. I've heard of only a couple instances where the special earnings credits had not been applied, and you are certainly within your rights to challenge the Social Security Administration. To do that, I suggest you make an appointment at your local office, bring a copy of your DD-214 and ask to speak to a supervisor who can review your lifetime earnings record to ensure the special credits for your military service were applied. And, once again, thank you for your service to our country.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOOTH DISCOLORATION

When brown spots appear on teeth, it may be a sign of any number of conditions. Many dark-colored foods and drinks contain "chromogens," substances in organic fluids that form color when oxidized. For instance, the tannic acid in red wine can not only stain teeth, but the stains can also become permanent, especially among people with poor dental hygiene. Nicotine and tobacco products can also have a similar effect, as the particles in cigarettes, cigars, and chewing tobacco stick to microscopic pores in tooth enamel. These stains eventually become darker and more difficult to remove. Lastly, brown spots on teeth may indicate accumulated plaque that hardens into a substance ("tartar") that is linked with tooth decay and tooth discoloration.

In addition to the way other people see you, the many methods of cosmetic dentistry can greatly improve the way you see yourself. Thanks to procedures like whitening, bonding, veneers, contouring, and implants, you can have the smile you've always wanted. Here at our comfortable, welcoming offices at 44 Greenleaf Street, we will use all our skills, artistry, and experience to design a treatment plan that exactly suits your needs and lifestyle. Call us for an appointment at 617 479-6220. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com to learn more about our services.

P.S. As plaque and tartar eat the sugars that pass through the mouth, they produce acids, which cause decay and weaken enamel."

Absentee Voting Begins In MA Primary Election

The Democratic primary includes races for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, governor's councillor and the U.S. House. The Republican primary includes contests for governor, attorney general and U.S. Senate.

Two candidates – Jay Gonzalez and Bob Massie – are running for the Democratic nomination for governor. They will face off against the winner of the Republican contest, which sees first-term incumbent Charlie Baker up against Scott Lively.

There are also two Democrats seeking the nod in the race for lieutenant governor, Quentin Palfrey and Jimmy Tingle. On the Republican side, Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito is uncontested.

Two Republicans are vying for the nomination in attorney general race, James McMahon III and Daniel Shores. First-term incumbent Maura Healey is uncontested on the Democratic side.

Two Democrats are squaring off in the race for secretary of state – incumbent William Galvin and Josh Zakim, a Boston city councillor. Galvin has been secretary of state since 1995. The winner will face Republican candidate Anthony Amore in November.

State Treasurer Deborah Goldberg, seeking a second term, is uncontested in the Democratic primary, and will face Republican Keiko Orrall, a state representative from Lakeville, in November.

Auditor Suzanne Bump, seeking her third term, is uncontested in the Democratic primary. She will face two challengers in November, Republican Helen Brady and Libertarian Daniel Fishman.

Three Republicans are running for their party's nomination in the race for U.S. Senate: state Rep. Geoff Diehl, John Kingston and Beth Joyce Lindstrom. On the Democratic side, incumbent Elizabeth Warren is uncontested. Warren is seeking her second six-year term.

U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, a Democrat, is facing two challengers in the primary to represent the Eighth District on Capitol Hill, Christopher Voehl and Brianna Wu. The winner will be unopposed in November. Lynch was first elected to Congress in a 2001 special election.

Quincy's state senator and four state representatives, all Democrats, are unopposed in the primary. Two representatives will face Republican challengers in November.

Rep. Tackey Chan is seeking his fifth term representing the Second Norfolk District. He will face Republican William Burke in the November general election. Burke unsuccessfully challenged Lynch in 2016. The district, entirely located in Quincy, includes all of Ward 1; Precincts 1 and 2 in Ward 3; Precincts 2 and 2 in Ward 4; and Precincts 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Ward 5.

Rep. Ron Mariano is seeking his fourteenth full term as the representative for the Third Norfolk District. Mariano was first elected in a 1991 special election. He will be opposed by Stephen Tougas, a Republican, in the November election. Tougas unsuccessfully ran for an at-large seat on the Quincy City Council last year. The district includes all of Ward 2 and Ward 4, Precinct 5 in Quincy, as well as several precincts in Holbrook and Weymouth.

Rep. Bruce Ayers is seeking his eleventh term representing the First Norfolk District. The district includes all of Ward 6; Precincts 4 and 5 of Ward 3; Precincts 1 and 3 of Ward 4; Precinct 2 in Ward 5; and four precincts in Randolph.

Rep. Dan Hunt is seeking is third full term as the representative in the Thirteenth Suffolk District, which covers parts of Boston and Ward 3, Precinct 3 in Quincy. Hunt was first elected in a 2014 special election.

Sen. John Keenan is seeking his fifth term representing the Norfolk and Plymouth District, which includes all of Quincy, Holbrook, Abington and Rockland as well as several Braintree precincts.

Two Democrats are running in the primary for a seat on the Governor's Council – incumbent Christopher Ianella Jr. and Mark Rooney. The winner will be unopposed in November.

The Norfolk County officials, all Democrats, running for re-election this year are all unopposed in both the primary and general election. They are District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Clerk of Courts Walter Timilty Jr., Register of Deeds William O'Donnell, Commissioner Peter Collins and Treasurer James Timilty.

Legislature Passes Consumer Data Security Law

which includes Social Security numbers, Massachusetts residents who were affected will receive free credit monitoring services for 1.5 years; if a breach occurs at a consumer reporting agency, Massachusetts residents will receive free credit monitoring services for 3.5 years. Under this legislation, breached parties will be required to disclose their parent or affiliated corporation to consumers, as well as information about where the breach occurred, in order to increase transparency.

"The Equifax data breach affected many South Shore residents and was a wake-up call that our consumer protection laws needed to be strengthened," Keenan said. "Through this legislation, Massachusetts' laws are current with technology, include strong credit freeze provisions, stringent notice of breach requirements and access to fair credit monitoring, all to provide greater protections to consumers."

Rep. Hunt said:

"In the wake of the Equifax breach, we have learned that our personal credit information is more vulnerable than ever. This bill empowers consumers to better understand their credit reports and helps them take action to protect themselves when their information has been compromised."

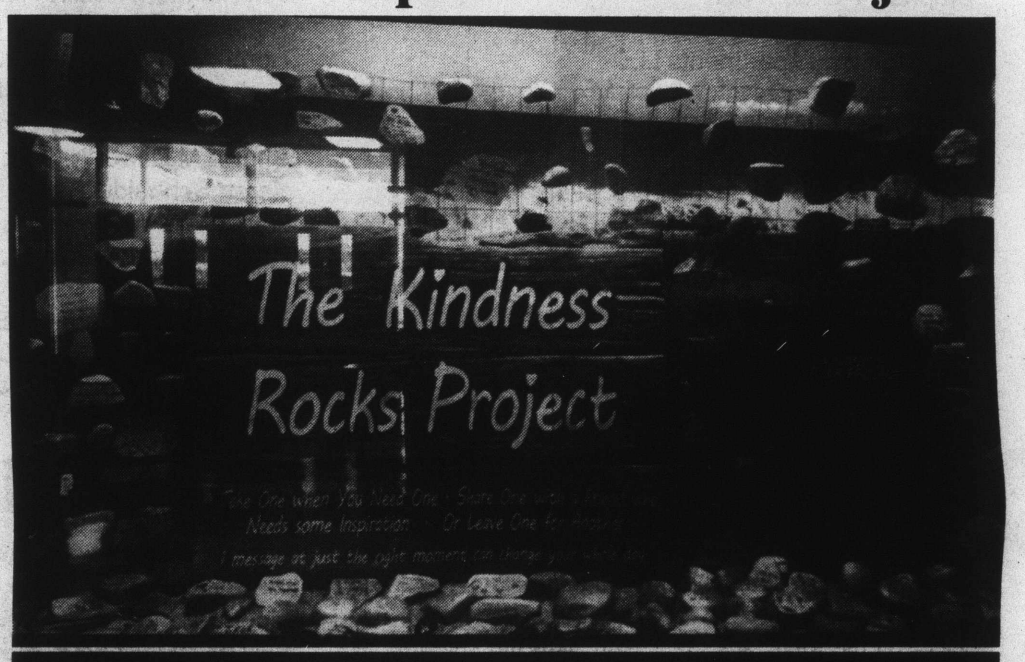

The Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure has been working to address the growing issue of data security since the Equifax data breach went public in September 2017, and the legislation passed last week represents months of research and discussions with stakeholders and fellow legislators to address the complex topic.

The legislation builds on federal regulations that were passed by Congress in late May, after the conference committee had begun negotiations to reconcile the House and Senate bills. Under federal law, consumer reporting agencies are prohibited from charging any fees to a consumer who elects to place, lift, or remove a credit freeze and requires consent from a consumer for access to their consumer credit report. After a request to place a security freeze, credit bureaus must comply within one day of receiving the request, and if a consumer requests to remove a freeze, credit bureaus must comply within one hour.

Federal law will go into effect Sept. 21, while the state law will go into effect 90 days after the bill is signed by the governor.

More information about federal and state data security protections can be found athttps://www.consumer.ftc.gov/ and https://www.mass.gov/identity-theft-data-privacy-and-cyber-security.

Students Complete Kindness Project

EIGHTH GRADE STUDENTS at the Atlantic Middle School recently completed the Kindness Project. Megan Murphy started the Kindness Rocks Project by displaying vibrantly painted rocks bearing inspirational messages at locations around Cape Cod. Her thought was that one positive message at just the right time can change your whole day. Atlantic Middle School eighth grade students, along with their teacher Terri Zauft, worked on this project in health education classes. "I am retiring this year and wanted to make an ongoing impact on the students," said Terri Zauft. "I am so proud of the 8th grade students, they really came through for their final project at Atlantic Middle School."

O'Donnell Promotes Registry Of Deeds' Social Media

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds citizens of the importance he places on the Registry's use of social media platforms to communicate directly with the citizens of Norfolk County.

"A core mission here at the Registry of Deeds is to make important information readily available on a 24/7 basis. After all, just because our doors close at the end of the business day doesn't mean the Registry has to stop working for you. For example, our website www.norfolkdeeds.org lets people review scanned images of over six million land documents dating back to 1793, as well as to learn about our latest consumer protection programs. I also want people to note that Registry information is available not just from using their workstations or laptops, but also from their smartphones or tablets," O'Donnell said.

The register also noted citizens can print out an application of the popular Homestead Act. A Homestead provides a homeowner with limited protection against the forced sale of their primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

Norfolk County residents can also sign-up on-line for its free Consumer Notification Service. This program will alert a person anytime a land document has been recorded against their name in Norfolk County. Additionally, there is valuable county real estate information that can be researched and tracked based on the monthly and quarterly real estate statistical reports, such as the number of residential and commercial properties sold and average prices of property sold, and much, much more.

Besides the Registry website, other forms of social media utilized by the Registry of Deeds include Facebook, facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds, Twitter, twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds, and Instagram.

"The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has utilized Facebook and Twitter extensively to provide information to the public," O'Donnell said. "We are also utilizing Instagram which will capture the demographics of younger property owners and real estate professionals. We are optimistic that homeowners, and in particular first-time home buyers, will use these social media platforms. They can learn more about home ownership and other consumer initiatives like protecting themselves against Deed Scam rip-offs, along with other outreach services, including learning about Registry office hours in their community."

The Registry has also filmed multiple public service announcements (PSA's) which are available on the Registry's website and YouTube. These PSA's have touched on a variety of issues such as assistance for residents who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Videos highlighting the Registry's various philanthropic initiatives, such as its Annual Holiday Food Drive and its

Arts Affair At Marina Bay

Saturday And Sunday

The 23rd annual Arts Affair at Marina Bay will be beld Saturday, Aug. 4 and Sunday, Aug. 5 at the Corporate Park at 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay, Quincy.

The two-day exhibition showcases the talent of artists, sculptors, and photographers who live and work in the South Shore and Boston communities.

Exhibit hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The lobby and cafeteria of Corporate Park are transformed into a pop-up gallery the first weekend every August. Event-goers will be treated to a variety of works including drawing, mixed media, oil & acrylic painting; photography, sculpture, and watercolor. Back again is the popular "Fabulous Fakes" category.

This year's judging panel includes: Mim Brooks Fawcett, executive director and chief curator, Attleboro Arts Museum for the category of oil and acrylic; Irena Roman, award winning watercolor artist and illustrator and professor at Massachusetts College of Art and Design, for the category of watercolor; Carolyn Muskat, owner of Muskat Studios, a professional printmaking studio in Somerville, for the categories of drawing, mixed media, and sculpture; Award-winning photographer, and former president of the Plymouth Center for the Arts, Richard Mulcahy, in the category of photography; and Joyce Creiger, international art consultant and owner of ArtSpecifier, for the category of fabulous fakes.

The awards presentation takes place in the cafeteria on Sunday, Aug. 5th, at 4 p.m.

There are also a few new additions to the Arts Affair this year. A free, live model two-hour session, open to artists and anyone who wants to drop in. Meet outside the cafeteria by the giant anchor, Saturday, Aug. 4th, 2 to 4 p.m. You must provide your own drawing and painting supplies. Rain date Sunday, 2 to 4 p.m.

Also, the public is invited to cast a vote for a new award ribbon: The People's Choce Award. The award will be given in memory of Marilyn Reisberg, a founding member of the Arts Affair.

All work is original and available for purchase.

There will be raffles and art demonstrations throughout the weekend, rain or shine.

Free admission and free parking.

SH Farm Stand Accepting SNAP/HIP Benefits

In partnership with Mayor Koch's Office, Quincy Community Action Programs and Quincy Asian Resources the Quincy Housing Authority is hosting a Farm Stand featuring Myco Terra Farms.

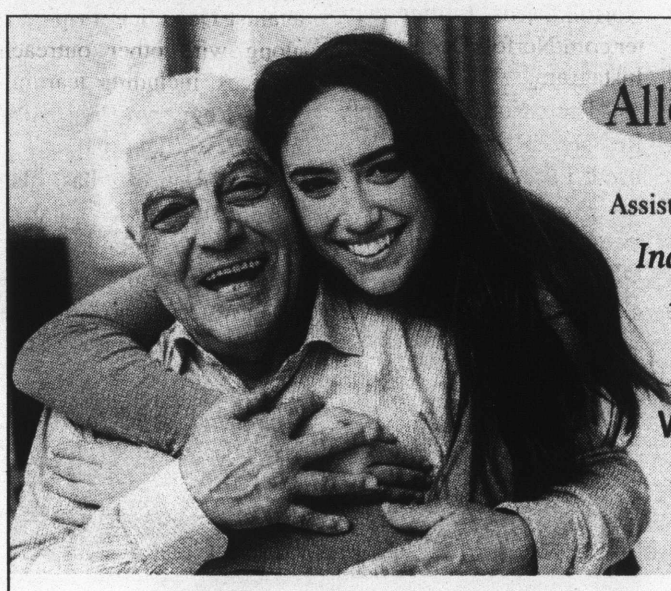

The farm stand features a variety of fresh, local produce and will be accepting SNAP & Healthy Incentive Program (HIP) benefits. All SNAP recipients are automatically enrolled in the HIP which helps recipients buy more fresh fruits and produce.

The HIP program is simple. Use your SNAP benefits at the Snug Harbor Farm Stand to buy fruits or vegetables and you will receive $1 for each dollar you spend on eligible fruits and vegetables, up to $40 per month. You must have a SNAP balance to earn the HIP incentive benefits.

James Marathas, executive director for Quincy Housing Authority, said opening day was a great success. "There were over 100 households shopping and a wide variety of locally grown fruits and vegetables were available, said Marathas. "Quincy Housing Authority is proud to work with our community partners to provide access to fresh produce through the HIP program."

The Snug Harbor farm stand will run every Wednesday from 1 to 6 p.m. in the visitor's parking lot at O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St. in Germantown. Mandarin and Cantonese interpreters will be available.

The farm stand is open to the public. All are welcome.

Morrisette Advances To Semi-Finals In State Tourney

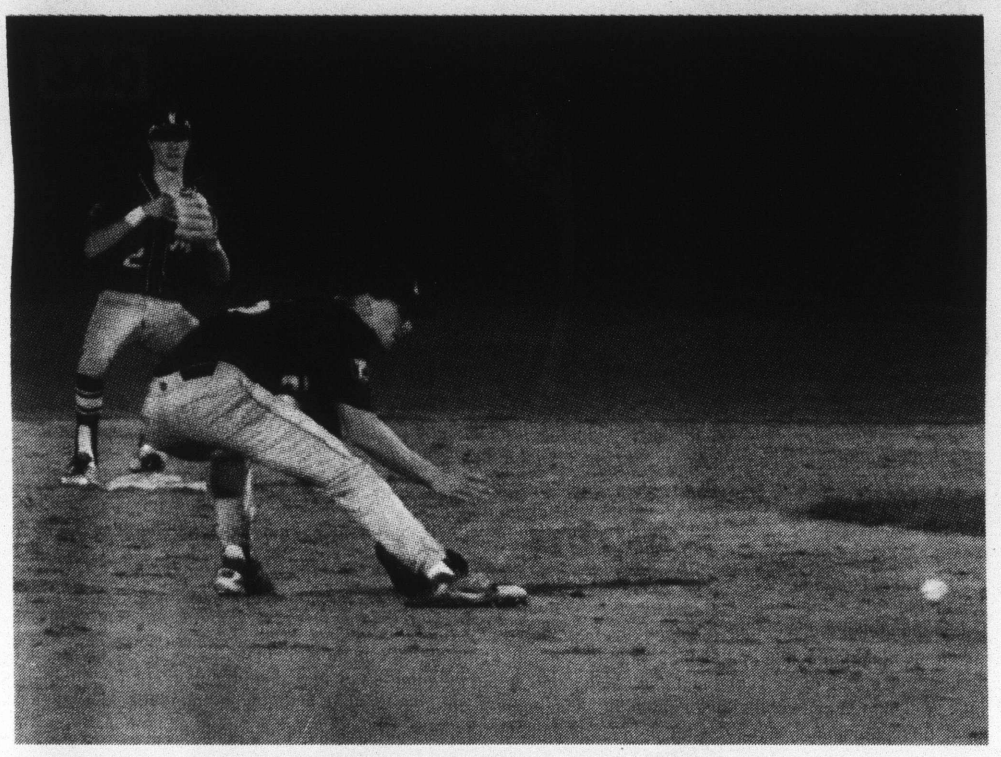

MORRISETTE PITCHER John MacDonald pitched five scoreless innings as Post 294 defeated Shrewsbury 7-1 in an opening round match-up of the American Legion State Tournament Saturday night at Adams Field. Morrisette is the tournament's host team. MacDonald struck out five while allowing one hit over five innings.

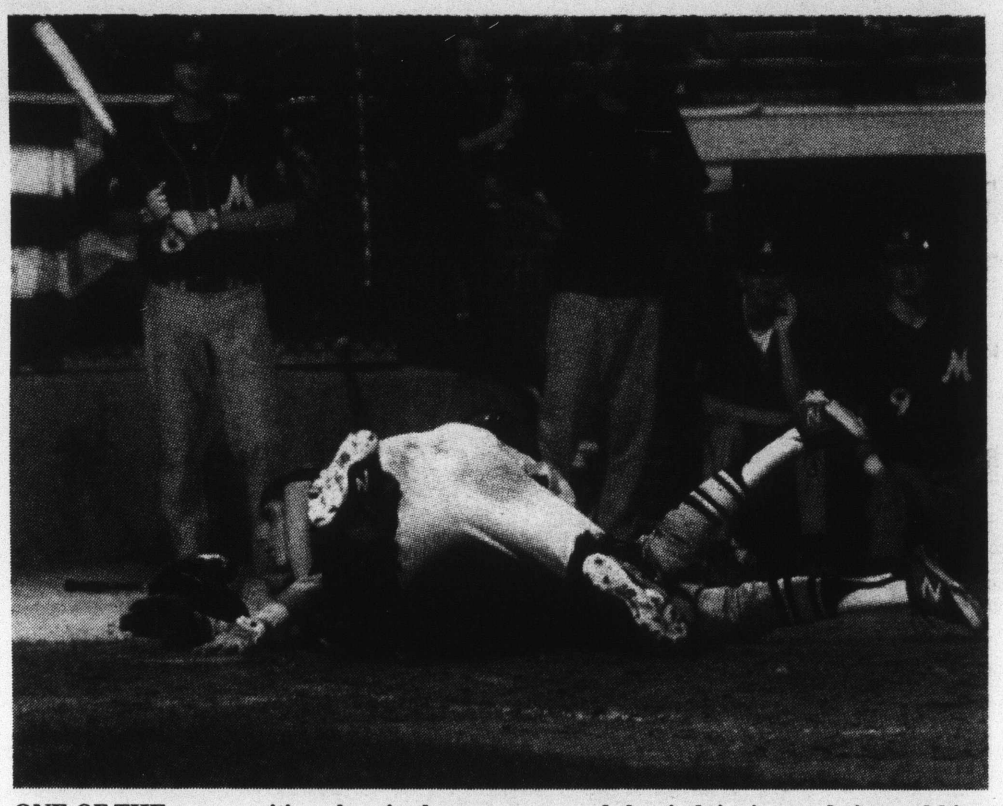

MORRISETTE POST 294 jumped out to a fast 1-0 lead in the first inning against Shrewsbury. Second baseman Matt Joyce hit a double on the first pitch of the game. Here Matt Tomlinson slides into third beating the throw for a triple and knocking in Joyce for an RBI and the first run of the game. Morrisette lost its second game in the state tournament to Methuen, 5-4, Sunday at Adams Field. but bounced back Monday with a win over Sandwich. Morrisette played Braintree in a semi-final matchup on Tuesday after The Sun went to press.

MORRISETTE SHORTSTOP Martin McCormick digs out a grounder in the bottom of the third inning resulting in a force out at second base. At the plate McCormick hit a triple knocking in a run along with a single and walk in the game as Post 294 defeated Shrewsbury, 7-1, in the first round of the state tournament.

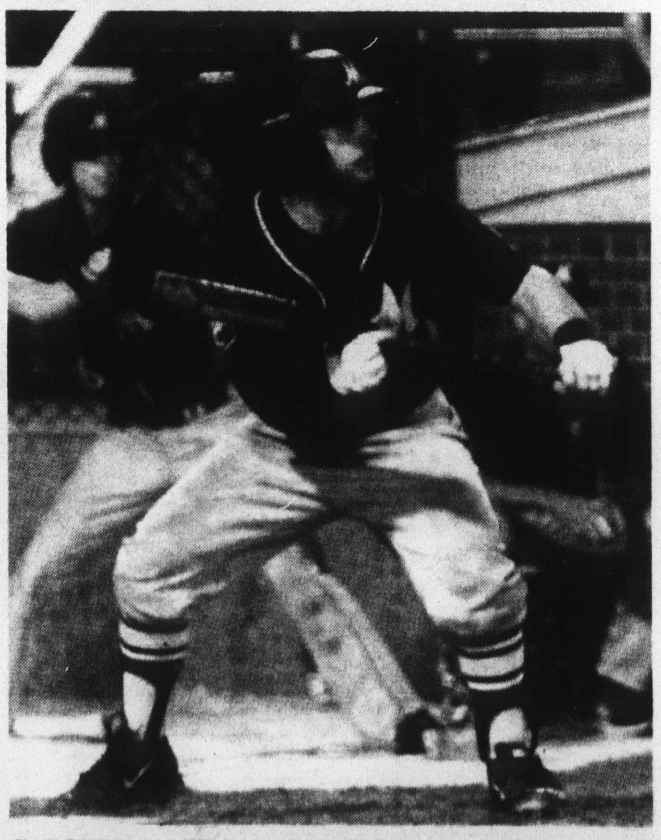

ONE OF THE more exciting plays in the game occurred the sixth inning as designated hitter John Joyce reached first on a base on balls. He moved to second base on a balk then stole third base and home. Here Joyce steals home plate on a close play.

MORRISETTE'S SOLID FIELDING and strong pitching held Shrewsbury to one run in a 7-1 victory. In the fifth inning second baseman Matt Joyce cleanly fielded two grounders and is shown here throwing out a runner.

SEVERAL SPECTACULAR catches by Morrisette outfielders in Post 294's 7-1 win over Shrewsbury last Saturday night at Adams Field. Here Curtis Frazier tracks down a fly ball in the first inning.

CATCHER JAMIE PAPASODERO fakes a bunt in the sixth inning against Shrewsbury. Morrisette scored two runs in the sixth inning to extend its lead to 6-0 and put the game out of reach. Papasodero, who reached first base on a walk, scored on a walk to J.P. Kelley. Other photo on Page 19.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, July 23, at approximately 12:10 a.m., Officers Daniel Church and Mark Connolly were dispatched to an Elm Street apartment for a disorder. While en route to the apartment, Communications notified responding units that a male left the apartment and then shattered a window by throwing a mug into it. The caller provided a description of the suspect who was heading towards the MBTA station.

Upon arrival, Officer Church interviewed the caller, who said a male he didn't know knocked on his door and asked if he could stay overnight in his apartment. The caller said he could come in for awhile but couldn't stay because he already had a friend staying overnight on his couch. The unknown male was there for only a short time, then grabbed a mug full of change, an alarm clock and a cell phone and ran out of the apartment.

The male then stopped abruptly and tossed the empty mug through the window. On the ground was the alarm clock.

Soon after giving out a description of the suspect, Officer Sean Crowley radioed that he had the suspect detained in the area of Cottage Avenue at Hancock Street. Officer Church joined Officer Crowley, who said he saw the male walking in the area and attempted to speak with him. The male then began to flee up Cottage Avenue for a short distance before running into a sign post, causing him to fall to the ground. Officer Crowley noted the male threw away a plastic bag just as he started running. Officer Sean Fitzgerald secured the plastic bag which contained heroin.

Officer Church approached the male who was sitting on the ground and informed him of his Miranda Rights which he stated he understood. In his possession were two cell phones and many coins. When asked about the cell phones, the male said one was his. The other cell phone came back listed to the man sleeping on the couch.

When asked what happened at the apartment, the male said he didn't know. When asked how he knew the men in the apartment, the male said he met them in Quincy Center and went to the apartment to, "You know, just to smoke." Officer Church also located a novelty 1 million dollar bill near the male.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the male was being treated for a head wound after hitting the sign, Officer Church returned to update the victims and to return the cell phone and determine the exact amount stolen. The victim said he didn't know exactly how much was taken but estimated between "Two and three dollars. Oh, and a fake one million dollar bill." The change recovered came out to $2.86 and was returned to the victim.

Once at the station, the transporting officers observed that the male had a large amount of white powder on his face and clothing. There was also a plastic bag containing white residue that had been ripped open at his feet. The male refused to state what the substance was so out of precaution, the officers put on protective Tyvex gowns and face masks as they removed and bagged all of the male's clothing.

Trauma 24, a biohazard cleaning company, was contacted to respond and decontaminate the transporting cruiser. Officers who had contact with the male filed exposure forms. A review of the male's criminal record showed that he received a disposition of guilty in Boston District Court for Distribution of Class A in January 2017 for which he is currently on probation.

The male, a 32-year-old homeless/Quincy resident, was charged with possession of Class A (heroin); subsequent offense, defacing property (window) and larceny under $1,200 - 2 counts (money and cell phone). The plastic bag of suspected heroin was packaged, logged, and submitted to the drug locker in the evidence room. Nice Work!

IMMEDIATE RESPONSE REQUESTED
Home Warranty Division

I, like many other residents, recently received a pink postcard, stating, "This letter is to inform you that the property's warranty, at (my address) secured by Quincy Mun Cu, may be expiring or may have already expired."

It goes on to say that without a warranty in place, "you are at risk of being financially liable for any and all repairs." Then there is a line claiming that "you still may have time left to activate a service contract on your home before it's too late."

A number is provided to call but with a waiver that states, "We reserve the right to revoke your eligibility for service coverage after 5 days."

Since I have not had a mortgage with Quincy Credit Union since the 1990s, I suspect that this company researched records from county Registry of Deeds in an attempt to validate their claim.

Here's the most important point: There is no such thing as a property warranty as part of a mortgage – and yes, you are liable for any and all repairs to your home because it is your home.

There are home warranty services that will repair or replace air conditioners, furnaces, etc. but it is always best to do your homework since many of the appliances are just cheaper to replace. As an example, there's only two items in a microwave; a control panel and magnetron tube. If either one needs replacing, it may be cheaper in the long run to buy a new one, according to an appliance repair shop.

Pastor Quincy Community UMC

REV. REBECCA E. BAUMANN

A basic foundation of the United Methodist Church is our itinerant system of sending Pastors out to new congregations. Pastors and churches are aligned through a process of prayer and discernment and a new appointment is made by our Bishop. All new pastors and their families begin their appointment on July 1st. Transition and change are hard, even when expected. There is a grieving process that happens. Pastors miss their former congregations and parishioners miss their former pastor.

I have often begun a new appointment with "Getting to Know You" sessions in which we gather in small groups and share a quiet afternoon or evening with one another. I have designed a series of questions, some funny and some that will provide personal information. Every time these sessions gather, I have heard a familiar comment, "I have sat beside you in the pew for all these years and I never knew that about you."

As pastors, we are invited into previously existing relationships of friends and families. Soon, the new pastor begins to realize there is a part of the life and fabric of the congregation of which he or she will never fully enter. The past history of the church and the community, the friendships, the neighbors, the raising of children and the passing away of beloved family members are stories acquired as you get to know the new congregation. In our system, there is a temporary relationship between pastor and parishioner, a window of opportunity in which we accompany one another through a short time period. In the United Methodist system, it is known and accepted that the pastor will eventually move on to another appointed church assignment. The once intimate details of the familiar faces and families will become lost to memory and new faces and new families will become known.

I think that in today's world it is hard to get to know one another. We casually wave to our neighbors as we hurry about completing the tasks of our days. We connect by social media and perhaps convince ourselves this is sufficient. I miss the days of long phone calls, not so much for the content of the conversation but for the recognition of a

Communion Sunday will be celebrated Aug. 5th at 10 a.m. worship in the air-conditioned sanctuary at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. Rev. Kimberly Murphy will preach, Christina Mendez will read the scripture and Angela Lett will be the soloist of the day.

The building is accessible to all via the Abbey Road side of the building with designated parking and an elevator. After worship fellowship hour takes place in the social hall. All are invited for light refreshments and conversation. While there sign the birthday, and "thinking of you" cards.

Summer "One Room" Sunday school is available during worship during the summer months. Bring children to the classroom adjacent to the kitchen (on the basement level) before worship.

Many new programs will be announced soon for the fall like including Sunday School, Youth Group, Adult Bible Study, Interfaith Series, Missions projects, Handbells, Choir, concerts and more. To stay updated of these events, check us out on Facebook or Twitter.

To be added to the church email list call 617-773-6424 or, email: office@quincypointcong.org with your information.

Lighthouse Fellowship Texas Team

Lighthouse Fellowship, 6 Newbury Ave., North Quincy is sending a team of 7 people to Pearland, Texas from Aug. 19 - 24. They will be working with Samaritan's Purse to restore or rebuild homes devastated by Hurricane Harvey last fall.

Harvey hit Rockport, Texas as a category 4 storm, causing great damage. As it moved inland the torrential rains flooded Houston and Pearland, ruining hundreds of thousands of homes. Samaritan's Purse volunteers have been assisting homeowners in these areas since the storm hit by mudding out homes and clearing debris. The Lighthouse team includes Pastor Mike Fehan, Gene Carter, Becky Carter, Joe Facada, Pam Glover, Arlene Winton and Jacquelyn Friberg. They will help in the second phase of the recovery effort which includes the rebuilding of homes for those populations unable to rebuild on their own.

In an effort to fund this trip Lighthouse Fellowship is accepting donations of used, clean, soft textiles i.e. clothing, linens, towels, and bedding, as well as shoes and other accessories. Items may be dropped at the church on Aug. 4 and 5 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Any day until Aug. 5 items may also be left at 16 Gladstone St., Squantum. All donations will be greatly appreciated.

Along with rebuilding efforts the team looks forward to interacting with the community there and bringing encouragement and hope.

OBITUARIES

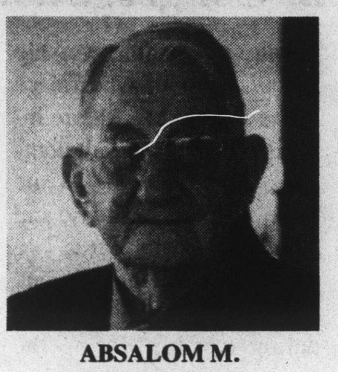

Absalom M. Cunningham, 98

Private funeral services were held for Absalom M. "Barney" Cunningham, 98, of Quincy. Mr. Cunningham died July 17.

Barney was a World War II veteran (1939-1945) and was proud of his service to his country. He served in the Army Air Corps as a first lieutenant. Later Barney worked at Polaroid up to his retirement.

Barney enjoyed traveling with his wife and learning about all the different cultures he visited. His main passion was his family, Barney never missed a family event and cherished the time spent with them. He had a wonderful sense of humor and all enjoyed his antics. He had a strong faith in God and an appreciation for the bible and bible education work. He will be sadly missed.

Preceded in death by his beloved wife of 71 years, Mildred (Watson). Loving father of Kenneth Cunningham and his wife Janice of Roslindale, William Cunningham and his wife Kathleen of Randolph, Nancy Callanan and her husband Thomas of Quincy, Michael Cunningham and his wife Phuong of Norwood and Stephen Cunningham and his wife Maryellen of Marshfield. Devoted grandfather of Joseph Callanan, Marie Reen, Christina Langan, Michael, K.C., Katie, William, Brendan and Christopher Cunningham, Beth Murray and Sean and Paul Monahan, along with 23 great grandchildren and 1 great, great grandson. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

ABSALOM M. CUNNINGHAM

Memorial donations may be made to Old Colony Hospice, 321 Manley St., West Bridgewater, MA 02379.

Camillo Del Vecchio, 102

A funeral Mass for Camillo Del Vecchio, age 102, a longtime resident of Quincy, was celebrated July 28 at Saint Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Del Vecchio died unexpectedly July 24 at the John Scott House Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Braintree, in the comfort of his loving family.

Camillo was born and raised in Anversa degli Abruzzi, Italy to the late Francesco and Angolina (DiGiusto) Del Vecchio. He and his family immigrated to Venezuela in 1950 and then to the United States in 1960. He had lived in Quincy for over 56 years.

He was employed in the defense manufacturing industry for many years.

Camillo was an avid gardener and enjoyed maintaining and sharing his vegetable garden until 2015 at the age of ninety-nine. He was also skilled at carpentry and woodworking and was well-known for his craftsmanship. As a young man, he was a talented sculptor.

CAMILLO DEL VECCHIO

He was known as a soccer fanatic, first as a former player, and then as a fan, following his favorite team, Roma.

A quiet, hard-working man, Camillo was dedicated to his family, especially to his grandchildren and great granddaughter, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved husband for seventy-three years of the late Trieste (Ricci) Del Vecchio.

Devoted father of Angelina DiCesare and her husband Francesco, Rita Del Vecchio and her husband Donato, all of Braintree.

Loving Nonno of Claudia Hartley and her husband Jason, Sandra DiCesare, Marco Del Vecchio and his wife Lori, all of Braintree, and Roberto Del Vecchio and his fiancée Cindy Morrical of Dorchester.

Cherished great grandfather of Adree Del Vecchio.

Camillo was the last of four siblings and is survived by many nieces and nephews in Italy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to a charity of choice.

Robert M. Buccheri

A funeral Mass for Robert M. "Uncle Bobby" Buccheri, of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester, was celebrated July 27 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

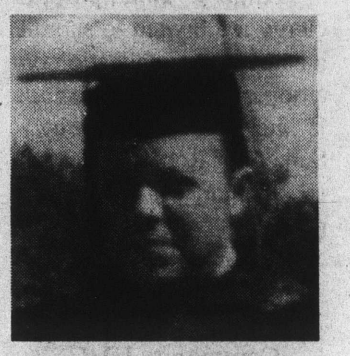

Mr. Buccheri died July 23.

Robert enjoyed life, time with family, and cooking for holiday gatherings. He took care of his parents into their senior years and loved his family. He was a 3rd degree member of the Knights of Columbus in both Dorchester and Quincy.

Bobby will be remembered as a pleasant and jovial person who loved to laugh. He worked for the MA State Police Criminal History Division for over 31 years. He also worked alongside his brothers in their family business for 20 years.

Beloved son of the late Joseph and Mary (Miraglia) Buccheri.

Loving brother of Salvatore Buccheri and his wife Rita of Methuen, Richard Buccheri and his wife Carol of Duxbury, John Buccheri and his wife Cheryl of Brockton, and the late Anthony Buccheri and his wife Alfreda, and George Buccheri.

ROBERT M. BUCCHERI

Also survived by his sister in law Eileen Buccheri and many nieces, nephews, and cousins.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105.

Gloria F. Whalen, 86

A Mass of Christian Burial for Gloria F. (Melvin) Whalen, 86, of Easton, formerly of Quincy and Dorchester, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester.

Mrs. Whalen died July 26.

Beloved wife of the late Joseph Whalen and the mother of the late Mary A. Whalen, sister of the late Regina Donovan, David Melvin, Mary Hilliard, John Melvin, James Melvin and Paul Melvin. Survived by her brother, Thomas Melvin, of Stoughton and many loving nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Mrs. Whalen was born in and raised in Dorchester and lived most of her life in the city she loved.

She was a pioneer in the insurance industry at a time when it was dominated by men. She worked for many years at Cameron & Colby and was well known and respected as a sharp businesswoman. Through her years of working, she travelled extensively to conventions and seminars and loved every minute of it.

The love of her life was her daughter, Mary. Mrs. Whalen dedicated herself to her daughter, helping her with all the health struggles her daughter endured. It was her main purpose in life. Mrs. Whalen also cared for her husband, Joseph, for many years with his health issues. She was such a strong person for all the caring she gave during her life.

Mrs. Whalen was the matriarch of her large family of brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews who looked to her for guidance in life. She will be greatly missed.

Interment private.

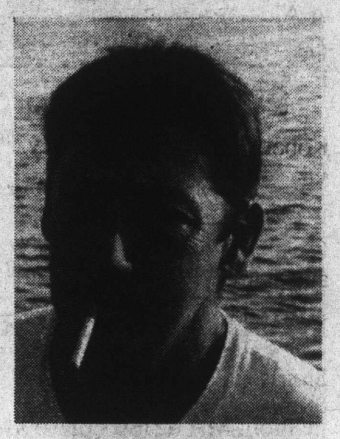

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan Funeral Home, Dorchester Lower Mills.

Mark F. Glynn

Mark F. Glynn of Abington passed away July 21.

Mark was the cherished husband of Diane Meyer, the loving father to his three children: Sean L Glynn and Joseph Glynn of Quincy, and Sarah Sarafian and her husband Damien of Weymouth; the beloved grandfather of Jacob Glynn of Dorchester; the dear brother of Kate Glynn of Weymouth, Brian Glynn of Quincy, Robert Glynn and his wife Cheryl of Quincy, Sean Glynn of Quincy, Lorraine King of Weymouth, the late Theresa Glynn, and the late Lori Glynn. Predeceased by his father Edward Glynn of Quincy and his mother Mary O'Toole Glynn of Quincy. He is also survived by many nieces, nephews and cousins.

Mark was an avid gardener, an amazing cook, and an outstanding storyteller with a great sense of humor. Mark will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

MARK F. GLYNN

Memorial visiting hours were held July 26 in the Hamel Lydon Chapel, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial was private.

A special thank you to the nurses, doctors, and staff of South Shore Hospital on Emerson 6 who took such wonderful care of Mark in his final days.

Memorial donations may be made to South Shore Health System Foundation, 55 Fogg Road, South Weymouth, MA 02190 or at-southshorehealth.org/donate now.

Marion A. Fantucchio, 85

A funeral Mass for Marion A. Fantucchio, age 85, a lifelong resident of Quincy, will be celebrated at noon Friday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Ms. Fantucchio died July 27 after a brief illness.

She had a long and distinguished career with the city of Quincy. She joined the staff of the assessor's office following her graduation from Quincy High School and advanced to the positions of chief assessor, and chairperson of the Board of Assessors, which she held from 1991 until her retirement in 2011.

Following her retirement, Ms. Fantucchio continued her association with the assessor's office until her death. Ms. Fantucchio was also very active in related professional organizations. She was a member of the Massachusetts Association of Assessing Officers, serving as secretary for several years. In addition, she participated in the Northeastern Regional Association of Assessing Officers. She was also generous with her time, participating in charitable events.

Ms. Fantucchio is survived by her devoted brother Alphonse Fantucchio and his wife Dorothy, sister-in-law Josephine Fantucchio, and long-time partner Robert Petze, all of Quincy. She was the beloved aunt to nieces Mildred Savage of Quincy, Marlene Steger and her partner Glenn Fritz of Lynnfield, Mary Robledo and her husband Angel of Sunrise, Florida, Joyce Flavin and her husband James of Canton, Joan Walsh and her husband Robert of Marshfield, and Alison Buckley and her husband Franck of Bridgewater.

Mary Catherine Iannoni

Funeral arrangements for Mary Catherine Iannoni have been made according to her wishes.

Ms. Iannoni died July 24.

She was the daughter of the late Domenic and Mary (Mariani) Iannoni. Ms. Iannoni was a graduate of St. Patrick's Classical High School, Bridgewater State University and the University of Denver earning Bachelor and Masters degrees. Professionally, she was an English teacher for four years and a head counselor for 46 years in the city of Quincy.

She was a member of state and national associations focused upon recognition of students' academic achievement within individual potential and talent. In particular, the Brockton Italian Scholarship Club, Quincy Retired Teachers Association, Alpha Delta Kappa Sorority and Massachusetts and National Counselors Associations were instrumental in assisting hundreds of young people with tuitions.

Ms. Iannoni thoroughly enjoyed her head counselorship, the hundreds of students she met and mentored along with their parents, and grandparents, travels in Europe, the United States and in particular Monhegan Island in Maine.

She was blessed with

MARY CATHERINE IANNONI

Joseph, her nephew, Maureen, his first wife who died in 2006 after a courageous battle with cancer, their children Jason, Krista, Michael and Allison, and Susan whom he married in 2012. Additionally, Joseph and Jean Sirtoli, first cousins and their family, her very special neighbor Shelly Ross, and friends as they all shared her love with gatherings, music, theatre, cooking and a deep respect for their heritage and one another.

A celebration of Ms. Iannoni's life will be held Sunday, Sept. 9, at 4 p.m. in the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. RSVP by Aug. 26 to MCIRSVP@gmail.com.

A funeral Mass for Lionel A. Lumaghini, age 65, recently of Norwell, formerly a lifelong Quincy resident, was celebrated July 25 in Saint Mary of the Sacred Heart Church, 392 Hanover St, Hanover.

Mr. Lumaghini died peacefully July 21 at home, surrounded by his loving family, after a relentless and courageous battle with a rare bile duct cancer, cholangiocarcinoma.

Lionel was born in Paris, France to the late Rene and Odette S. (Degen) Lumaghini. He immigrated to the United States as a child and was raised in Quincy. He graduated from Quincy High School, Class of 1970, and attended Curry College.

Lionel was the owner and operator of JCM Computers of Abington for 27 years. Previously, he had worked 14 years for the Xerox Corporation after beginning his career in auto body restoration.

He loved all types of technology and automation, including smart home features. He was extremely "hands on" and could fix anything mechanical.

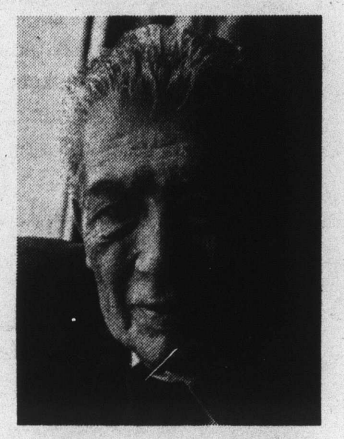

Lionel proudly served in the Army National Guard of Massachusetts for six years, during which time he attended the U.S. Army School of Engineering.

A longtime motorcycle enthusiast, he enjoyed riding his Harley Davidson. He was an avid Boston sports fan and New England Patriots season ticket holder for many years and a member of the South Quincy Bocce Club.

Most of all, Lionel's passion was his family and especially his grandchildren, actively supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved husband for 41 years and best friend of his high school sweetheart, Marilyn M. (Bertoni) Lumaghini.

Devoted father of Jason

A funeral Mass for Angelo Anthony Marino, 91, of Quincy was celebrated Wednesday in St. Theresa's Church, West Roxbury.

Mr. Marino died of complications from pneumonia on July 27 at St Elizabeth's hospital in Brighton.

He grew up in Wakefield and met his wife Irene Osterbrink in Osnabruck, Germany, where he was stationed as a member of the U.S. Air Force. The two were married in the U.S. and made their home in South Boston. Angelo worked at the Boston Gear Works in Quincy until his early retirement at the age of 55.

After the death of his wife Irene from cancer in 1976 he moved to Quincy. Mr. Marino became a Eucharistic minister bringing communion to shut-ins and even at times praying the rosary over the phone with those who just needed a prayer companion. He loved spending time with his friends and enjoying his favorite pastimes- playing pool and bowling.

In 2017, Mr. Marino moved to the Hancock Park Nursing Home. He was dearly loved by all who knew him. He is survived by his daughter Mary Ann Marino of Norwood and his son Peter Marino of Harwich.

Interment at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home.

Ofo Offering Riders Refunds

The bike-sharing company ofo, which pulled out of Quincy and other markets last week without warning, says it intends to refund riders.

In a letter to customers, the Beijing-based company said it would monthly payments for July and any unspent balances in existing accounts. The refunds could take up to 30 days to complete, ofo said.

The bike-sharing company began its program in Quincy earlier this year, deploying 200 yellow "dockless" bikes citywide. Late last month, however, the company said it would be pulling out of North American markets for financial reasons.

Quincy officials have since announced a new partnership with a competitive company, Lime Bike, which is expected to bring a fleet of green and yellow bicycles to the city early this month.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have a Worship Service Sunday, Aug. 5 at 9:30 a.m. This is also Communion Sunday.

OBITUARY

Arthur H. 'Artie' Morrissey, 88

A Mass of Christian Burial for Arthur H. Morrissey, age 88, of Quincy, will be celebrated Friday at 9 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Mr. Morrissey died peacefully on July 30 after living life to the fullest.

ARTHUR H. MORRISSEY

"Artie" was born at the onset of the Great Depression and came of age during the second World War – eventful periods that would shape the rest of his life. He was the youngest of four children born to Patrick and Alice (Collins) Morrissey. His father was an Irish immigrant who obtained his U.S. citizenship by joining the U.S. Army in 1916. His parents instilled in him and siblings Richard, Paul, and Helen Tobin, the importance of always being strongly engaged in family, community and civic work.

Arthur attended the Quincy Public Schools, graduating as the Treasurer of the Class of 1947. After graduation, he, like his father, brothers and Helen's husband, joined the Armed Forces of the United States. After his service in the Army, Artie married Marion (Myers) Morrissey, his high school sweetheart. He held a variety of jobs until an employer recommended him to a Wollaston plumbing and heating company as an apprentice pipefitter. He loved the trade and eventually became the President of the South Shore Combined Pipefitters, Gasfitters and Plumbers Local. In the early 1960s, as one of the youngest building trade union presidents in the state, he merged the South Shore Local into what are now the Boston Pipefitters Local 537 and Boston Plumbers Local 12.

His parents were great supporters of education, particularly the Quincy Public Schools, and Artie took advantage of the GI Bill to earn an engineering degree from Northeastern University – the first in the family to earn a college diploma. He rose through the piping trades over many years, eventually running major heating projects in Boston and in Quincy including the 1000 Southern Artery Senior Housing facility, the Broadmeadows and Atlantic Middle Schools and the Quincy Vocational School. While working on the Vocational School in 1967, he decided that he wanted to teach young people about the piping trades. He joined the QPS staff the day the vocational school opened and taught there for almost thirty years, recognizing that combining hands-on and book learning was the path to success for many students.

He taught tolerance, self-respect, civic engagement, and school spirit to his students while teaching pipefitting – including stoking the Quincy High-North Quincy High rivalry: "We always support Quincy High – except when they play North." He took special pride in his many students who went on to serve in the U.S. Armed Services or excel in business and the piping trades.

Artie and his wife Marion raised their four children Michael, Patrick, Kathleen (Reardon) and Stephen in Quincy, and were always involved in the Sacred Heart Church, local sports, education, and community groups. He loved politics, often engaging his children in helping his childhood friend, and later Quincy Mayor, Walter Hannon on campaigns for local and state office. He loved the water and joined the Squantum Yacht Club in the 1940s, becoming Commodore in 1970. He taught his children to sail and encouraged them to compete in sail boat racing.

Arthur's wife Marion died in 1979 and was later remarried to Dorothy Sweetser Morrissey for many years. He leaves his children, District Attorney Michael Morrissey and his wife Joanne, Patrick Morrissey and his wife Deborah, Kathleen Morrissey Reardon (Paul), and Stephen Morrissey and his wife Joanne. He is survived by his older brother Richard and his wife Margie, of Quincy, and his sister-in-law Shirley, of Holbrook. He is survived by 9 grandchildren, 7 step-grandchildren, 3 great-grandchildren, and the children and members of the Sweetser and Anderson families. He pre-deceased by his brother Paul of Holbrook and his sister Helen Tobin and her husband Richard.

Artie often said he loved his life and "wouldn't change a thing." His children invite friends and family to join them at a celebration of his life, "A Party-for-Artie," on Thursday, Aug. 2, from 5 to 9 p.m. at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Elks Lodge, 254 Quarry St.

Burial will be private.

Memorial donations can be made to the Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Fund, C/O Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

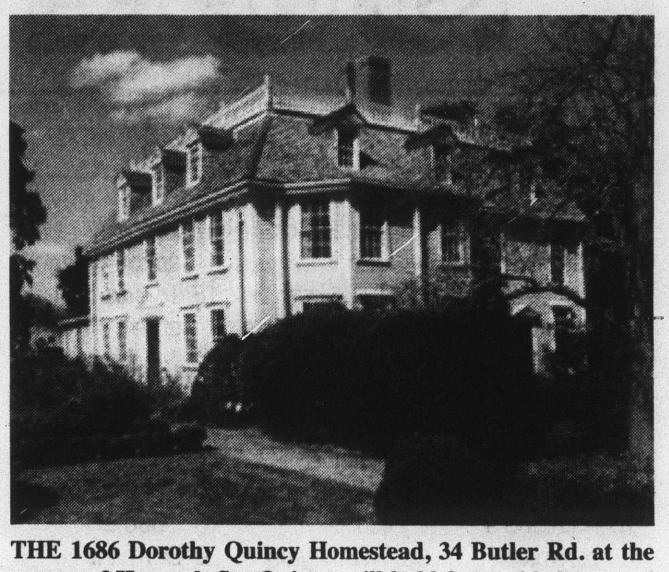

1686 Quincy Homestead Open For Tours Saturday

The 1686 Dorothy Quincy Homestead, 34 Butler Rd. at the corner of Hancock St., Quincy, will hold free guided tours of the historic house, gardens, and architecture on Saturday, Aug. 4, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The 45-minute tours start on the half hour, with the last tour beginning at 2:30 p.m.

The yellow Georgian mansion tells the story of Edmund Quincy I, II, III and IV and of the women of the home, Dorothy Flint Quincy, Dorothy Quincy Jackson, and Dorothy Quincy Hancock. The tales of these families and their connections with colonial activity pre-Revolutionary War are captivating.

It all started in 1635 when Puritan Edmund Quincy I was accorded a grant of several hundred acres on the south side of Furnace Brook and stretching through Mount Wollaston. His house was taken down in 1893 to make way for the construction of Central Middle School. However on the same property, his son, Edmund Quincy II built another home in 1686. This was expanded with the lovely currently standing Georgian style addition in 1706 by Edmund Quincy III and later by Edmund Quincy IV. It is on these grounds that local young men and women, such as Sam and John Adams, John Hancock, Benjamin Franklin, and Abigail Smith-Adams would visit the Quincy family and discuss politics.

There is no charge for admission or fee for the public historic tours, but as a not-for-profit, 501(c)3 organization, donations are gratefully received. Remaining public tours in the 2018 season occur on: Saturday, Aug. 18, special event on site by Guild of Historic Interpreters South; Saturday, Sept 1, Saturday, Sept. 15 and Saturday, Sept. 29 (closing day.)

The Quincy Homestead was purchased in 1904 and historically restored by the National Society of Colonial Dames in The Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It is currently owned and operated in public/private partnership with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request private tours by calling 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org. For more information visit www.nscdama.org or follow the site on Facebook under Quincy Homestead 1686.

Quilt Exhibit At Crane Library

An award-winning artist and talented quilter, local interior decorator Barbara Graceffa is marking the 10th anniversary of her business, Secretary of the Interior, with a one-woman quilt show at the Thomas Crane Library in Quincy during the month of August.

As part of the library's monthly featured artists series, the August exhibit will showcase a sample of Graceffa's traditional and contemporary quilts. Her two favorites include the stained-glass style quilt called Cathedral Forest which uses a black background of leftover fabric from a nun's habit as well as Love Those Lilies, a fractured style, appliqué wall hanging depicting Barbara's favorite flowers under a vibrant orange-yellow batik sun.

Since sewing her first scrap quilt in 1980, Graceffa has fashioned dozens of bed quilts and wall hangings for her own home and for family, friends, and clients, including a teal and white Carpenter's Wheel quilt which earned a Viewer's Choice blue ribbon at the Marshfield Fair. Barbara has also made several Boston Marathon themed quilts, commissioned by the Boston Athletic Association.

"I'm so excited to showcase my quilts in my first ever quilt show," Graceffa said. "I hope the local community will enjoy viewing them as much as I have enjoyed designing and sewing them."

The community is invited to a Meet the Artist reception on Saturday, Aug. 4 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Center library, 40 Washington St., in Quincy.

In addition to operating her own business, Graceffa writes a question and answer decorating column for the Quincy Sun newspaper. She also teaches evening decorating classes at Braintree Community Continuing Education and offers workshops on decorating, downsizing, and decluttering for local groups.

Everyone Has A Chicken Story

familiar voice and a special laugh. Skype and FaceTime are fascinating alternatives of communication.

Within the church environment the gift of small group gatherings provides an opportunity to share meals and stories, share hopes and dreams as well as vision together the new world that is possible with the recognition of a shared spiritual journey. We discover there is much to learn about one another and that when time is given to such activities, great insights are achieved, new friendships fostered and connections are made.

One thing that has become evident from our small gatherings of "Getting to Know You" events is that at least one person in each group has a chicken story. Really! It's true. What's your chicken story? Ask the question, you will be surprised at the way in which we are connected through the wondrous nature of chickens.

On a mission trip to Nicaragua, I received the gift of a chicken on our last day. She came with her own leash and the church that gave her to me imagined their gift traveling to the United States. I did not have the heart to tell them that I would not be able to bring the chicken home with me. Our driver and guide became the recipient of my cherished gift.

In a former church in Connecticut, a family raised chickens. I had the honor of having had a chicken named for me. At the time I had red hair and this chicken and her sisters had tufts of red feathers on their heads. The chicken was named: Rusty Becky.

Several years ago, my daughter-in-law spent two weeks on a teaching trip to Kenya. Her first posting to Facebook was, "I just won a chicken at an auction."

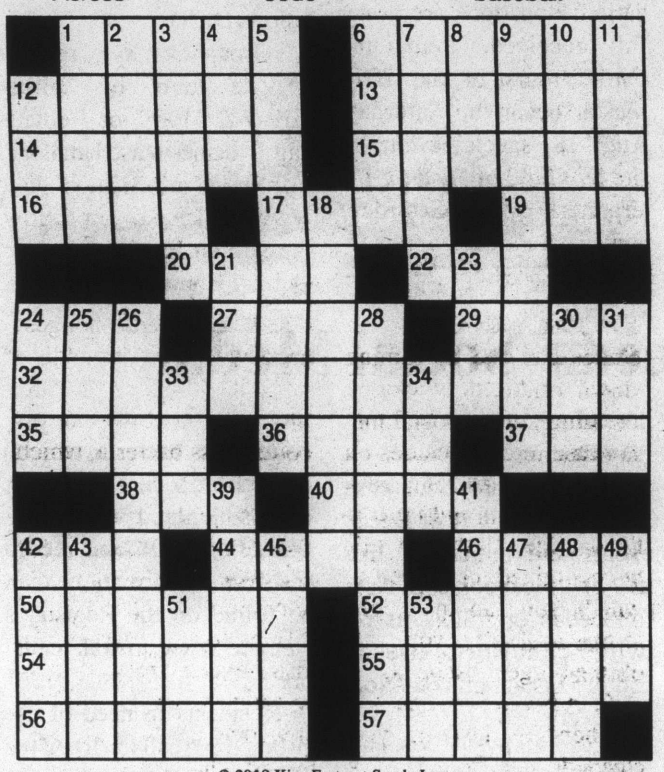

Next time you meet someone you would like to know a wee bit better, ask them what their chicken story is...God has an amazing way of connecting us with one another. Blessings.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There might still be some uncertainty about the decision you made. But a quick check of the facts should reassure you that you're doing the right thing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The tidy Taurean needs to be a little more flexible about accepting some changes to those carefully made plans. You might be pleasantly surprised by what follows.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Consider stepping away from your concentrated focus on your new project for a bit so you can get some perspective on what you've done and where you plan to take it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The understandably angry Crab might not want to accept the reason why someone might have tried to hurt you. But at least you'll have an insight into why it happened.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) There might be some facts you still need to know before leaping onto center stage. Best to move carefully at this time so that you can observe what's happening around you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to expand your outlook by getting out and around, whether you do some long-range traveling or just explore the great things to see closer to home.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your wise counsel continues to be needed as that family situation works itself out. Meanwhile, the decisions you made on your job begin to pay off quite nicely.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your job situation brightens thanks to all your hard work. Now, spend some time repairing a personal relationship you might have neglected for too long.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects favor action in the workplace. Line up your facts and show your superiors why you're the one they're looking for.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your hard work pays off on the job. Personal relationships also can benefit from more of your time and attention. Spend the weekend with loved ones.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Early feedback on your project might be disappointing. But don't be discouraged. Use it to make needed adjustments, then submit it to your superiors again.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Flattery could lure the otherwise sensible Fish into making an unwise decision. Be careful. All that praise might be an attempt to reel you in before you can learn the facts.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful sense of who you are. You are a shining example to others, helping them believe in themselves and what they can do.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Harrison Ford, who first played Indiana Jones in "The Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981) at age 39, will play him for the fifth time at age 81, in "Indiana Jones 5," a continuation of "The Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" (minus Shia LaBeouf). But first he'll be heard in "The Secret Life of Pets 2" before reuniting with George Lucas (producing) and Steven Spielberg (directing) for "Indiana Jones 5."

Spielberg recently has produced "First Man," with Ryan Gosling as Neil Armstrong (the first man to walk on the moon), coming Oct. 12, and "Bumble Bee," with Hailee Steinfeld and John Cena, out Dec. 21. When Disney put off "Jones 5," for two years, Spielberg became free to do his reboot of the second highest-grossing film of 1966, "West Side Story," which holds the record for the most Oscars awarded a musical (10 out of 11 nominations), and "The Turning," a modern supernatural horror adaption of Henry James' "The Turning of the Screw." It will star Mackenzie Davis ("The Martian" and "Blade Runner 2049") and Finn Wolfhard ("It" and the Netflix series "Stranger Things").

It could be a race for time for two "Joker" films going into production, one with Oscar-winner Jared Leto, who played him in "Suicide Squad," and the other with Oscar-nominee Joaquin Phoenix.

Jason Momoa, who stars as "Aquaman" (opening Dec. 21), will play a fearless warrior, leader and guardian in Apple's original drama series "The Lone Night." Momoa starred in the original HBO series "Game of Thrones" and will topline the prequel, which begins shooting in Belfast, Ireland, in October.

Jerry O'Connell did so well guest-hosting "The Wendy Williams Show" for a week when she was ill that he'll host a new Bravo late night talk show, produced by Andy Cohen. It will feature a panel of male celebrities, comics and taste makers, discussing the buzziest Bravo moments and a variety of topics steeped in pop culture.

Also going the talk-show route is RuPaul, who has just completed a pilot for a talk show. RuPaul found success with a reality show, "Ru Paul's Drag Race," and hopefully will again with the upcoming Netflix comedy series "AJ and the Queen."

Claims of sexual misconduct may have slowed Oscar-nominee James Franco, but it didn't stop him from completing the sci-fi action Western "Future World," released in May; "The Long Home," with Josh Hutcherson; the animated film "Arctic Justice: Thunder Squad," with Jeremy Renner; and the sci-fi film "Kin," with Dennis Quaid, opening Aug. 31. Franco also is returning in his dual role for the second season of "The Deuce." Looks like he can survive anything ... even double trouble!

GO FIGURE!

by Linda Thistle

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Aluminum Armchair --- Sometimes a designer becomes very popular with a new design, sells his products, becomes wealthy, and then his designs become commonplace and he eventually goes bankrupt. That is the sad story of Warren McArthur, a talented designer of the 1930s who was among the first to make aluminum furniture. McArthur (1885-1961) was born in Chicago and grew up in a house designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. He went to Cornell to study mechanical engineering, and by 1914, he had filed for 10 patents for lamp designs. He moved to Phoenix and, with his brother, owned car dealerships and a radio station, and built the Arizona Biltmore. He also patented a useful adapter for a car radiator. All were successful. In 1929, he moved to Los Angeles and started a metal furniture business. He improved the manufacturing process with his inventions, including an aluminum that didn't tarnish and a way to permanently color the metal. The brightly colored metal furniture was popular in Hollywood, and was featured in movie theaters and stars' homes.

During the Depression in the 1930s, McArthur moved to New York City and then to Connecticut two years later. His company made airplane seats during World War II, but went bankrupt in 1948. McArthur died in 1961.

Q: What is the value of a Fowler's Cherry Smash syrup dispenser? It was used at a soda fountain counter. It's about 17 inches tall. There's a pump at the top, and it reads "Always drink Fowler's Cherry Smash -- our nation's beverage" on the front and back. There is a 5 cent symbol on both sides and three cherries with stems. Underneath the base it reads "John E. Fowler, Richmond Va., to be used by Cherry Smash only."

A: At one time, Cherry Smash was the second most popular soft drink in the United States. The name "Cherry Smash" was registered by John E. Fowler in 1909. The company started out in Richmond but moved to Rosslyn, Virginia, in 1920. After Prohibition ended in 1933, Fowler started the Dixie Brewing Corp., but no beer was ever brewed there. Cherry Smash was produced in Rosslyn until 1935. Your dispenser was made before that. Value about $2,000 to $3,000.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was poet, philosopher and satirist Horace, who lived in the first century B.C., who made the following sage observation: "He who postpones the hour of living is like the rustic who waits for the river to run out before he crosses."

* Legislators in Vermont once found it necessary to outlaw whistling while underwater.

* If someone were to ask you to name the sunniest spot on Earth, you might be tempted to answer "the Sahara Desert" or some other such exotic place. You would be wrong, though; that distinction belongs to a town right here in America. Out of the possible 4,456 daylight hours each year, the sun shines for an average of 4,050 in Yuma, Arizona. That means that there's cloud cover or rain for only about 10 percent of the time there.

* You might be surprised to learn that, according to those who study such things, Alaskans eat twice as much ice cream per capita than the rest of the nation.

* Those who have the time to study such things claim that the most difficult small object to flush down a toilet is a ping-pong ball.

* In 2010 a new species of slug was discovered in the mountains of Borneo. It is distinguished from other species of slug by its novel method of mating: It shoots its mate with a so-called love dart made of calcium carbonate and containing hormones. The researchers nicknamed the gastropods "ninja slugs."

* Other than the fact that they're all performers, what do Darryl Hannah, Telly Savalas, James Doohan and Jerry Garcia have in common? They are (or were) missing one finger.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "Cleaning ceiling fans can be a pain, as dust bunnies that pile up on the blades can end up raining down on furniture below, creating a mess. Use a pillowcase to clean blades on your ceiling fan. Slip over the blades and pull dust to the outside. All the dirt will be contained in the case, which you can toss right in the wash after you pick off the bigger dust balls." -- E.K. in North Carolina

* When's the last time you cleaned your freezer's automatic ice bucket? Before a trip to the beach, lake or park is the perfect time. Go ahead and empty all the ice from the bucket into your cooler, then wash with a mild soap and rinse thoroughly. Allow to air dry before reinserting the bucket in the freezer and restoring ice service.

* Use a mail sorter at the kitchen sink to store sponges upright and separated. They usually have enough slots to fit several sponges, each with air surrounding it so that it will dry quickly and evenly. Dry sponges collect less bacteria, which can end up making your sponge smell bad! If the mail sorter is metal, give it a coat of clear spray sealant to prevent rusting.

* Back to school hack: Invite several friends from previous years to meet up at a local park in the days before school starts. If new kids have moved into your neighborhood, be sure to invite their family too. Knowing someone can take the stress off of first-day jitters!

Nearly 600 Residential Units Planned For QMC Site

shop currently on location would be replaced with a retail shop that would serve both the development's residents and surrounding neighborhood.

Engineer Rick Alfonso of Tetra Tech explained that the below grade parking is unique for this type of development.

"The idea is to hide the cars and let's look at the landscape and create something that really fits in the neighborhood," he said.

Alfonso also said the site's impervious surface – roofs and pavement - would be reduced, thus reducing storm water runoff into Glendale Park. A state-of-the-art drainage system would be implemented to collect sediments before storm water infiltrates into the ground.

When asked if any affordable units would be included in the project, Ward said that has not yet been decided.

FoxRock purchased the Quincy Medical Center site for $12 million from Steward Health Care in December, 2016, two years after the hospital closed. The developer has a lease through 2021 with Steward Satellite Emergency to continue providing emergency services at the site.

Ward said that FoxRock is in talks with the city to develop an urgent care or similar type of facility in Quincy Center, likely at the former Ross Parking Garage site.

The developer has not set any timeline on the project. Ward said once renderings are completed and plans are reviewed, the proposal would be presented to the planning board, likely in the fall.

Hughes told the residents they would have an opportunity during the planning board hearings to ask questions and offer comments.

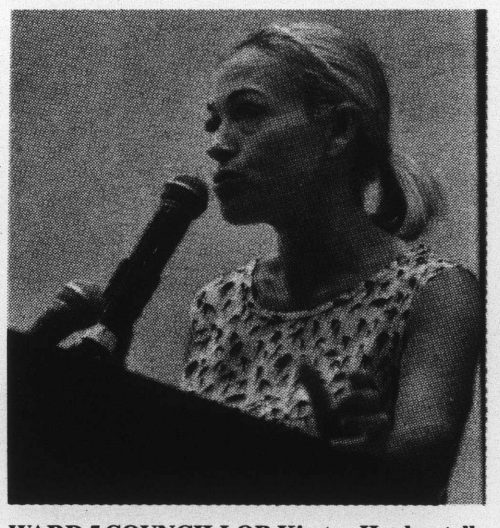

Ward assured the residents FoxRock is committed to the project.

"What we presented tonight is what we what have every intention of moving forward with," he said. "Could our plans change? Yes, they could, but we are not here to propose something that would change. We want the project to be something we would be proud of and Quincy residents would be proud of for generations."

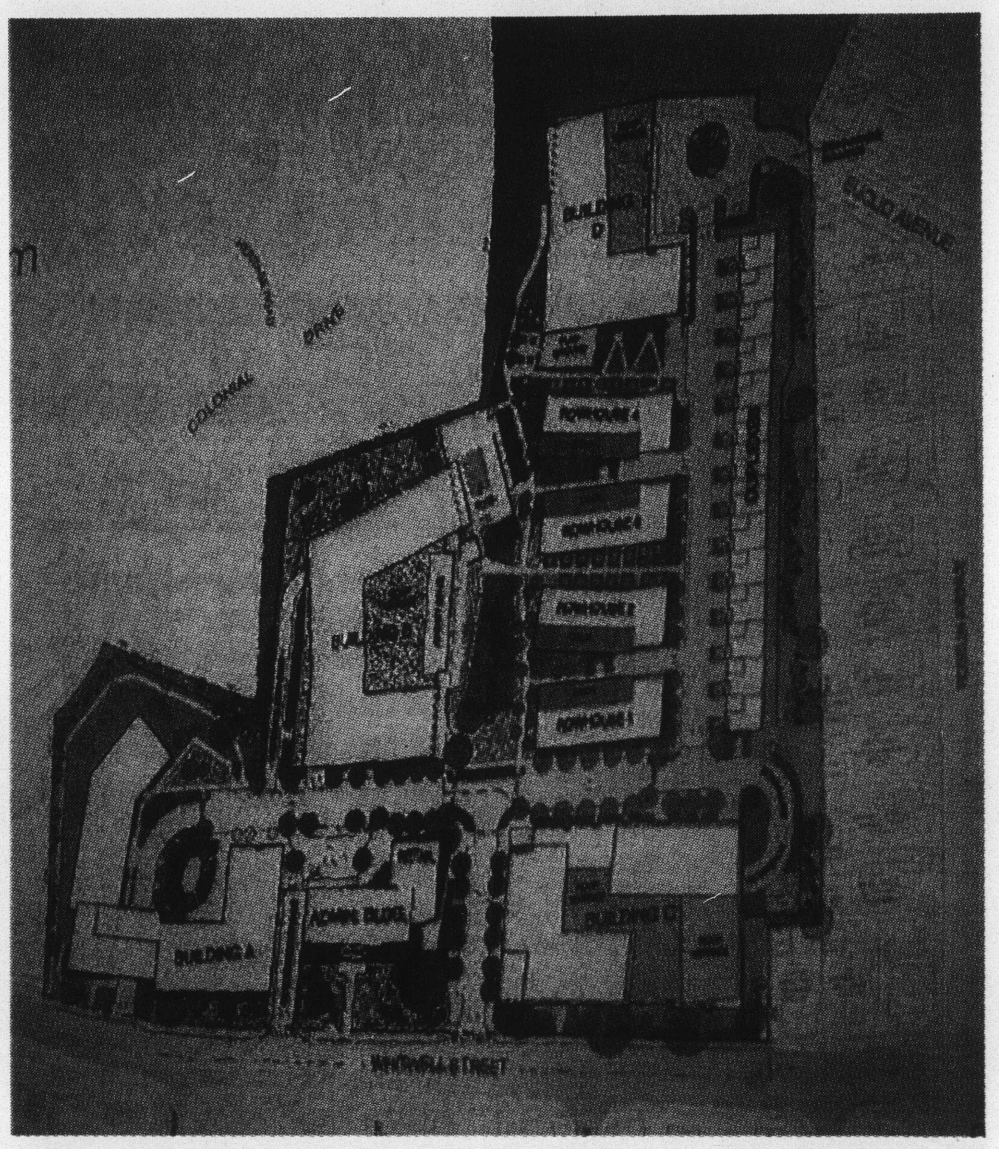

HOSPITAL HILL NEIGHBORHOOD Association President Ted Mulrane questions why updated renderings of the development were not available for the informational meeting.

WARD 5 COUNCILLOR Kirsten Hughes tells residents they will have additional opportunities to address concerns at upcoming planning board hearings on the plan to redevelop the former Quincy Medical Center campus.

'World-Class Park' Set To Open Sept. 8

The Hancock-Adams Common – the new public park space to open this summer in Quincy Center – will be a world-class park that visitors to the city and residents alike can enjoy, said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The park – located between the United First Parish Church and City Hall – will be dedicated during a ceremony set for 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 8. Gov. Charlie Baker and author David McCullough will serve as keynote speakers for the event.

Construction of the $15.7 million park began in June 2017. Koch said it would be done in time for the Sept. 8 dedication.

"They are on schedule," he said. "They should be done by the middle of August, but we built in a few extra weeks – if you get a bad stretch of weather or heavy rain for a few days, that throws them off."

The mayor said the new park's features would create a top-of-the-line space for the public to enjoy.

"The statues, the water elements, the granite elements, the landscaping and plant material all come together to create a world-class park. It's first-class, top-shelf – whatever words or phrase you want to use – the quality is just terrific," Koch said. "There is no cutting corners over there. This was designed as a park – a lot of time and effort went into it by a lot of people to make sure we got it right."

"It's not just about people coming to the city – tourists – to enjoy it," he later added. "I think it's an area that people are going to feel good about. It creates stability for the city. It reminds us of our continuity and our history. I just think for all the right reasons people are going to think highly of the location.

Legislature Restores $75,000 Cut By Baker For QP Project

The Massachusetts House and Senate have restored funding for a Quincy Point project after Governor Baker vetoed spending for the project from the Fiscal Year 2019 budget.

Rep. Ronald Mariano sponsored a budget amendment to fund improvements to the Fore River Clubhouse in Quincy, and helped secure the two-thirds majority vote in the House of Representatives required to override the governor's veto.

"The Legislature passed a fiscally responsible budget that makes targeted investments in important state-wide programs while also supporting local projects that directly benefit residents," Mariano said. "I look forward to the timely disbursement of this funding so that the residents of Quincy Point may enjoy the improved Clubhouse as soon as possible."

The Fiscal Year 2019 budget allocates $75,000 to support a rehabilitation project at Fore River Clubhouse on Nevada Road in Quincy. The Clubhouse celebrated its 100th anniversary last year and some initial improvements were recently done to the exterior, but the interior requires significant upgrades to bring the facility in line with modern needs. It is the long-time home of the Ward 2 Civic Association and also hosts other community and senior events. Renovations to the building will complement recent improvement to the fields behind the Clubhouse including a new basketball court, baseball field, and handicap-accessible playground, the first of its kind in Quincy and the entire South Shore.

Long Island Bridge Hearing Postponed

Conservation Commission Meets Next Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy Conservation Commission hearing to review Boston's proposal to rebuild the Long Island Bridge has been postponed to next month because a quorum could not be reached at the board's most recent meeting.

Ward 6 Councillor William Harris, meanwhile, wants Boston to withdraw its application and restart the process by holding a community meeting for residents who would be impacted by the plan.

Four of the seven commission members were in attendance for the Aug. 1 meeting, but one, Maureen Glynn, a Marina Drive resident, has recused herself from the matter. Commissioner Jeffrey Graeber, who was at a June meeting on the proposal, was not there for this month's hearing. No testimony was heard at the meeting with Graeber absent, because commissioners must be present for all hearings on an item in order to cast a vote on it.

QMC Site Developer To Resubmit Plan This Fall

By SCOTT JACKSON

The developer proposing to build nearly 600 new residential units on the site of the former Quincy Medical Center has withdrawn its plans, for now.

FoxRock Properties, owner of the 14.9-acre site on Whitwell Street, had been scheduled to go before the Planning Board Aug. 1 to pitch the project. The North Quincy-based company withdrew the project before the meeting started however, and plans to resubmit its application sometime this fall.

FoxRock unveiled its plans for the site during a community meeting July 24 at Central Middle School. Company officials told residents in attendance that night they hoped to construct 598 residential units on site. The hospital buildings would be demolished to make way for the new construction. The historic administrative building that sits in front of the site would be spared from the wrecking ball, however, and renovated to include new retail space.

Jason Ward, managing partner for FoxRock, told those in attendance on July 24 the project was still undergoing final design, with engineers and architects working to determine the location of the new structures that would be built on site.

The site is located in a planned-unit-development zoning district, which would have made the City Council, acting as the city's special permit granting authority, the ability to review the proposal. City councillors in Decembers, however, amended the city's zoning ordinance to make redevelopment of a hospital site an allowed use in a PUD district subject to site-plan review by the Planning Board.

The council at that time also lowered the height of new buildings allowed on site from eight stories down to six and reduced the floor area ratio – which determines how dense new construction can be – from 4.0 to 2.5. The zoning change also required 20 percent of the site be kept as open space.

FoxRock acquired the hospital for $12 million from Steward Health Care, QMC's former owner, in December 2016. As part of the agreement, Steward agreed to keep open the emergency room on site through the end of 2021.

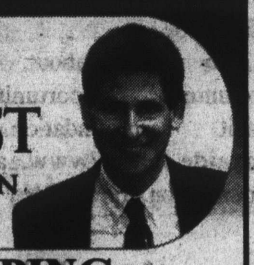

As part of the deal to purchase the hospital, FoxRock, which is owned by Granite Telecommunications CEO and president Rob Hale, was also named the developer for the Ross Lot area in Quincy Center by Mayor Thomas Koch. Koch has said the company could build up to 1 million square feet of commercial space on that site.

LOBE HOPPING

No need to hold anything back these days when it comes to wearing earrings - wild asymmetry is the rule of the day as runway models mix and match chandeliers, swinging chains, and tassel variations. Whether wearing a single chain on one side and a shoulder-brushing tassel earring on the other, or one long, heavy, ornate, vintage-style earring on one ear and nothing at all on the other, it's time to make daring statements with earrings. Hoop earrings are also back on top, with one popular style featuring hoops of increasing size all the way from the top side of the ear down to the lobe. Small hoops can also be worn to accentuate the cheekbones when wearing a ponytail.

We are very much aware of today's trends in earrings and other fine jewelry, and we'll be happy to keep you up to date on what is new and exciting. Our designs range from chic, up-to-the-minute pieces to the well-loved traditions of the past. And if you are considering a custom design, now is an excellent time to bring us your ideas so we can begin working on something very special just for you. Whether it's beautiful gemstone jewelry, distinctive gifts, or golden treasures, you're sure to find what you are looking for at Rogers Jewelry, 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

AARP MA Monthly Fraud Update

By CINDY CAMPBELL
Communications Director
AARP Massachustts

Did you know that someone's identity gets stolen every two seconds?

The AARP Fraud Watch Network provides you with tips and resources to help you spot and avoid identity theft and fraud so you can protect yourself and your family. Our watchdog alerts will keep you up to date on con artists' latest tricks. It's free of charge for everyone: AARP members, non-members, and people of all ages.

The AARP Fraud Watch Network is:

• An Educator: Get real-time alerts about the latest scams, tips on how to spot them, and the inside scoop on how con artists think so you can outsmart them before they strike.

• A Watchdog: Our nationwide scam tracking map gives you access to a network of people who've spotted scams and the opportunity to pass along your own experiences, so together we can beat con artists at their own game.

• A Resource: Get connected to a real live person trained in how to avoid fraud and advise you if you or a loved one has been scammed by calling our fraud hotline or attending a forum in your community.

• Free for Everyone: Anyone, of any age, can access our resources at no cost.

SCAM ALERT #1:

As we enter the second half of summer, many companies have mid-season sales with amazing deals. But if a sale looks too good to be true, it probably is. Beware of websites that sell high-end name brand products at a fraction of the retail price. Through these fake websites, scammers can sell knock-off products to unknowing consumers, or worse, take your credit card information and never send the items you purchased. Please be vigilant in scoping out only true online sales, and ensure the bargains you find are the real deal.

SCAM ALERT #2:

Individuals are not the only victims of scams. Scammers also target many small and local businesses, which costs them an estimated $7 billion a year, according to the Better Business Bureau. From receiving bills for supplies that nobody ordered, and being threatened to pay it, to paying for services that the business could otherwise get for free, there are many ways businesses may fall victim to a skilled scammer. The Federal Trade Commission and the Better Business Bureau recently partnered to help stop these scams. Small businesses are a vital part of our economy, employing residents and offering services to the local community. Just as it is for individuals, a costly scam can be detrimental to the financial wellbeing of a small business.

SCAM ALERT #3:

There are many amazing charities out there that benefit from donations. Unfortunately, scammers may try to capitalize on the generosity and good will of others by setting up fake charities and pocketing the donations. To ensure the organization you decide to donate to be worthy and doing the work they say, visit www.ftc.gov/charity for ways to verify charities. If you have doubts, there's always the option to give directly to smaller local charities where you can more easily see the impact of your donation.

SCAM ALERT #4:

August is winding down, which means the back-to-school season is upon us. With every change in season comes a potential for new scams. Scammers know that this a time when there is an increase in the number of purchases being placed for kids and grandkids. In this scam, they will send emails with a subject line such as "re: shipping info." The subject line looks as though a company is sending confirmation of shipping details. But in reality, these types of emails may contain links to websites that download malware on unsuspecting shoppers' computers. Keep your computer and your information safe by deleting vague messages from companies from whom you haven't ordered or email addresses you don't recognize. And be sure to keep your firewall and virus protection software up to date.

SCAM ALERT #5:

College is expensive as it is. Many parents and grandparents may be looking for ways to help their family members afford their education. Please beware of scholarship, financial aid and government grant scams. Fraudsters guarantee to award a scholarship as long as you pay an upfront processing fee for their services, but then you never see any scholarship money. To apply for true federal student aid, use the FAFSA, the official online form which is free to submit. Save your money and put it towards education instead.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

Report scams to local law enforcement. Contact the AARP Fraud Watch Network at www.aarp.org/fraudwatchnetwork for more information on fraud prevention.

AARP Foundation Tax-Aide Seeks Volunteers

AARP Foundation Tax-Aide is looking to expand its team of volunteers for the upcoming tax season.

Tax-Aide, now in its 51st year, offers free in-person preparation and assistance to anyone, especially those 50 and older, who can't afford a tax preparation service. Volunteers make a difference in their communities by assisting many older, lower-income taxpayers, and their families, who might otherwise miss out on the tax credits and deductions they've earned.

Since its inception, AARP Foundation Tax-Aide has served more than 68 million taxpayers. The program is seeking volunteer tax preparers, client facilitators, those who can provide technical and management assistance and interpreters. Every level of experience is welcome. Volunteer tax preparers complete tax preparation training and IRS certification.

Last year, 705 AARP Foundation Tax-Aide volunteers helped more than 42,876 people file their federal and state tax returns. The program is offered at approximately 143 sites in Massachusetts including senior centers, libraries and other convenient locations.

AARP Foundation Tax-Aide has grown since its inaugural team of just four volunteers in 1968. The program now involves 35,000 volunteers and serves over 2.5 million taxpayers annually at nearly 5,000 sites nationwide. In 2018 taxpayers who used AARP Foundation Tax-Aide received $1.3 billion in income tax refunds and more than $213 million in Earned Income Tax Credits (EITCs). Taxpayers do not need to be a member of AARP or a retiree to use Tax-Aide.

To learn about our volunteer opportunities, visit aarpfoundation.org/taxaide<http://www.aarpfoundation.org/taxaide> or call 1-888-OUR-AARP (1-888-687-2277). AARP Foundation Tax-Aide is offered in coordination with the IRS.

AARP Foundation works to end senior poverty by helping vulnerable older adults build economic opportunity and social connectedness. As AARP's charitable affiliate, we serve AARP members and non-members alike. Bolstered by vigorous legal advocacy, we spark bold, innovative solutions that foster resilience, strengthen communities and restore hope.

Poetry, Beachcombing Tour Saturday At Squaw Rock Park

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program is offering a free poetry and beachcombing tour at Squaw Rock Park on Saturday, Aug. 11 at 4:30 p.m.

Ilani D'Alfonso will read some of her poems about the ocean while participants stroll through the park followed by an exploration of the beach at low tide with coastal citizen scientist Peter Fifield. Participants should bring water, bug spray and wear long pants and socks that can cover pants bottoms (to minimize tick exposure).

The tour will begin in the parking lot of the Nickerson Post at the end of Dorchester Street in Squantum.

For more information, call 617-472-0799.

QCAP Hi-Set Classes Information Meeting Aug. 13

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., 1509 Hancock St., will hold an information meeting for its Hi-SET classes Monday, Aug. 13 at 5:45 p.m.

To register, contact Margaret Doherty, Educational and Career Advisor at 617-657-5387 or by email at mdoherty@qcap.org.

Attendees will learn more about the free program.

Classes are held on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m. and begin in September. An assessment test is required before students begin classes.

Hi-SET (formerly GED)

• ABE – (Adult Basic Education) For adults who want to improve their basic academic skills, including studies in reading, writing, mathematics, social studies and science.

Class meets two evenings per week.

• Pre-ASE – For adults who want to build their knowledge in the five test areas and improve their basic academic skills. Class meets two evenings per week.

• ASE – (Adult Secondary Education) for adults who want to increase their knowledge of the five test areas and prepare to take the Hi-SET exam. Class meets two evenings per week.

QCAP's Adult Education and Workforce Development programs give adults the chance to return to school to study for the Hi-SET High School Equivalency Assessment (formerly GED). Small group instruction and an individualized approach create a learning environment that is supportive and successful in assisting students to reach their goals.

The program's highly participatory learning process is enriched by students' own life experiences. The Adult Education staff is committed to providing a supportive setting that focuses on students' strengths.

Long Island Bridge Hearing Postponed

The Long Island Bridge project will be back before the commission at its next meeting, scheduled for Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh in January announced plans to rebuild the bridge, which had been demolished in 2015, and open a long-term recovery facility on Long Island. Boston officials have said the bridge will cost $92 million to reconstruct and hope to start the three-year rebuilding project in 2019.

The proposal was met with opposition from Harris, Mayor Thomas Koch, Rep. Bruce Ayers and other Quincy officials, citing traffic impacts on Squantum. They have suggested Boston consider using a ferry to access Long Island.

The bridge would connect Long Island with Moon Island. The latter is fully owned by Boston but within Quincy's city limits. Moon Island is only accessible through Squantum.

Boston officials and engineers had presented plans to the Quincy Conservation Commission during its meeting June 6, saying the project to rebuild the bridge using existing piers would have minimal environmental impacts. Quincy officials and consultants, however, said more work on those piers could be needed, increasing the environmental impact of the project.

Graeber, the commission's chairman, at that time said a continuance was needed so board members could receive additional information on the project and to give Boston officials time to respond to concerns from Quincy officials about the piers.

Harris, who represents Squantum and Marina Bay on the Quincy City Council, called on Walsh to withdraw his application to the Quincy Conservation Commission prior to the Aug. 1 meeting.

Harris, in his letter to Walsh, said Boston should host a community meeting on the bridge before seeking approval for it.

"At this time, I am requesting that the City of Boston withdraw its application until such time that the Ward Six community in which I represent, specifically Squantum, has an opportunity to discuss and share their questions, opinions and concerns regarding the proposal for the Bridge and all of Long Island projects going forward," Harris wrote. "The potential projects and present activities on Long Island, could potentially affect traffic in the area, and jeopardize the public safety of the community.

"A community meeting is an essential and basic first step for any developer who proposes a project within a neighborhood in Quincy and therefore, presenting a proposal before the Conservation Commission or any other Board in the city before giving the neighbors a chance to hear and discuss a project goes against the grain of representation of our neighborhoods."

Harris, in a phone interview, said Boston requires developers to host community meetings for projects before bringing them forward for review. Koch has said Walsh reached out to him before announcing the plan to rebuild the bridge, but Harris said he has not heard from Boston's mayor, despite the project impacting the residents he represents.

"[Walsh] just announced it, gave the city little warning, and has not reached out to the city councillor who represents the north side of the city," Harris said.

"When it comes to development in Boston, you have to meet with the ward councillor."

Harris reiterated his support for the ferry in the phone interview. Ferries, he said, would provide emergency access on and off Long Island just as fast as emergency vehicles that would need to drive from Boston through Quincy to get there, before heading back to Boston.

"It's going to take them just as long as the ferry," Harris said.

The traffic generated by trips to and from the island would impact not only Ward 6 residents, Harris added, but also motorists from across the South Shore who drive over the Neponset Bridge en route to Boston.

"It will not only impact the people who commute from Quincy, but the people who commute from Weymouth, Hingham, Hull and Cohasset," he said.

In addition to approval from the Quincy Conservation Commission, the Quincy Planning Board must approve of the project, and Boston would need to obtain a building permit from the Inspectional Services Department.

John Brennion, E. James Iorio, and Tori LaBate were the three members of the Quincy Conservation Commission present at the Aug. 1 meeting, along with Glynn. Graeber, Tom Carroll and William Keener were not in attendance.

The project is also subject to review by state environmental officials, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The Boston Conservation Commission gave its approval to the project earlier this year.

This spring, Harris and Koch co-sponsored an ordinance, which was unanimously approved by the City Council, to ban commercial vehicles from a portion of Dorchester Street and Moon Island Road in Squantum. Those two roads provide access to the Moon Island approach to the bridge. Vehicles serving area homes and the Nickerson Post are exempt from the ban, as are Boston police and fire vehicles.

Boston officials have said they would float pieces of the bridge deck into place onto the piers, which were built in 1950. The same process was used to install the central span of the Fore River Bridge. Two piers – those closest to the shore off each island – would not be re-used.

SH Farm Stand Accepting SNAP/HIP Benefits

In partnership with Mayor Koch's Office, Quincy Community Action Programs and Quincy Asian Resources the Quincy Housing Authority is hosting a Farm Stand featuring Myco Terra Farms.

The farm stand features a variety of fresh, local produce and will be accepting SNAP & Healthy Incentive Program (HIP) benefits. All SNAP recipients are automatically enrolled in the HIP which helps recipients buy more fresh fruits and produce.

The HIP program is simple. Use your SNAP benefits at the Snug Harbor Farm Stand to buy fruits or vegetables and you will receive $1 for each dollar you spend on eligible fruits and vegetables, up to $40 per month. You must have a SNAP balance to earn the HIP incentive benefits.

James Marathas, executive director for Quincy Housing Authority, said opening day was a great success. "There were over 100 households shopping and a wide variety of locally grown fruits and vegetables were available, said Marathas. "Quincy Housing Authority is proud to work with our community partners to provide access to fresh produce through the HIP program."

The Snug Harbor farm stand will run every Wednesday from 1 to 6 p.m. in the visitor's parking lot at O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St. in Germantown. Mandarin and Cantonese interpreters will be available.

The farm stand is open to the public. All are welcome.

City Needs A Hospital, Not More Housing

Readers Forum

I read in The Quincy Sun that FoxRock Properties has plans to develop the Quincy Medical Center property into housing that this city doesn't need.

My question is: why doesn't that city councillor fight for her ward and not give into the developer? We the taxpayers of this city need a hospital, not more houses! I would rather have a medical facility than a park in front of City Hall that costs millions that was never voted for.

Councillor, you work for your neighborhood, not the mayor.

Build A New Long Island Bridge

I know The Quincy Sun won't publish this letter. They don't like what I write. Last time I checked this was still America.

Now, the bridge the mayor won't agree with it because of all the traffic in Squantum. Now everywhere you turn, with all the concrete jungles going up, all over in Quincy Square alone there will be more cars and people every day.

So what's the difference? Traffic here or in Squantum?

Just agree and let's build a bridge. My father died in Long Island Hospital due to cancer in 1980. Thank God there was a bridge to use to visit.

We need that bridge.

Site Issues Delay Community College

The timetable for the proposed $15 million South Shore Community College to be built in Quincy has been set back by approximately one year.

"It will mean," said disappointed Mayor James R. McIntyre, "that the College will not become a reality until at least three years from now."

The 3,500-student two-year college, which would accommodate residents from Quincy and other South Shore communities, is planned for a 100-plus acre site in the Echo Lake area in Quincy near the Braintree line. It would be built with state funds.

The State Board of Community Colleges said it needs more information regarding rock and ledge in the area and the cost feasibility to develop the site.

McIntyre said it would take "weeks more and possibly months" to complete the site study requested by the Board of Colleges. (Editor's note: The proposed school was never built on this site.)

MAYOR ACCEPTS SHEEHAN RESIGNATION

Mayor James R. McIntyre accepted "with sincere regret" the resignation by John F. Sheehan, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

Sheehan, who was appointed to the $12,000 post in April 1967 – the first man to hold the job – was leaving Aug. 29 to return to teaching. He will teach American History at Scituate High School.

"I think Mr. Sheehan did a tremendous job," said McIntyre. "He is an outstanding, dedicated individual and I accept his resignation with sincere regret."

McIntyre noted that Sheehan had initiated and coordinated many worthwhile programs for Quincy's senior citizens who number 15,400 in the 60-plus-age bracket.

RUTH GORDON DAY CELEBRATED IN QUINCY

Mayor James R. McIntyre presented Quincy-born Oscar winning actress Ruth Gordon with an Honorary Quincy Citizenship Certificate on her visit to City Hall.

Miss Gordon was a member of the Quincy High Class of 1914 – the famed so-called "worst class" because no one in the class made the honor roll.

Jenna Cohen Participating In Aggie Clean Energy Corps Program

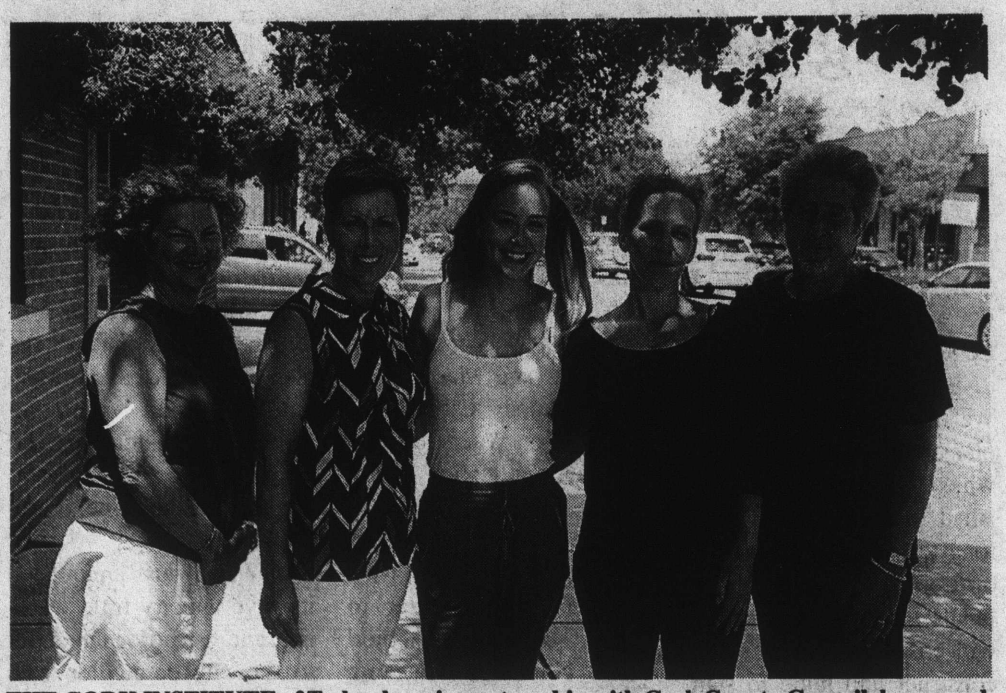

Norfolk County Agricultural High School students recently celebrated the creation of renewable energy on their campus in Walpole with the addition of a new 50-foot wind turbine.

Entirely assembled by the students and staff, the wind turbine, funded by the Massachusetts Clean Energy Center, is now generating and feeding clean energy throughout the campus. This is a big step for the new Environmental Science program at the vocational school. Aggie students are helping set an example for others to pursue the use of clean energy.

Students participating in the effort included Jenna Cohen of Quincy.

Cork Institute Of Technology Offers QHS Student Scholarship

The Cork Institute of Technology, in partnership with Cork County Council, has awarded Quincy High School class of 2018 graduate Cassidy Griffin with a full two-year scholarship to their world-class culinary degree program.

Having excelled in the culinary program at Quincy High School, Cassidy will be attending the Cork Institute of Technology in pursuit of a Higher Certificate in Arts in Culinary Studies. At the conclusion of the two-year program, she will graduate as a fully qualified chef. The scholarship includes full tuition, including room and board as well as job placement at a 5-star resort during her semesters in Cork.

The scholarship is a result of the Quincy – Cork County Economic Development Agreement signed between Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, Cork County Mayor Declan Hurley and Cork County Council Executive Tim Lucey in February.

"This exciting news comes as a result of continued efforts between Quincy and Cork County in order to foster economic, educational and cultural exchanges," Koch said. "Cassidy will have a unique opportunity to be a pioneer for potential future Quincy students."

"We are delighted to announce the awarding of the Cork Institute of Technology (CIT) scholarship to Quincy High student Cassidy Griffin," Lucey said. "Only several months into the signing of the agreement, we are happy to share this milestone with Cassidy, her family and the city of Quincy."

In February, the Cork delegation met with business, education and tourism officials throughout the city in order to foster a better understanding of what Quincy and Cork have to offer each other.

"On behalf of all those on the Quincy – Cork Committee who worked diligently to put this agreement together, we could not be more proud of Cassidy and thankful to the Cork County Council and CIT for making this happen," said Quincy Chamber of Commerce President Tim Cahill.

Orla Flynn, vice president of the Cork Institute of Technology, recently met with Cassidy, her family and her teachers in Quincy to welcome her into the program. She will begin classes in Cork, Ireland at the CIT next month.

Twin Rivers Technologies Volunteers With Road To Responsibility

Twin Rivers Technologies, Inc., a Quincy-based oleochemical production facility, recently volunteered with Road To Responsibility, Inc. (RTR; www.roadtoresponsibility.org), an organization dedicated to making lives better for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

RTR identified one of their Marshfield houses, which is home to five individuals, as in need of some exterior treatment. Volunteers from Twin Rivers Technologies (TRT) made some repairs to a wheelchair ramp to the house, built a garden using new pavers and planted annuals and perennials around the home. TRT spread new mulch on the front and back of the home, and planted yellow flowers under the trees in the front of the home – a special touch for one of the residents, whose favorite color is yellow. Finally, they made arrangements for a power-washing company to come back in a couple of weeks to clean the exterior of the home.

Volunteers from Twin Rivers Technologies included President and CEO Scott Chatlin, COO Todd Lyman, Frank Greene, and Vince Tersegno, among others.

Serenity Belo, director of development for Road to Responsibility, first met Lyman at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast several years ago. The company has been a frequent volunteer with RTR since.

"We are so grateful for the time and energy the team from Twin Rivers Technologies dedicated to our home in Marshfield, and to every volunteer project they have ever done with us. We are so happy and thankful for their commitment to Road To Responsibility," said Belo. "Their efforts today went a long way to beautify this home in Marshfield and their work has brought much joy to the people who live here!"

Fournier earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from Northeastern University. She attended the Coaches Training Institute (CTI) and is a Certified Professional CoActive Coach. She is also a graduate of the CTI Leadership program.

Grand Opening For Café Maddie at Wollaston Beach

Café Maddie recently celebrated its grand opening with owners Matthew Morse, his wife Barbara and daughter Laney joined by Mayor Tom Koch and Quincy Chamber President Tim Cahill on a sunny summer day.

Café Maddie was developed to bring some of the best of Boston to Quincy Shore Drive, while taking in the fabulous view of Quincy Bay and the Boston skyline.

Café Maddie, located at 895 Quincy Shore Dr., is open at 7 a.m to 9 p.m. Monday - Thursday and 10 p.m. Thursday - Sunday, offering Pete's Coffee and the best variety of breakfast sandwiches anywhere. The menu also offers homemade pizza, an array of healthy panini sandwiches made with fresh artisanal breads from Pain D'Avignon and features ice cream made by Emack & Bolio's along with their own special, frozen custard.

A family and pet friendly shop, Café Maddie is a place where you can eat inside or out on the the new deck under an umbrella and where you can get a scoop of vanilla ice cream with gummy bears or the signature Affogato Sundae (two scoops of vanilla ice cream, whipped cream, shaved Belgian chocolate and an Italian Amerena cherry doused in a double-shot of espresso).

It's Summer Kids, Let's Get Reading

By GRACIE WARREN

Hey kids, did you like the last book I recommended? Here's another one I think you'll like.

Where The Watermelons Grow by Cindy Baldwin is about 12-year-old Della Kelly, who lives on her family's farm in Maryville, N.C. with her parents and baby sister Mylie. The story takes place over a summer in which there is a record drought.

Della's mother suffers from a mental illness called schizophrenia and as the awful summer heat gets worse, so does her mother's condition. As her father tries to save the family farm, Della tries everything to make her mother better.

I loved this book, which is written from Della's point of view. This story taught me about hope, friendship, believing in yourself and accepting people for who they are. I give this book five stars.

Harborview Residents Hosting Family Fun Day Aug. 18

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Harborview Residents Committee, a group of Quincy Housing Authority residents, will host a family fun day Saturday, Aug. 18, from 1 to 6 p.m. at General Palmer Field at 53 Bicknell St.

The event is open to the entire community.

"The day is going to be an amazing display of what community looks like when we have fun and unite together to spread love, hope and encouragement to one another," Karen Flaherty, the chairperson of the residents committee, said in a recent interview.

The Quincy Housing Authority is working with the residents' group on the event.

"It's going to be nonstop music, entertainment, games – all kinds of stuff going on," housing authority executive director James Marathas said.

"The main theme behind the event is to promote a drug-free, alcohol-free and violence-free Quincy community. It's an incredible, incredible event they've put together."

The event will include performances from musical acts, water slides, an inflatable obstacle course, a dunk tank and a snow cone bus. Food will also be available at the event.

Local community organizations are expected to participate in the event as well, setting up tables with information on their services for residents. Residents who are in recovery from opioid addiction have also been invited to participate in the event and share their stories.

"We have hearts for the community," Flaherty said. "We want to see people rise by bringing resources of help."

The event will also include a raffle of items donated by local business. Shylo Schuboth, the treasurer for the residents committee, said the Boston Red Sox have agreed to gift items to be raffled. Other area sports teams have been contacted as well.

Flaherty said she hopes the event will help develop a sense of community for the residents living in the area.

"We're kind of isolated down there in Germantown, so we want to build community," she said. "That's our goal…we're trying to build community and bring positive attention down there."

Marathas said the Harborview Residents Committee has been working hard to make a difference for the residents it represents.

"They are an unbelievable group of people," he said. "They are working so hard to change the idea of living down there."

Hamilton Tickets Raffle Benefits Animal Shelter

In 2011, one of the cats at Quincy Animal Shelter won the heart of a local woman who had recently lost her cat. Abigail, formerly Charlie, found her forever home and has brought joy to her "Shelter Mom" every day since.

In appreciation, she gave the shelter two tickets to Hamilton, which will be playing at the Boston Opera House starting in September, to be used as a raffle prize.

QAS combined the tickets with an $150 Abe & Louie's restaurant gift card, the Broadway musical-soundtrack and the book by Ron Chernow.

Raffle tickes are $20 each or 3 for $50. Only 750 tickets are available.

Tickets are on sale at Quincy Animal Shelter during adoption hours on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Those unable to get to the Shelter can call 617-429-8190 for tickets.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Tortilla-Filled Cup
(7 Layer Dip But Very Different)

By MARIE

I found that at almost every party or gathering that I go to that everyone loves dips of any kind. Today's recipe was given to me by Nancy Jacobs (my granddaughter Lauren's mother-in-law).

Nancy always seems to provide me with a recipe or two that is always so different.

Recipe:

Pre-heat oven to 350 and spray muffin tins

Ingredients:

6 Flour tortillas - cut into squares
1 can of refried beans
1 bag of Mexican blend cheese
1 cup guacamole
1 cup salsa
¾ cup sour cream
½ cup chopped scallion
1 tomato, finely chopped

Spray muffin tin cups.

Put a square tortilla in each muffin tin (when done looks like a shape of a tulip) and fill the cups with the refried beans and cheese.

Bake for 15 minutes. Remove from oven.

On the top spoon some guacamole , sour cream and salsa. Then sprinkle the top with onion and tomato. Arrange on a serving platter for a tasty beautiful display.

Easy Stir Fry Sauce

By SUSIE

Here is a delicious and easy stir fry sauce or dipping sauce that you can use on anything from shrimp, to chicken, beef, rice, or just veggies. I made it with cauliflower rice for a reduced carb dish and added bok choy and chicken.

Coconut aminos are made from the sap of the coconut tree and it is loaded with healthy amino acids and far easier to digest than soy sauce, with far less sodium as well. Keep this in the fridge (it makes a good amount) and on a hot night it's great to use for a quick meal with lots of flavor.

Condiments can make or break a dish and turn boring meals into exciting dishes. Tapioca flour makes a great thickener and is easy on the tummy too.

You can reduce garlic if you like and avoid the pepper flakes if you don't like the heat. Enjoy!

Ingredients

2 tablespoons coconut oil
2 cloves minced garlic
1 tablespoon minced ginger
Pinch of crushed red pepper flakes
½ cup coconut aminos (Better and less sodium than traditional soy sauce and wheat free!)
½ cup vegetable broth (I use Imagine brand)
2 tablespoons rice vinegar
1 tablespoon coconut sugar
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons tapioca flour
Instructions

• Add coconut oil, garlic, ginger and red pepper flakes to a small saucepan and heat to a simmer.

• Stir in coconut aminos, broth, vinegar and sugar. Simmer 2-3 minutes.

• While the mixture simmers, add the water and tapioca to a small bowl. Whisk together until smooth. Transfer the mixture to the saucepan.

• Whisk briskly until the sauce thickens.

• Cool the sauce then transfer to a glass jar and store in the refrigerator up to two weeks.

What Is A Boil? - Types, Treatments, Prevention

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

A boil is a skin infection that begins in a hair follicle or oil gland. Also called a skin abscess or a furuncle, it is a localized infection deep in the skin. A boil typically starts as a red, tender area. As it progresses, the area becomes firm and hard.

Eventually, the center of the abscess softens and becomes filled with infection-fighting white blood cells that the body sends via the bloodstream to destroy the infection. This collection of white blood cells, bacteria, and proteins is known as pus. Finally, the pus forms a head which can be surgically opened or spontaneously drain out through the surface of the skin.

Signs of a severe infection are:

- the skin around the boil becomes red, painful, and swollen
- more boils may appear around the original one
- a fever develops
- the lymph nodes in the area become swollen.

The most typical places for boils to appear are on the neck, armpits, shoulders and buttocks. When a boil occurs on the eyelid, it is called a sty.

Boils are usually caused by a type of bacteria called Staphylococcus. This germ can be present on normal skin and enters the body through tiny breaks in the skin or by traveling down a hair to the follicle. Some boils can be caused by an ingrown hair, while others can form as the result of a splinter or other foreign material that has become stuck in the skin, causing the infection to develop. Any break in the skin, such as a cut or scrape, can develop into a boil if it becomes infected with bacteria. Boils themselves are not contagious, but the bacteria that cause boils are. Until it drains and heals, an active skin boil is considered contagious. The infection can disperse to other parts of the person's body or to other people through skin-to-skin contact or the sharing of personal items.

There are several different types of boils. Among these are:

Carbuncle- an abscess in the skin caused by Staphylococcus aureus. It usually involves a group of hair follicles and is consequently larger than a typical furuncle, or boil. A carbuncle can have one or multiple openings onto the skin and may be associated with fever or chills.

Cystic acne-a type of abscess that is formed when oil ducts become clogged and inflamed. Cystic acne affects deeper skin tissue than the more superficial inflammation from common acne. Cystic acne is most common on the face and characteristically occurs in the teenage years.

Hidradenitis suppurativa-a condition in which there are multiple abscesses that form under the armpits and sometimes in the groin area. These occur as a result of local inflammation of the hair follicles. This form of skin inflammation is difficult to treat with antibiotics alone and typically requires a surgical procedure to remove the involved hair follicles in order to stop the skin inflammation.

A pilonidal cyst-a kind of abscess that occurs in or above the crease of the buttocks. Pilonidal cysts often begin as tiny areas of inflammation in the base of a hair follicle. With irritation from direct pressure, over time the inflamed area enlarges to become a firm, painful, tender nodule making it difficult to sit without discomfort. These frequently form after long trips that involve extended sitting.

A sty-a tender, painful red bump located at the base of an eyelash or under or inside the eyelid. A sty develops from a localized inflammation of the glands or a hair follicle of the eyelid.

Anyone can develop a boil. However, people with certain illnesses or medications that impair the body's immune system are more likely to develop boils. Some medications can suppress the normal immune system and increase the risk of developing boils. These medications include cortisone medications (prednisone and prednisolone) and medications used for cancer chemotherapy.

Most simple boils can be treated at home. Preferably, the treatment should begin as soon as a boil is noticed since early treatment may avert later complications. The primary treatment for most boils is heat application, usually with hot soaks or hot packs. Heat application increases the circulation to the area and allows the body to better fight off the infection by bringing antibodies and white blood cells to the site of infection. Do not pop the boil with a needle. This usually results in making the infection worse. As long as the boil is small and firm, opening the area and draining the boil is not helpful, even if the area is painful. Yet, once the boil becomes soft or forms a head it can be ready to drain. Once drained, pain relief can be dramatic. Most small boils, such as those that form around hairs, drain on their own with soaking and/or heat application. Occasionally, and particularly with larger boils, the larger boil will need to be drained or lanced by a health-care provider. Frequently, these larger boils contain several pockets of pus that must be opened and drained.

Antibiotics are often used to eliminate the accompanying bacterial infection, especially if there is an infection of the surrounding skin. However, antibiotics are not needed in every situation. In fact, antibiotics have difficulty penetrating the outer wall of an abscess and often will not cure an abscess without additional surgical drainage. In most cases, incising and draining the boil is adequate to cure the infection.

Good hygiene and the regular use of antibacterial soaps can help to prevent bacteria from building up on the skin. This can reduce the chance for hair follicles to become infected and prevent the formation of boils.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

BID-Milton Hospital 5K Red Shoe Run/Walk Sept. 8

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital –Milton (BID-Milton) will present the fourth annual Dan Breen Memorial 5k Red Shoe Run/Walk on Saturday, September 8 at 10 am at Cunningham Elementary School, 44 Edgehill Road, Milton, MA.

The 5k run/walk is in memory of Daniel J. Breen, a transport aide in BID-Milton's Emergency Department, who was killed in a car accident in October, 2013. Mr. Breen, a Scituate native, was also a 2013 graduate of St. Anselm College and a member of the South Shore Anchors Rugby Football Club.

Funds raised by the run/walk will go towards disaster preparedness projects and continuing professional staff education for BID-Milton's Emergency Department.

"Dan defined the phrase 'All American,' and his enthusiasm and humor are simply irreplaceable," said Cecelia Pukt, chair of the Red Shoe Run/Walk Race Committee. "This 5k road race and walk not only honors Dan legacy but also helps raise funds for a service that helps others in their time of greatest need and that Dan felt so strongly about – the BID-Milton Emergency Department."

Runners/walkers may preregister online at www.redshoerun.racewire.com. The registration fee is $35. Registration by check or cash the day of the race begins at 9 am at the school.

For more information email djbredshoerun@gmail.com.

Children Activities At Crane Library Aug. 9-15

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children Friday, Aug. 9 through through Wednesday, Aug. 15.

Online Summer Reading Challenge

This summer from July 1st through Aug. 31st track your reading on your computer, phone or other mobile device with our new summer reading program. Sign up, log books, and complete activities.

As you add books and complete activities you will earn online badges and points toward our end of summer raffle. We'll have a drawing for the raffle prizes the first week in September. We have two programs one for babies and young children up to age 6 and the other for ages 7-13. Teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

Looking for some good books to read? When you sign up for the online summer reading program you will begin receiving weekly emails with book suggestions. Parents of younger children will also receive an early literacy tip to extend your reading experience for older children these suggestions are a great way to find new books and authors to try.

Concert with Hugh Hanley
Thursday, Aug. 9th at 10 a.m.
All ages

Join us on the lawn at the main library for a Circle of Songs concert with Hugh Hanley.

Hugh draws from a wide and varied repertoire of songs, fingerplays, and music activities that are appropriate, accessible, and highly engaging. Hugh has learned all of the material he uses in his work from folk traditions, children, and their teachers and parents.

This program is appropriate for all ages but will be especially enjoyed by children up to age 4 accompanied by an adult.

Our concert will take place on the lawn (weather permitting) at the main library so bring beach towels to sit on. In case of rain we will move indoors.

This program is sponsored by the Quincy Cultural Council.

Book Discussion – Squish, Super Amoeba
Thursday, Aug. 9th at 7 p.m.
Main Library Children's Room
Ages 8-10 (entering grades 3-4)

Introducing SQUISH—a new graphic novel series about a comic book-loving, twinkie-eating grade school AMOEBA trying to find his place in the world (or at least trying to make it through a school day). Inspired by his favorite comic book hero, SUPER AMOEBA!, Squish has to navigate school (bullies! detention! Principal Planaria!), family (dad: Hates to wear a tie. Secretly listens to heavy metal in the car), and friends (Peggy-rainbows! happy all the time! and Pod . . . who's . . . well, you just have to meet him). Can Squish save the world—and his friends—from the forces of evil lurking in the hallways? Find out in Squish: Super Amoeba—saving the world, one cell at a time!

Copies of the book, Squish, super Amoeba by Jennifer & Matthew Holm will be available in the Children's Room beginning on July 12th, to be read before the group meets.

Second graders who will be entering 3rd grade in September are welcome to join the Phoenix Book Club this summer. We can't wait to meet you!

Action Art
Friday, Aug. 10th at 10 a.m.
Main Library Lawn outside the children's room (meeting room in case of rain)
Ages 6+

Do you think you need a brush to paint? Join us on the lawn outside the children's room for Action Art and discover new ways of painting.

This will be a very MESSY art experience, please dress to get MESSY.

In case of rain we will move indoors for some not quite so messy art.

Art-to-go is a nine-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 to 4 p.m. to make this week's craft.

Monday, Main Library; Tuesday, Adams Shore; Wednesday, Wollaston; Thursday, North Quincy.

Drop in from 2 to 4 p.m. up to age 8. Craft for the Week of Aug. 13th - Tambourine.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Children's Movie @ North Quincy – Robin Hood
Monday, Aug. 13th at 2 p.m.
Rated G

Join Robin Hood, his trusted companion Little John, and his hilarious band of Merry Men as they outfox greedy Prince John to save the good people of Nottingham. Dashing from one daring deed to the next, Robin won't rest until he wins the hand of Maid Marian and restores King Richard to the throne.

This movie is rated G and runs for 83 minutes.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Book Discussion – Hiding out at the Pancake Palace
Tuesday, Aug. 14th at 7 p.m.
Main Library Children's Room
Ages 10-14 (entering grades 5-8)

Eleven-year-old musical prodigy, Elvis Ruby, was supposed to win the most coveted reality show on television, Tween Star. None of the other contestants even came close to his talents. But in the middle of the biggest night, with millions of people watching, Elvis panicked. He forgot the words to the song. He forgot the tune. He forgot how to play every single instrument he'd ever known and froze on national TV.

So Elvis must run from the paparazzi camped outside his door and spend the summer working with his aunt and cousin at Piney Pete's Pancake Palace in the remote wilds of New Jersey. It's the perfect place to be anonymous, that is until Elvis meets Cecilia, a girl who can't seem to help blurting out whatever's on her mind.

Copies of the book, Hiding out at the Pancake Palace by Nan Marino will be available for pick up in the Children's Room beginning July 10th.

Fourth graders who will be entering 5th grade in September are welcome to join the Phoenix Book Club this summer. We can't wait to meet you!

Night of the Robots @ Wollaston
Wednesday, Aug. 15th at 6:30 p.m.
Ages 6+

Wollaston Branch Library

Join us at the Wollaston Branch Library for an evening of robotics play. We'll have Spheros for kids to take for a test drive as well as some other electronic toys and robots to explore.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I read your article entitled "Doing a Breakdown Analysis" and noted that the article was in response to a reader question about when to take Social Security Benefits. The writer commented "I'm in pretty good health and don't really need the money right now." The breakeven analysis you suggested is a great help in determining whether to claim early or wait to take Social Security benefits; however, and in light of your reader's comment that "he did not need the money right now," perhaps another element should be added to the breakeven analysis. That element is to roll the figures based on taking the money early and investing that money month after month for the 48 months in question. The end result should also help in determining an appropriate course of action. I was in the same position back in the mid 90's and made out far better by taking the money early and investing it. In any event, it's one more way to look at this issue. Signed: Faithful Reader

Dear Faithful: Thanks for your feedback. I certainly agree that there's more than one way to look at the question of when to take Social Security. And, yes, I'm quite familiar with the strategy of taking benefits early and investing them. But since I'm not a Financial Advisor and not qualified to give investment advice, I'm required to restrict my remarks to only the Social Security aspects relating to questions I'm asked. You might be interested to know, however, that many financial advisors today do not recommend taking Social Security benefits early, investing the money, and trying to earn more than the Social Security benefit growth they'll realize by waiting. Unlike the investment opportunities of the 90's, it's pretty hard these days to beat the 6.7% annual growth in one's Social Security benefit realized by waiting until full retirement age (FRA) to collect, as well as the 8% annual growth one realizes by waiting beyond full retirement age. And those higher benefits are paid for life, which is significant when considering that average life expectancy is now well into the 80's and living into the 90's is now relatively common. Another consideration when taking benefits earlier than one's full retirement age is that there is an annual earnings limit which, if exceeded, will result in Social Security withholding benefits, so a person's intentions for continuing to work could have a financial impact and should be included as part of any financial analysis. And yet another is that Social Security benefits are taxable if certain income thresholds are exceeded, so taking benefits early when someone is still earning a large salary will increase their income tax liability. The point is, it's never an easy or clear-cut decision as to when to start Social Security, and many factors such as those mentioned above need to be evaluated. And the breakeven analysis, which compares cumulative benefits at different claim-ages, should only be one piece of the puzzle.

'World-Class Park' Set To Open Sept. 8

"People live in neighborhoods. There are parks that are special to them because that's where they go, but this is like a whole different level. There is just so much more prominence to it in all aspects."

Among the common's most prominent features will be statues of the founding fathers for which it is named, John Hancock and John Adams. Baker will unveil the statue of Hancock, who was the first governor of Massachusetts after independence from Great Britain. McCullough will unveil the statue of Adams; the author won a Pulitzer Prize for his 2001 biography of the second president, which was later adapted into an HBO miniseries and has been credited for renewed interest in the Adams family.

The Hancock statue will be located at the southern end of the park near the Hancock Cemetery, which is the final resting place of Hancock's father, the Rev. John Hancock. The Adams statue will be located on the northern end of the new common. The new statues will be surrounded by information about the two men, and their signatures will appear on the base of each statue.

"I'm claiming each of these will be a national monument. This is the national monument to John Hancock and the national monument to John Adams," Koch said. "Until they do something in D.C., why wouldn't it be?"

Among the other dignitaries set to attend the event are U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch and Sergey Eylanbekov, the Russian-born artist who cast the new statues at his studio in Italy. He was one of more than 50 artists who applied to design the new statues.

Koch said other elected officials – including the Bay State's two U.S. senators – have been invited to the ceremony, though it is not known if they will attend.

Former President George W. Bush was invited to attend, the mayor said, but he had to decline the invitation. Bush had been invited to the event because he and his father, George H.W. Bush, both served as president, like Adams and his son John Quincy Adams.

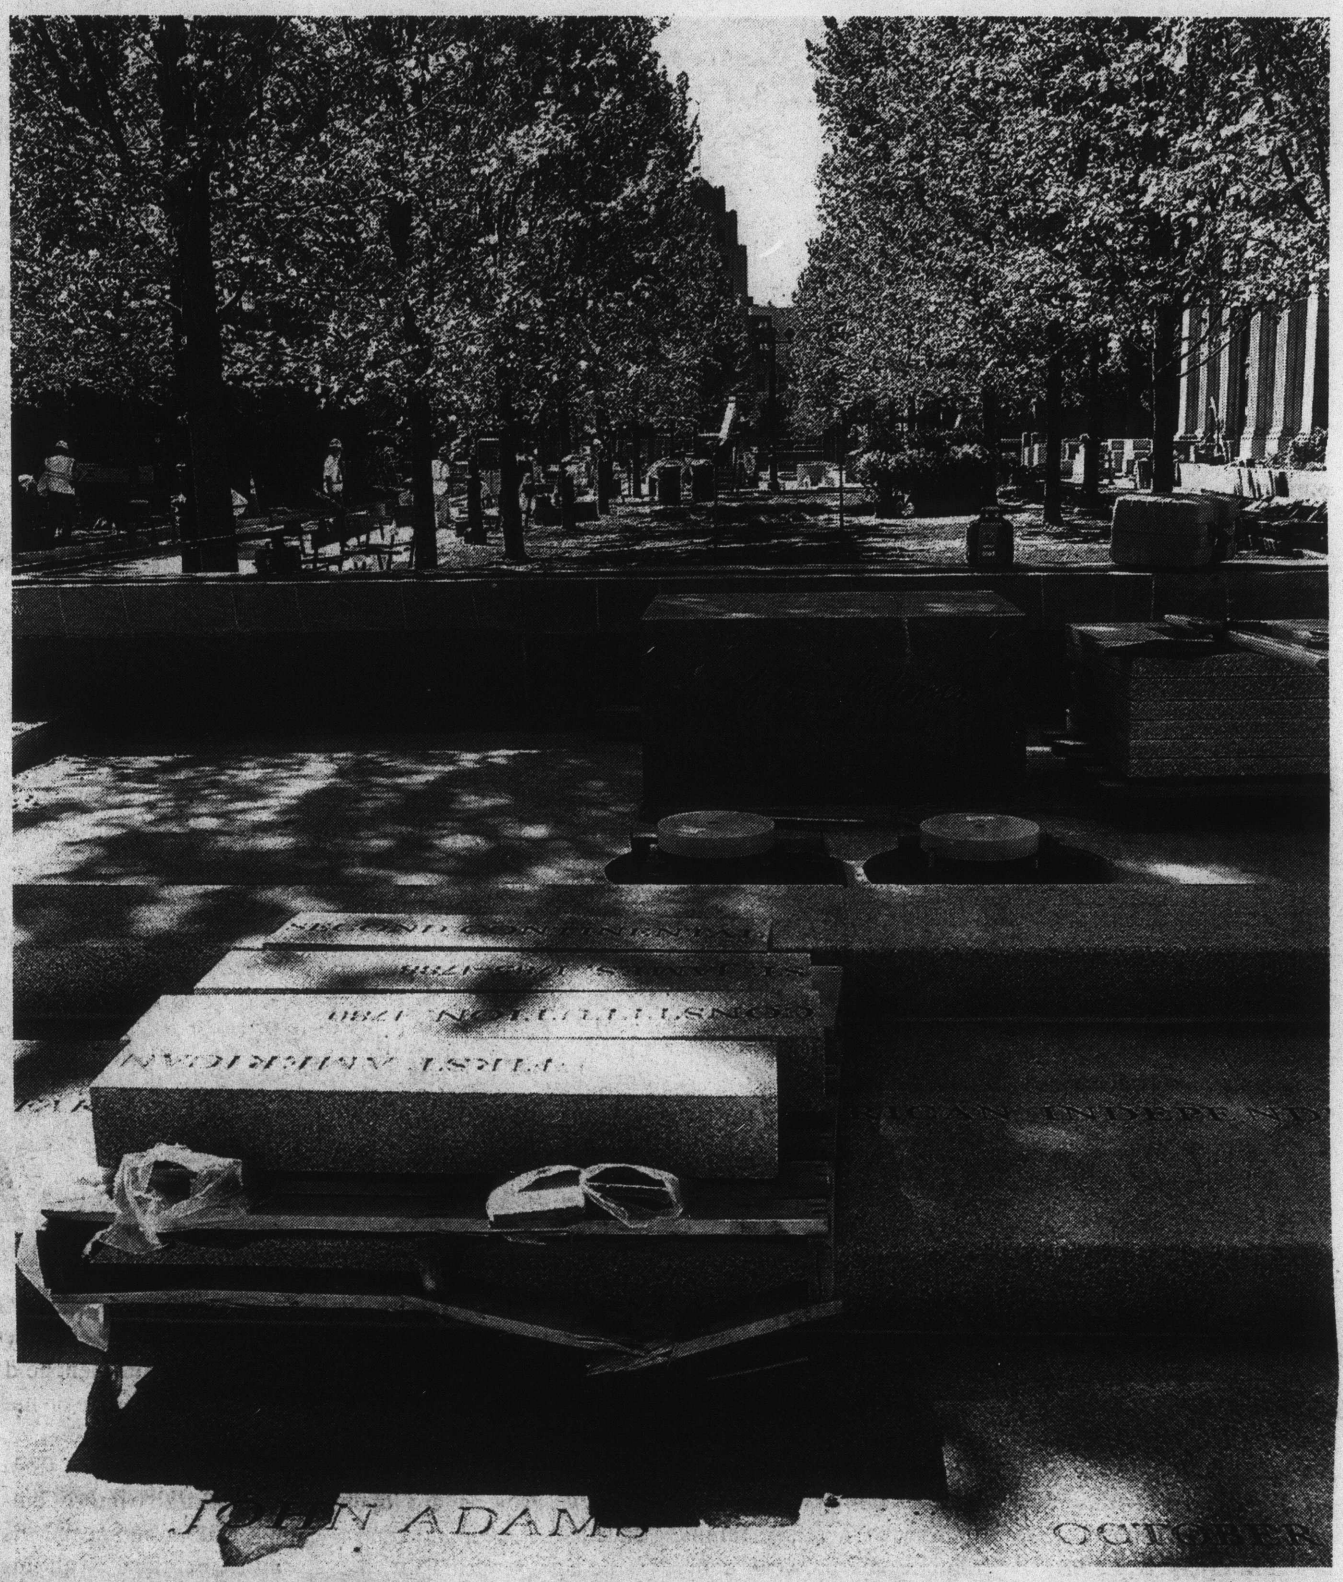

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra and Quincy Choral Society will both perform during the ceremony, Koch said. The dedication is set to last at least an hour, with more events throughout the day.

"I think we'll have a huge crowd – weather permitting. I think there will be a lot of interest," Koch said. "After the formal event, there will be a series of things going on into the evening, kind of celebrating the whole day with some bands, music, perhaps some food trucks and different things."

Going forward, Koch said a new city department could be tasked with maintaining the park and other public assets in Quincy Center, such as the 712-car garage now under construction in what was once the Hancock Lot. The mayor said the department could be funded through the district-improvement-financing (DIF) program, using new growth in the downtown.

"We're looking as part of the whole downtown thing to perhaps [have] a separate entity and use the DIF money to fund the entity just to maintain everything in the district," Koch said. "We've got to figure it out, because it's got to be somebody's baby. They have got to have ownership to maintain these things at a high level."

ANOTHER STATUE will honor John Hancock, another Founding Father who is perhaps best known as the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Hancock also served as the first governor of Massachusetts. The John Hancock statue will be located at the south end of the Hancock-Adams Common. Both the John Adams and John Hancock statues will also have uplighting.

The city's Park Department, he explained, could play a role in maintaining the Hancock-Adams Common, but some of the work needing to be done there is outside that department's purview.

"Maybe they're part of something with it, but I think there has got to be somebody separate in charge of overseeing that whole area with the fountains, the lighting. There is a lot of infrastructure – not just cutting the grass or trimming the trees," Koch said.

"When you have the garage built, you're going to have elevators and mechanicals in there. Who is going to maintain and oversee those things, make sure they run properly all the time?

"By the time we're done with the downtown, there is going to be more of that. I think in the end we'll see some kind of building engineer type that heads up some kind of a unit, division, department – whatever we call it – whether they contract out with a bunch of companies or whether we hire three or four employees and they do much of the work."

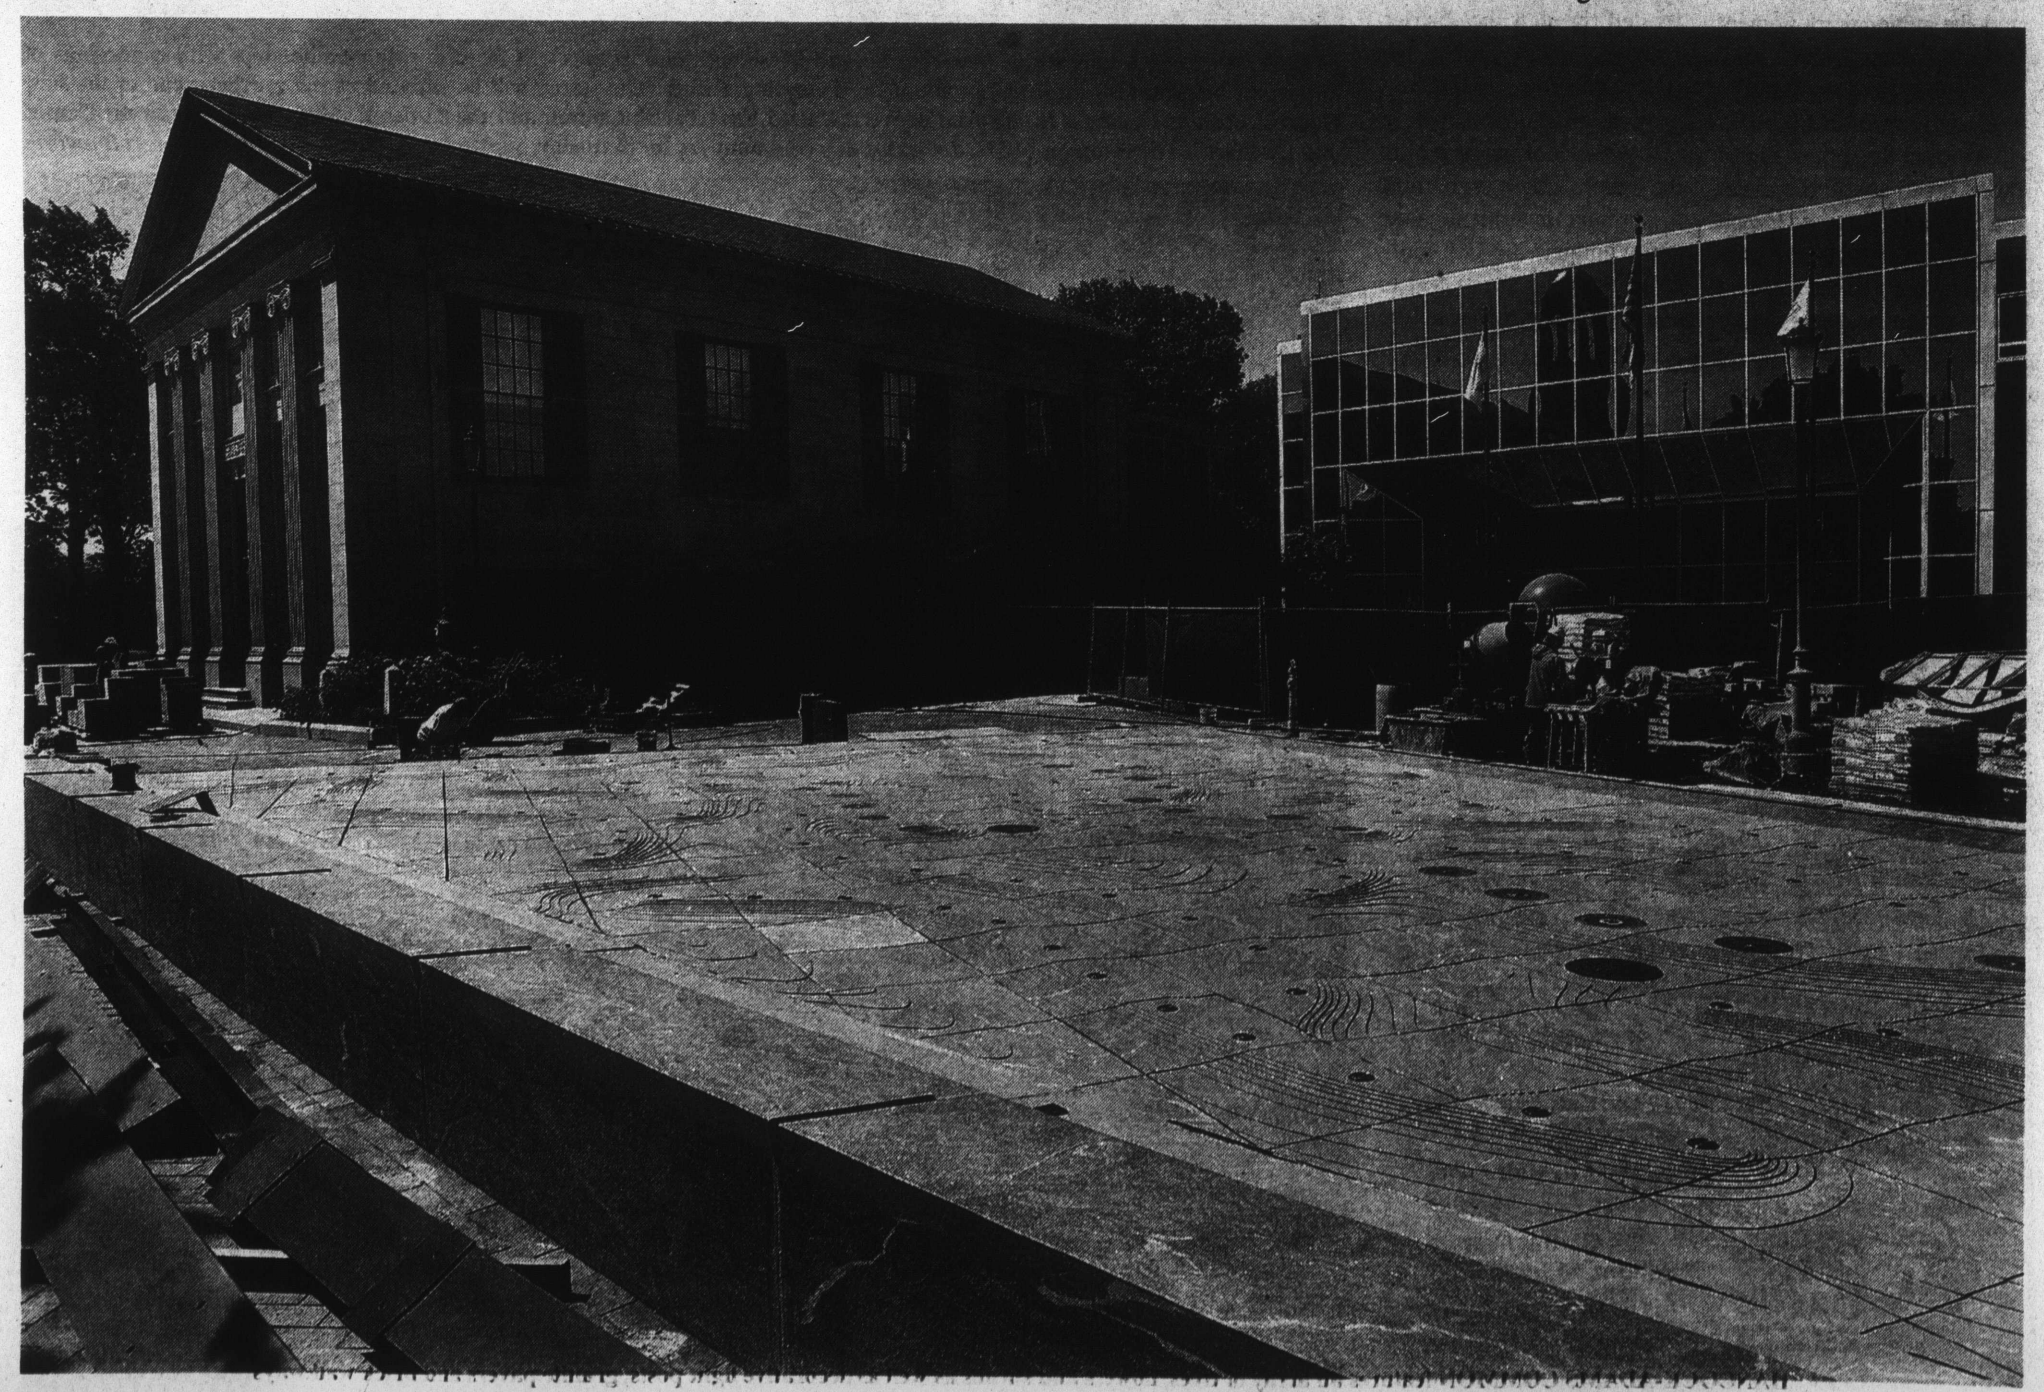

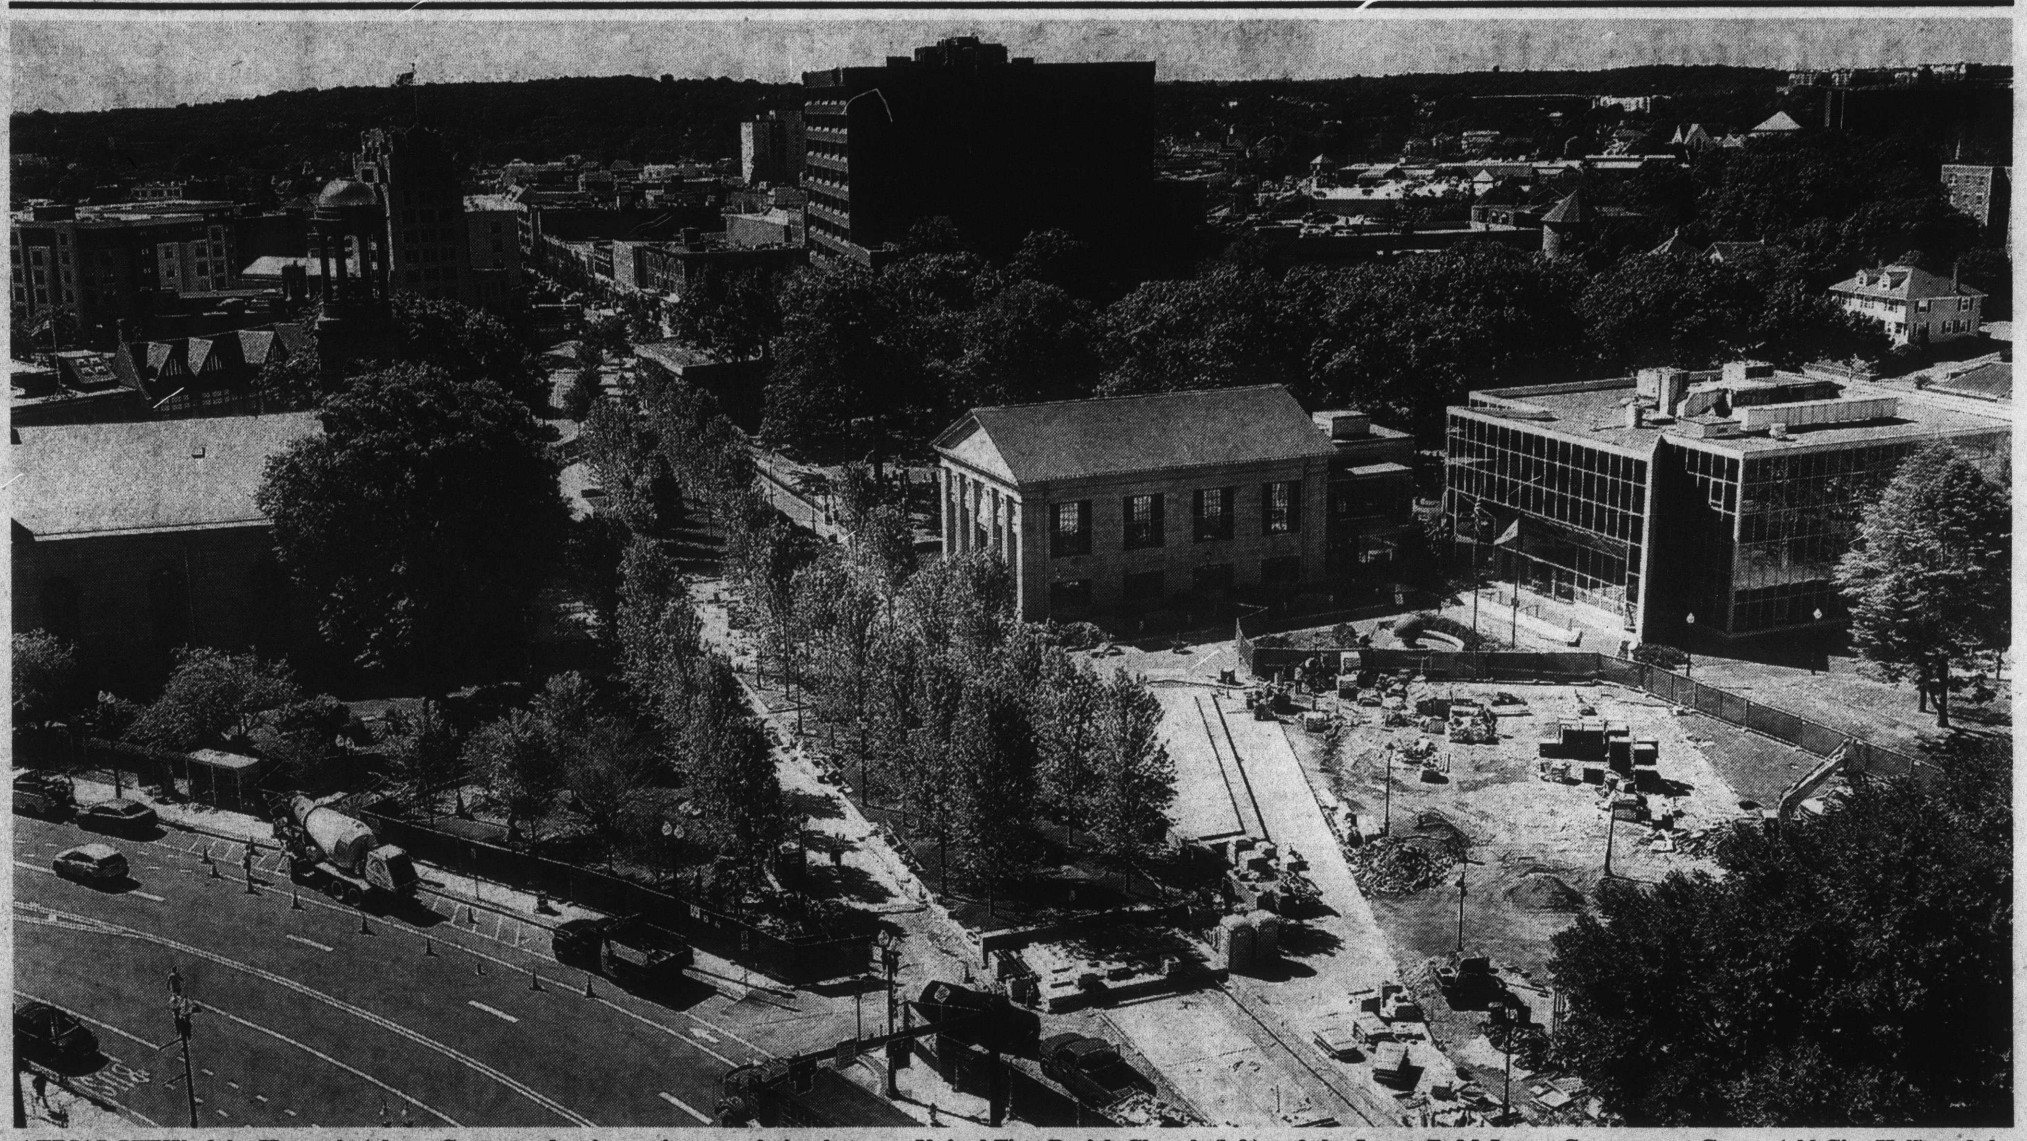

THE NEW Hancock-Adams Common will feature several water fountains, including a "spigot" fountain (top photo) near the John Hancock Statue at the park's south end. The photo below shows the fountain near the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall) and City Hall glass annex building. More Hancock-Adams Common photos on Page 13.

"At the end of the day, it's still city land and still city control, but it's clear Adams Field is a priority of the Park Department. A pump station is clearly DPW – that's their baby," the mayor added.

"But you're getting into these other projects, and it's 'that's theirs, that's theirs' or 'we'll get to it.' It can't be that attitude at all. It's got to be somebody on it all the time making sure everything is properly maintained. We're investing too much money to let it go."

McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall) and the glass City Hall annex (right). The dedication ceremony on Saturday, Sept. 8 will include the unveiling of new bronze John Hancock and John Adams statues that will "bookend" the new common. Gov. Charlie Baker and Pulitzer-Prize winning author and renowned historian David McCullough will help unveil the new statues. STATE-OF-THE-ART pumping and filtration was built underground adjacent to the James R. No Injuries After Wollaston Façade Falls

By SCOTT JACKSON

No injuries were reported after the façade on a stretch of Hancock Street storefronts collapsed Monday morning.

A 40- to 50-foot-long section of the brick façade at 694 Hancock St. collapsed around 7:30 a.m. Monday, according to Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth. No injuries were reported, nor was any damage to vehicles.

"Fortunately no one was walking there and there were no cars parked in front, so we avoided any injuries," Smyth said.

The building at 694 Hancock St. is home to eight storefronts, including a nail salon, convenience store and restaurant. The Inspectional Services Department has ordered the remaining 100 feet of the façade be torn down in the aftermath of the collapse, Smyth said. Structural engineers will then inspect the building.

Smyth said the collapse was likely caused by age and deterioration of the façade.

The southbound lane on Hancock Street was closed to traffic in front of the building on Monday morning, with vehicles diverted to Beale Street. The northbound lane remained open.

The MBTA's 210 bus was diverted because of the roof collapse. The T's Wollaston shuttle briefly stopped service to Quincy Center but was able to resume trips there by 9 a.m.

Lawmakers Unanimously Approve Opioid Bill

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Massachusetts Legislature passed a new bill meant to rein in the opioid epidemic, which Quincy's state senator anticipates will be signed into law by the governor.

The House and Senate both approved the bill in a pair of unanimous votes on July 31, the last day of the legislative session, sending it to Gov. Charlie Baker's desk for approval.

Sen. John Keenan, the chairman of the Special Senate Committee on Addiction Prevention, Treatment and Recovery Options, said he expects Baker will sign the bill into law before the deadline to do so passes later this week.

"We feel comfortable that he will sign it," Keenan said in a recent interview. "Some of [the items in the bill] were part of the bill that he filed. We added some significant items in the Senate and then when it passed out the House over the last few days there was a lot of negotiation between the House, the Senate and the governor's staff."

Keenan said one key provision of the bill requires insurance companies to provide coverage for alternative pain management, which he called a significant step forward.

"Some of the things that we worked on – myself and people in my office – was that it requires insurance companies now to provide coverage for alternative pain management. So there will be assessments as to what type of pain management is best for patients," Keenan said.

"That may be opioids – typically that's been the default. Now physicians will have a wide range of options hopefully available to them, and that may include extensive physical therapy. It may include coverage for acupuncture. It could include coverage for massage techniques – whatever it may be deemed best by doctors to manage pain. So that's a pretty significant step forward that that now be required."

The bill will also require that emergency rooms provide access to medication-assisted treatment. Medication-assisted treatments include drugs like methadone, buprenorphine, also known by the brand name Suboxone, and Vivitrol.

"Some of the hospitals were starting to do it, so what we did by legislation is require hospitals to make sure that there is access for patients to such programming," Keenan said. "We worked with a couple of the hospitals in doing that. Mass. General does it. Boston Medical Center has been doing it. They're both doing it in different ways, so we worked with them, worked with the Mass. Hospitals Association, came to an agreement and we included that in the bill."

Prisons and jails, as well as involuntary commitment facilities, will also be required to provide access to medication-assisted treatment.

"We also – and this was subject to negotiations during the last couple days of the session – moved to allow prisoners to have access to medication-assisted treatment in both our county correctional system and our state correctional system. That was a very significant step," Keenan said. "They've been using Vivitrol, so it would add Suboxone and methadone to that.

"We were in contact with officials down in New York. The New York City system has been doing methadone for a while and they've also been using some Suboxone. Rhode Island as a state has been doing it. We will be really out front in doing it across a wide range of our correctional facilities."

Other provisions of the bill addressed insurance issues relative to naloxone, the overdose-reversing drug that also known by the trade name Narcan, and made tweaks to improve the program that allows patients to only partially fill a prescription for opioid painkillers.

"We covered some insurance issues relative to Narcan – that's in the bill. We fixed the partial-fill law that we passed," Keenan said. "We were the first state in the nation to pass a partial-fill law. That needed some adjustments so we adjusted that so that should work more smoothly now."

Keenan said there remains work to be done to address the opioid epidemic, and he plans to continue that work when the Legislature begins its new term next year.

"There are a few things we have to focus on. We still have to make sure that there is adequate insurance coverage in place. I'd like to still continue the push to make pharmaceutical companies more responsible," Keenan said.

"We passed a drug stewardship program two years ago and then the House of Representatives in the conference committee put a sunset clause on it, so within the next couple of years that obligation will cease. We tried to make that obligation permanent and we will continue with our efforts to make that obligation permanent.

"We will continue to work with insurance companies to make sure there is proper coverage for in-patient treatment and then also alternative pain management. We will work with the medical community to make it easier for them to deal with patients and the issue of pain.

"And I think we've got to start now looking at – as we move more toward medication-assisted treatment as a way to reach a greater number of people – that we start to look at what's next in terms of in-patient treatment or moving people off of medication-assisted treatment. Some may be on it for the rest of their lives – that maybe what is deemed appropriate. Some may be on it for five years, two years, six months – it's how we best transition people who are deemed clinically appropriate from medication-assisted treatment into non-use of opioids.

"Not a lot of people are talking about that, but I think that's going to be one of the next things we have to look at."

QC Announces Online Criminal Justice, Business Courses

Quincy College announces two new associate degree programs offered 100 percent online: Associate's Degree in Criminal Justice and Associate's Degree in Business.

The two new online programs are 18-month programs with classes offered throughout the academic year as seven-week courses.

"Quincy College has been offering online courses throughout Professional Programs, Liberal Arts, and Natural and Health Sciences Divisions," said Daniel Ibarrondo, Associate Dean for Online Learning at Quincy College. "As the Quincy College population grows, so does the demand for affordable, accessible education.

"The college has witnessed a major growth in the demand for online program offerings with many students opting to take an online course in conjunction with an on-campus course. The 100 percent Online Associate Degree programs are a natural extension of what we already offer our students," Ibarrondo added,

Quincy College's Online Degree Programs are guided by an on-campus faculty member, offering personalized learning, utilizing digital tools to facilitate faculty engagement similar to an on-campus experience. In addition to the dedicated faculty member, the College provides Academic Advisors and Student Support Services for all online students.

Adopting a student centered approach to curriculum, Quincy College has designed the new online degree programs which include video lecture, interactive discussion, and personalized learning tools. The instructors take an active role in customizing the online experience for each class. This differentiates the Quincy College program, as many online degree programs are self paced with limited faculty engagement.

Ibarrondo elaborated: "With personalized learning as a core philosophy of Quincy College, Quincy College designed our online programs for students to be actively engaged in their education while mindful of the opportunity to learn anytime and anywhere. We focused not only on course design, quality, and content delivery but also student engagement, faculty presence, and student to student interactions. As major components of the Quincy College difference, Quincy College facilitates valuable learning relationships that inspire students to realize their educational and professional futures, even if a student is located in Oregon and never visits our Quincy or Plymouth Campuses."

Quincy College has partnered with vendors Quality Matters, Tech Smith Relay, and Smarter Measure to ensure that students have the tools they need to succeed.

Students entering the 100 percent online Criminal Justice and Business Associates' Degree programs, part-time or full-time are required to take the Smarter-Measure - Learning Readiness Indicator (LRI). The LRI measures a student's level of readiness to engage in an online academic program in a technology rich learning environment. The LRI is used for aligning fully online students with campus support services, advising.

Quincy College will continue to offer 15-week long online courses and hybrid courses, a combination of online course work and on-campus course work, to students located in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Students may enroll in core, general education courses offered by the Quincy College Online program without majoring in Criminal Justice or Business Associate Degree programs.

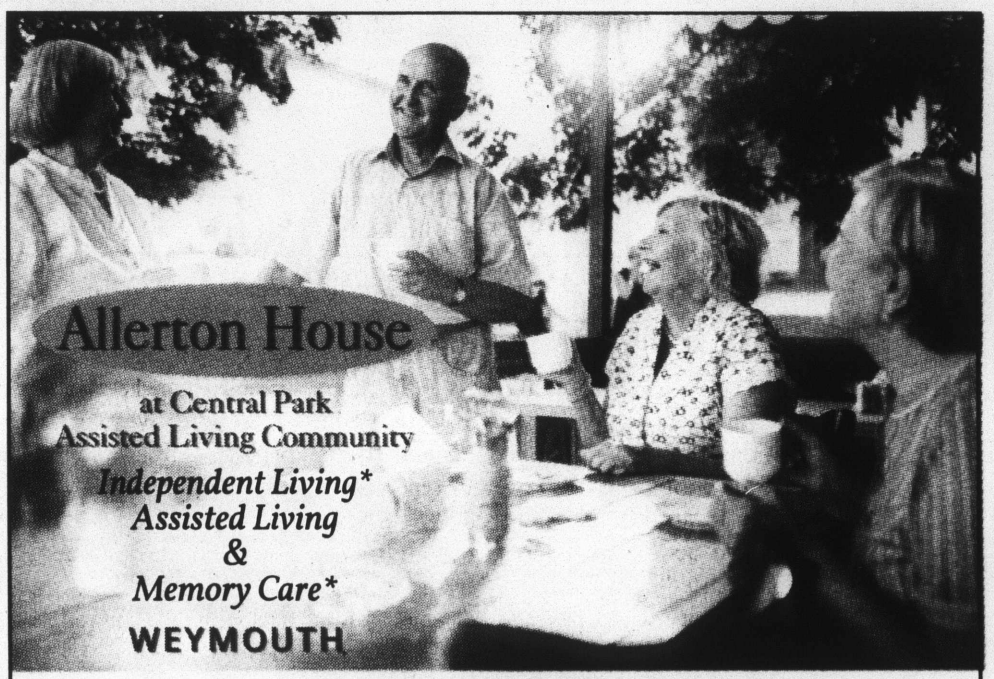

Quincy College has been nationally ranked as a Top Online Community College with the Best Return on Investment (ROI), appearing at #9 of community colleges reviewed by OnlineCollegePlan.com. Quincy College was the only Massachusetts school listed and the only school in New England to appear in the Top Online Community College with Best ROI Ranking.

Quincy College's academic programs are accredited by New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Student Victoria Shen Explores Potential Career At Accounting Summer Camp

Victoria Shen, a student from Quincy, is one of 15 high school students from across the state accepted to the Accounting Career Awareness Program (ACAP), a specialized summer camp for underrepresented high school students, which ran from July 30 to Aug. 3.

Students had the opportunity to experience a free, week-long non-residential program to learn more about the field of accounting and other business-related professions.

Shen is a graduate of Quincy High School and incoming freshman at Babson College.

The Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants (MSCPA) teamed up with the National Association of Black Accountants (NABA), Fisher College, Deloitte, the MFA companies, RSM, and the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) to create a program that includes a diverse set of learning experiences, such as classroom lectures, hands on activities, and visits to business organizations.

VICTORIA SHEN

Students heard from MSCPA members about a day in the life of a CPA as well as from college students about what to expect at as an accounting major. They also visited RSM's office in Boston and toured the TD Garden. The MBTA provided free transportation for the students to and from the program each day.

Data from the AICPA shows that minorities represent only one in six professionals in accounting firms nationwide, a statistic the profession hopes to change. Additionally, accounting is often a second-generation career—people with CPAs for parents often also go into accounting. To expand the pool of future CPAs, the MSCPA supports programs like ACAP.

"Our organization has a long history of supporting minority students pursuing a future career in accounting and this summer we are proud to sponsor two programs for local young people," said Amy Pitter, president and CEO of the MSCPA, which also sponsors C.A.M.P., a residential summer program also focused on accounting and business. "The ACAP program allows students to get fully immersed in all that a career in accounting has to offer. The MSCPA is focused on increasing diversity in the accounting industry and we believe this class of ACAP participants will go on to do great things in their academic and professional careers."

ACAP participants have the opportunity to apply for a renewable scholarship of up to $10,000 during the course of their academic career, and the ability to earn a free, three-credit freshman level course at Fisher College. The students are also offered free high school student membership to the MSCPA.

Janet Burke Mann Foundation Supports Recreation Dance, Arts Programs

For the seventh summer the participants in the Quincy Recreation Department Dance, Music Theater and Drama, and Arts and Crafts programs have been the beneficiaries of the generous support of the Janet Burke Mann Foundation for the Arts.

A grant each summer is applied equally to the self-supporting week long recreation programs so all the participants share equally. The programs becomes very affordable and encourages participation.

'The Burke Mann foundation has provide thousands of youngsters the opportunity to take part in these diversified programs which opens a world of opportunity to youngsters at an early age," said Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch. "We are indebted to the foundation and we are extremely grateful to the grant Administrator Stephanie Pierson Lynch for the continued investment in both the arts and the youth of our city.'

Janet Burke Mann was a lifelong resident of Quincy who during her life was always willing to share her long time love of music and the arts with fellow residents. Her home on Adams Street was often filled with live performance for her many friends. She passed away and with no living relatives and left instructions that her estate would benefit programs for children in the Arts in Quincy. These grants have made a lasting legacy to her love for Quincy, the Arts and the children who live her.

With so many students gone for the summer, teachers may now have time to prepare a different kind of lesson plan. Help students prepare a better future for themselves with practical knowledge about financial planning. There's no better time to let young people know that the younger they start saving, the easier it will be to reach their goals.

Let us introduce you to the Social Security Educator Toolkit. This is a rich resource for teachers and advocates. Our Information for Educators page contains a toolkit with information and resources to educate and engage students on Social Security. It includes:

Two lesson plans with objectives;
Infographics and handouts for each lesson plan;
Links to Social Security webpages;
Talking points; and
Quiz questions and answers.

It's important for students to understand why Social Security was created and why it is essential to their lives today and in the future. This knowledge and understanding will provide students a strong base on which to build their financial future.

You can access the webpage and toolkit at www.socialsecurity.gov/thirdparty/educators.html.

Young workers can also see how Social Security directly relates to them at www.socialsecurity.gov/people/students.

Getting young people excited about saving can be a somewhat abstract subject. Let them know their dreams can be achieved with thoughtful planning and a bit of discipline. Social Security is securing today and tomorrow with your help and the help of today's educated youth.

We're also always here for you if you need information about programs and benefits. Visit us anytime at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Quincy College celebrates its first 60 years. Our greatest achievement, the success of our students.

Sailors Hit The Water In 81st Quincy Bay Race Week

By TOM GORMAN

Sailors, young and not so young, tested their skills in the 81st Quincy Bay Race Week held July 26 through the 29th.

The first two days were hosted by Quincy Yacht Club where small boats in 11 classes skippered by youngsters 8 to 18 raced in the Inside Line. The event moved to the Squantum Yacht Club for the next two days for the Outside Line races where adults in larger boats of Hustlers and Thunderbirds competed.

About 100 sailors in more than 50 boats participated in the annual event held since 1937. The only time the regatta was not held was one year during World War II.

Eight local yacht clubs, including Town River, Squantum, Wollaston and Quincy yacht clubs, participated. Children from throughout the South Shore boating communities, many in sailing programs, compete in various skill levels.

N-10s are beginners and Lasers and 420s are more experienced. In between, there are Optimists with red, white, blue and green representing certain skill levels. Lasers have one skipper where the others have a skipper and a crew.

Adults compete in Hustlers and Thunderbirds. These are larger, faster boats requiring higher skills to sail.

Quincy Yacht Club had the only Widgeon in this year's Inside Line race. Despite a small mishap when it capsized during a race, its five, first year sailors, skipper Molly O'Connor and crew Mary Kate O'Connor, Gavin O'Hare, Carter Bishop and Nate Aronoff, made the club proud.

Brothers Richard McCabe, 80, and Robert McCabe, 78, were the oldest racers in the Outside Line event. They piloted their Hustler to win one of the three races. In the first race, they finished last.

Here are the final results of this year's Inside Line race:

Local 103 IBEW Wins Babe Ruth (13-16) Championship

Quincy Youth Baseball and Softball wrapped up its 2018 Babe Ruth Season recently at a sweltering Coletta Field at Merrymount Park. In the championship game, the Local 103 IBEW team defeated the REI Sports team to claim the league crown.

Local 103 lost its first game of the season 7-6 and went undefeated after that – finishing the regular season and playoffs with a combined record of 12-1-2. Head Coach Bill Farrell first and foremost attributed the championship season to "having a great group of kids – it all started with that." All the coaches, led by Coach Farrell, encouraged the players during the season and stressed, "win the inning," "only give three outs on defense" and said repeatedly "swing at good pitches." Those three sayings resonated with the players and motivated them to go out ready to play every inning of every game.

Pitching, steady defense and timely hitting played a big part in the team's winning ways. Great pitching was provided all season by Will Farrell, Coleman Ross, Robert Broderick, John Hall, Danny Freeman, Josh McMillen and Jack Nelson. Behind the plate Reese Mullen provided superior defense all season and Joe Pontremolli showed blazing speed in the outfield. Dylan Clifford, Joey Manton, Jack Moriarty, Will McMillen and Peter Boylan each contributed in the outfield and infield with great efforts. Hitting and base running was a team effort with a different player shining in each game.

Coach Farrell also had kind words for his three assistant coaches, saying "I couldn't have done this without them"– all three were long-time head coaches in QYB; Jim Ross, George Higgins and Joe Mullen.

Morrisette Legion Baseball 'Never Gave Up'

By TOM JOYCE

The Morrisette Post 294 legion baseball team certainly had what it took to earn a state title this season.

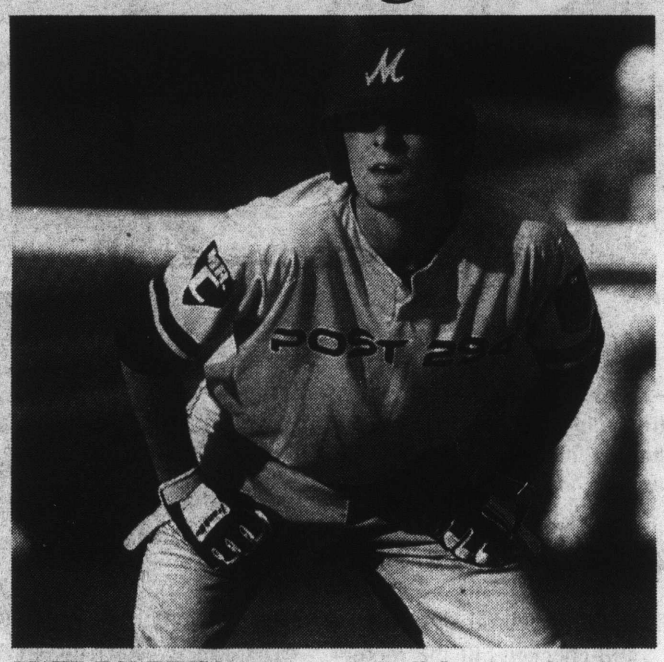

They played strong ball all year and showed they could hang with anyone. However, they would not receive an opportunity to play for the title Aug. 1. In the American Legion state baseball tournament semifinal at Adams Field, they were on the losing end of a 10-9 slugfest with Shrewsbury Post 397 which could have gone either way. This ended Morrisette's season and they finished the year at 21-5.

"It tells you our story of the year, we just never give up," Morrisette head coach Steve Maze said. "We just play the game until the very last out. We play as hard as we can play. I'm not saying we're unbeatable or anything like that but if you beat us, whether it's in the regular season, the playoffs or the state tournament, you know you had to work at it."

Although the game was in Quincy, Morrisette was technically the road team and Shrewsbury ended the game with a walk-off single to left field with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

In order to even get to the bottom of the seventh inning, Morrisette needed to make an impressive comeback. They allowed eight runs in the bottom of the second inning, putting themselves in a massive hole. However, they would chip away at the deficit.

After Matt Tomlinson blasted a 2-run home run in the first inning, knocking

Curtis Frazier home, their next offensive spurt came in the fourth. John Kelley led things off with a single and with one out in the inning, John Joyce doubled, putting a pair of runners in scoring position. Kelley then scored on a balk and Joyce crossed home plate on a sacrifice hit to the shortstop from Jamie Papasodero, making it an 8-4 game.

Shrewsbury got one back in the bottom of the fifth inning, hitting an RBI double off Morrisette starter John MacDonald. He pitched five innings, earned the no-decision and allowed nine runs on seven hits and two walks while striking out a man.

Fast forward to the seventh inning and Morrisette put together a meaningful comeback attempt. Shawn Kelley pinch hit to lead off the inning and singled. Matt Joyce and Marty McCormack the loaded the bases with a pair of singles with no outs in the inning. From there, Frazier singled home a run, keeping the bases loaded for John Kelley, who blasted a bases-clearing triple, making it a 9-8 game. Wil McCarthy knocked Kelley home with a single, tying the game. That was the extent of Morrisette's offensive production in the inning.

Ultimately, Morrisette could not hold on to the tie to force extra innings. With two outs in the bottom of the seventh, Shrewsbury singled, putting a runner in scoring position. On a full count, the next batter ripped a single to left field, ending Morrisette's season. Reliever Doug Concannon took the loss on the mound.

"That's the stuff that happens, walkoffs happen all the time," Maze said. "Sometime you're on the winning end of it, sometimes you're on the losing end of it. There's nothing to be upset about, there's nothing to hang your head about. These guys should be proud of what they've done today, what they've done this week and what they've done all season."

Had Morrisette been able to make it past Shrewsbury, winning the state title would have been a definite possibility. After all, Braintree Post 86 ended up winning it with a 14-8 win over Shrewsbury later that night. However, one day prior to this, Morrisette topped Braintree 5-0 as Owen Carberry fired a complete game shutout against the District 6 Champions.

American Legion Honors Three For Bravery

Members of the American Legion, Law & Order Committee, honored three local heroes July 30th for their acts of bravery on the job.

Quincy Police Officer Daniel Parisi, EMT Hugh Devlin and EMT Rick Weitsen were presented the American Legion Medal of Valor, a Certificate of Commendation and the American Legion Law and Order Clock during the ceremony held at City Hall.

While on duty on the afternoon of Oct. 31, 2017, Quincy Police Officer Parisi was dispatched to 107-109 Norfolk St. regarding a house fire. Upon arrival, he observed a two-family house with smoke coming from the second level. Officer Parisi was told there were still children inside and a handicapped man in a wheel chair unable to walk, that were trapped inside the home.

EMTs Hugh Devlin and EMT Rick Weitsen rushed into the burning building, found an elderly man, still in his wheel chair and carried him to safety. Officer Parisi also rushed into the home, located a young boy and carried him to safety. He then re-entered the burning building, located a confused female, and carried her outside to safety.

No injuries were reported. At that point, Quincy Fire Dept. arrived and took over the scene.

"The bravery of these men is to be commended," said Mayor Thomas Koch after the ceremony. "Their selflessness to help without consideration for their own safety was heroic."

6-Year-Old Treats Police To Coffee, Pastries

By Sgt. KARYN BARKAS
Quincy Police Department

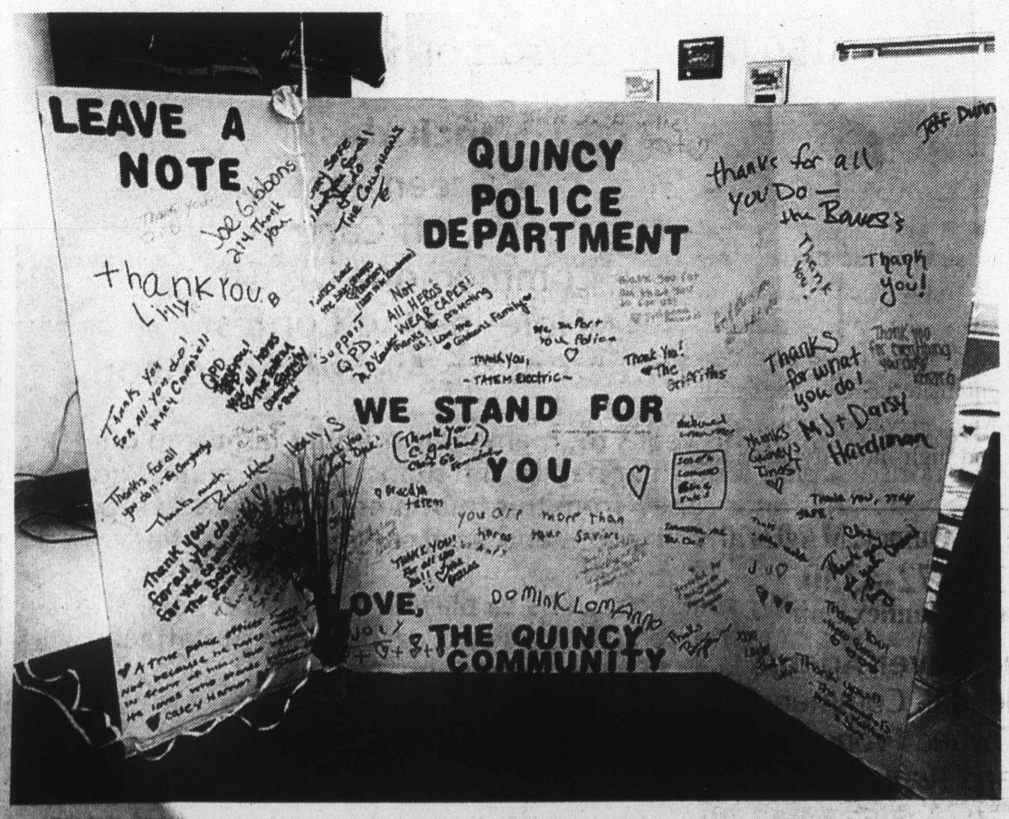

Six-year-old Joey Gibbons recently treated the Quincy Police Department's overnight shift and day shift to coffee, pastries, and egg sandwiches!

Joey used the $600 in proceeds from a lemonade stand that he recently held to support the Quincy police.

It's been a difficult few months for officers across the state, and we truly appreciate the support. Thank you to Joey, his family, and everyone who stopped by his stand.

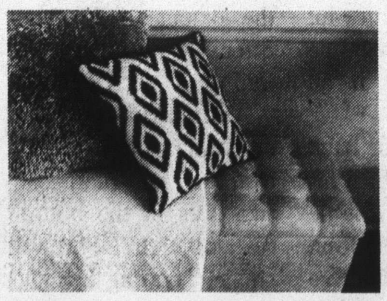

Chief Paul Keenan had a little surprise for Joey as well. After giving roll call with Sgt. Brian Flaherty, Joey met a canine puppy-in-training, toured the station, and checked out the motorcycles and SWAT gear. The morning ended with a ride on the police boat.

We hope he enjoyed this morning as much as we did.

POSTERBOARD with messages of support for the Quincy Police Department was presented to officers by Joey Gibbons during his visit to the police station Aug. 1. Joey bought the officers coffee and pastries using funds from a lemonade stand he organized.

City Seeks Input On Street, Sidewalk Improvements

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials are seeking feedback from residents on ways to make Quincy's roads and sidewalks safer and more efficient for drivers, cyclists, pedestrians and public transit riders alike.

Residents had a chance to attend three forums on street and sidewalk improvements in recent days. Feedback can still be submitted online using a program called WikiMapping, which allows residents to comment anonymously with their concerns. The map Quincy officials are using as part of the process can be found by going to the city's website, quincyma.gov.

City officials are gathering the feedback as they prepare to apply for funding from the state's Complete Streets program in the fall. The Complete Streets program, administered by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, is meant to ensure roadways are designed to serve all users, said Chris Cassani, the director of the city's traffic department.

"As the city gets busier and busier because we are in the middle of this economic boom – there is a lot of development – you want to make sure that no one is being left behind and to the greatest degree possible that the roads are being designed so that they're as welcoming as they can be," Cassani said at a forum held Monday afternoon in the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The purpose of the forums and the online map is to help officials come up with a prioritization plan as the city prepares to seek funding. Scores of comments have already been left on the map, and feedback will be accepted for the next few weeks.

"We've gotten dozens and dozens and dozens of ideas from people, which has been really helpful for us, because we generally, in our department, have an idea of areas where we know we need to make some improvements," Cassani said.

"But we don't experience the road in the same way that everyone else does. Where I live in Quincy is not where you folks live, so I deal with different things than you, and having your input is really helpful."

The city plans to apply for Complete Streets funds from the state by Oct. 1, said William Scully, a vice president with Green International Affiliates, an engineering firm working with Quincy on its application.

Communities can receive up to $400,000 annually through the program and MassDOT has awarded more than $30 million in Complete Streets funding since it launched in late 2016, Scully said.

Engineers with Green International Affiliates drove and walked along more than 45 streets across the city as part of the application process. Somaye Dovirani, an engineer with the company, presented an overview of findings made during those surveys.

The findings included below-average sidewalk conditions, narrow walking space on sidewalks, missing Americans with Disabilities Act-compliant ramps, missing crosswalks, pedestrian signals that were not working or non compliant with the ADA, bus stops without amenities, and a lack of bike lanes outside of Quincy Center and parts of Adams Street.

Jayson Gauvin, an engineer with the company, provided an overview of possible improvements that could be funded by the MassDOT program. They include new bike lanes, protected bike tracks, share-the-road arrows, bump outs to shorten the distance pedestrians need to walk to cross the road, parklets, crosswalks made of different material than the roadway, elevated crosswalks, and high-intensity activated crosswalk (HAWK) beacons, like those installed on Hancock Street in Quincy Center in recent years.

Sen. John Keenan said residents have voiced concerns about the HAWK beacon in front of Presidents Place. Pedestrians, he explained, sometimes try to cross the road when they only have a handful of seconds left on the countdown clock, and can't always be seen by northbound drivers, who are allowed to continue through the crosswalk after stopping because they have a flashing red light at that point.

"People come quickly from the train station, they see that they have seven seconds left, they think the light is still red and they go across even though it's flashing," Keenan said. "People there don't see them."

Gauvin said HAWK beacons are still relatively new, and the increased use of them will require education campaigns. Cassani said the original informational signage installed around those crosswalks could be tweaked to inform drivers they need to stop on flashing red before proceeding.

Mary Jane McGoey said she was concerned about intersections where drivers and pedestrians are both allowed to cross at the same time.

"I just wait until I don't see cars coming in either

A Job Well Done

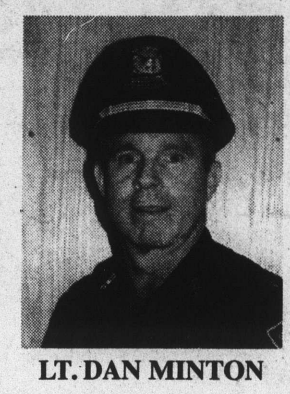

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, July 28, at approximately 1 a.m., Officer Eugene Smith was monitoring the area of 50 Revere Rd. in the parking lot of Kelly's Cellar bar as patrons left at closing time. At this time, the officer observed two men arguing and pushing each other next to a fence of a construction site adjacent to the parking lot.

As the officer closed in on the two men and gave verbal instruction to break up, they began to punch each other. Then one of the males pulled out a handgun and fired it in the direction of the man he was fighting. Officer Smith drew his firearm from his holster and ordered the male to drop his weapon and put his hands in view but the male did not comply. The officer radioed Quincy Police Communications that he needed assistance because a shot had been fired.

With the backdrop of sirens approaching, Officer Smith again ordered the male to drop his weapon and show his hands. The male, who had his back to the officer, kept his hands in front of him and out of view of the officer, who knew the male still had the gun. At that time, the male turned over his shoulder, looked at the officer and then ducked down behind a parked vehicle.

The officer again ordered the male to show his hands. The male suddenly popped up from behind the vehicle with his hands empty and stated, "I work here, I work here!" The male was ordered to lie down on the ground with his hands out to his sides, which is the first order he complied with. The male was immediately handcuffed.

LT. DAN MINTON

During this time approximately 20-30 patrons of Kelly's Cellar spilled out into the parking lot and began fighting. Multiple people were punching and kicking which resulted in the door of Kelly's Cellar being shattered. Officer Sean Fitzgerald arrived on scene and monitored the male who was handcuffed while Officer Smith attempted to intervene in the large fights happening in front of the bar. With numerous cruisers pulling into the parking lot with sirens blaring and blue lights flashing, the fight ended and everyone involved ran in separate directions.

A search was conducted for the missing handgun and moments later Officer McNeil was able to locate the handgun on top of the passenger side rear tire of the vehicle the male hid behind. The firearm, a Glock 27 .40 caliber pistol was loaded with 9 round magazine. There were eight live rounds in the magazine, and one empty shell casing which had been lodged in the ejection port of the pistol resulting in a "stovepipe" malfunction. The firearm was photographed on a department iPad and brought back to the station to be logged as evidence.

After finding the firearm, Officer Smith spoke with the male and demanded to see his license to carry a firearm. The male stated that he did not have a license to carry a firearm, so the 32-year-old Weymouth resident was placed under arrest for possession of a firearm without a permit and discharging a firearm within 500 feet of a dwelling.

Sgt. Dennis Keenan had the firearm's serial number checked through CJIS and discovered that the firearm was reported stolen in Weymouth, so he was also charged with receiving stolen property less than $1,200.

Nice Work!

OBITUARIES

Patricia C. McLaughlin

PATRICIA C. McLAUGHLIN

A funeral Mass for Patricia C. (Fahey) McLaughlin, of Humarock, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church, Boston.

Mrs. McLaughlin died peacefully Aug. 2 surrounded by her loving family at home.

Her family was the focal point of Mrs. McLaughlin's life. Married to her adoring husband for 52 years they shared an amazing life together filled with fun and adventure. Her husband worked with the symphony and they were fortunate to literally travel and shop around the world. Their children and grandchildren were loved and cherished.

Mrs. McLaughlin was a longtime member of the St. Ann's Parish of Wollaston Marianne's Group and helped with the annual bazaar. Patricia will be remembered for her strength, loyalty, friendship and having the ability to turn any moment into a celebration.

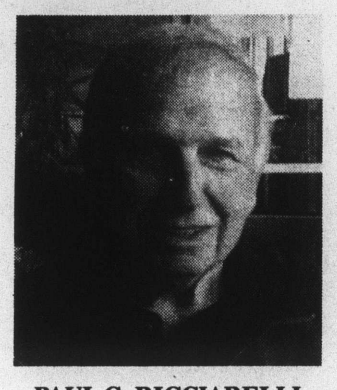

Beloved wife of Raymond M. McLaughlin, Sr, of Humarock. Loving mother of Raymond M. McLaughlin, Jr. and his wife Ellie of Marshfield, Kristine M. Headrick and her husband Brandon of Marshfield, and the late Mark M. McLaughlin. Mother-in-law to Karen McLaughlin of Quincy. Cherished sister to Maureen Duff and Edwin Medbury of Hanson, and the late Robert Devine, Ted Devine, and Kevin Fahey. Nana to Michelle, Keighley, Liam, Patrick and Kevin the Dog. Beloved sister-in-law of Sheila Fahey and the late Penny Devine. Also survived by many nieces, nephews, and close friends.

Interment at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

In lieu of flowers, please support your local Marshall's and Christmas Tree Shop in Mrs. McLaughlin's memory. They will miss her business.

Paul G. Ricciarelli, 86

PAUL G. RICCIARELLI

Funeral services for Paul G. Ricciarelli, age 86, of Holbrook, formerly of Braintree and Quincy, were held Tuesday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy, followed by Military Honors.

Mr. Ricciarelli died peacefully Aug. 3 at Tufts Medical Center, in the comfort of his loving family.

He was born to the late Frank and Vera (DiBona) Ricciarelli in Quincy, where he was raised and educated. He was a graduate of Quincy High School. Paul had lived in Holbrook for four years, previously in Braintree for over fifty years.

Mr. Ricciarelli was employed for over forty years at Boston Gear Works, first as a machinist and later as a draftsman and sales representative. A hard-working man, Mr. Ricciarelli was also the well-known owner of the former Colette's Diner in Braintree and the former 536 Bar & Grill in Quincy for over thirty years.

Mr. Ricciarelli proudly served in the U.S. Army during the Korean War and received the Korean Service Medal. He was an avid golfer and member of the Ponkapoag Golf Club in Canton and also enjoyed bowling. He was a longtime member of the Weymouth Lodge of Elks.

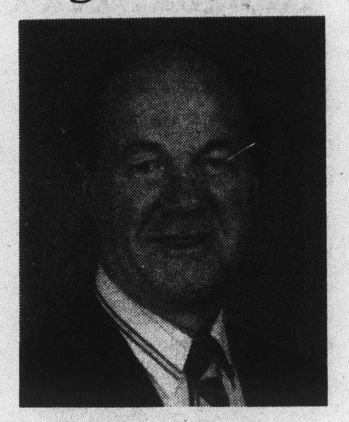

Most of all, Mr. Ricciarelli was dedicated to his family and especially to his cherished grandchildren and great-grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

Beloved husband of the late Colette B. (Frechette) Ricciarelli. Devoted father of Lynn M. Groleau of Quincy, Tammy A. Murphy and her husband Brian of Buzzards Bay, the late Paul G. Ricciarelli, Jr., and the late Steven Ricciarelli and his wife Linda of Scituate. Loving grandfather of eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Dear brother of Peter Ricciarelli of Florida, Michael Ricciarelli of Scituate, and the late Ronald Ricciarelli. He is also survived by many nieces, nephews, and cousins.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701-1803.

Pasquale A. Morganelli, 90

PASQUALE A. MORGANELLI

A funeral Mass for Pasquale Antonio Morganelli, 90, a longtime resident of Quincy, was celebrated Aug. 4 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Morganelli died July 29 at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, he was a son of the late Orazio A. and Susan M. (Morganelli) Morganelli.

Mr. Morganelli earned his BS in teaching from Fitchburg State College, and went on to join the United States Navy in 1945 as an apprentice seaman during WWII, and later as seaman first class until 1951. In 1954, he enlisted in the Army Reserve, with the rank of sergeant, and was assigned to the 418th Engineer Aviation Brigade. During this assignment, he was promoted to master sergeant, and received a commission as a warrant officer while serving with the Army Corps of Engineers in 1958.

He completed courses at several Army schools, and held many assignments in the engineers, adjutant general corps and the criminal investigation division. Mr. Morganelli worked for many years with the Boston office of the Defense Logistics Agency of the Defense Contract Administration, first as a staff engineer, and later on as the program manager.

Mr. Morganelli was the beloved husband of 45 years of Gail N. (Lindsay) Morganelli. Devoted father of Kathleen Downey of San Francisco, CA, Patrick Morganelli and his wife Kristen of Norfolk, Lee Morganelli of Quincy, and Lance Morganelli and his wife Alexis of Mansfield. Loving grandfather of Mia Rose and David Patrick Morganelli, and Colleen Morgan and Bethany Joy Downey. Brother of Rose Bingamon of East Braintree, and the late Orazio D. Morganelli, Lil Ogles, and Mary MacDonald. Also survived by many nieces and nephews, and his lifelong friends, Charlie Talocci and John Madek.

Mr. Morganelli was a meticulous gardener at his Quincy home, and was an excellent harmonica player. He was a Chinese checkers champion, and enjoyed spending many hours playing the game with Gail.

Interment with Military Honors at Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to American Heart Association, P.O. Box 417005, Boston, MA 02241-7005.

In Memory of Allan M. Dunne

May 16, 1999 - August 7, 2017

Every time I think of you it makes me want to cry.
Every time I dream of you it makes me want to die.
Never in a million years did I think that you'd be gone.
You meant everything to me. It's hard to carry on.
Each hour and day I try not to cry, but what am I to do?
I hate to face each coming day without your love and you.
-Rachel

Joan M. O'Leary, 52

Funeral services for Joan M. O'Leary, 52, of Quincy were private.

Ms. O'Leary died unexpectedly July 29.

Daughter of Joan O'Leary of Quincy and John O'Leary of Jamaica Plain, she was the beloved sister of Karen Granahan and her husband Michael of Hanover, Susan Haidul and her husband Joseph of Hanover, Patricia O'Leary of Randolph and John O'Leary and his wife Terri of Marshfield; aunt to Colleen Granahan and Stephanie Husak and many other nieces and nephews. A special mention to Walli, Kittery and Josie.

Ms. O'Leary worked as a preschool teacher and in retail. She was an avid sports fan, a shopaholic (as her family lovingly teased her), and devoted animal lover. She walked her talk and was loved by many. Her kindness and gentleness will be sorely missed.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Animal Umbrella, P.O. Box 2675, Acton, MA 01720-6675.

Kathleen A. Daly, 80

KATHLEEN A. DALY

A funeral Mass for Kathleen A. Daly, age 80, was celebrated Aug. 3 in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Ms. Daly died Aug. 1 at the Pat Roche Hospice House in Hingham.

Born in Boston, she was raised in Milton and graduated from Milton High School Class of 1955 and was a longtime resident of Quincy. She was a longtime administrative assistant for the Howley family of the Wilson-Tisdale Company for the Boston Globe for many years before retiring in 1999. She enjoyed knitting, sewing, especially Irish step dresses, crafting, traveling and reading the Boston Globe every day.

Daughter of the late Joseph E. Daly and the late Elizabeth Daly. Survived by her Goddaughter Joanna Newton and her husband David and their children Sarah and Jack of Braintree. Dear friend of the late Justine Mallahan and her children Michelle Gasbarro and Justin Mallahan and Michelle's children Danielle, Michael and Devon Gasbarro. Cousin of Marylin Weber of Chicago, Illinois and the late James Daly and his wife Betty.

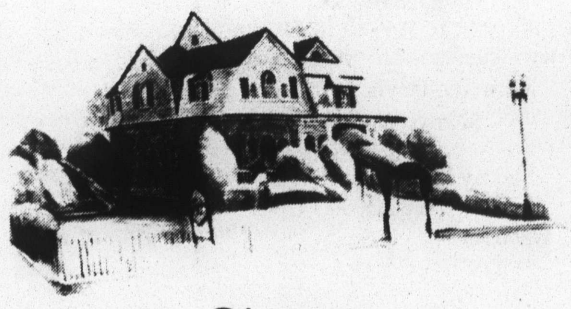

Private interment.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to the Pat Roche Hospice House, 86 Turkey Hill Lane, Hingham, MA 02043.

Hancock-Adams Common Dedication Sept. 8

Mayor Thomas Koch announces the city will formally dedicate its long-envisioned civic space at the heart of downtown, the Hancock-Adams Common, in a ceremony at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday Sept. 8 featuring Gov. Charlie Baker and Pulitzer Prize-winning historian David McCullough.

The ceremony will be capped by the public unveiling of monument-scale statues of John Adams and John Hancock, native sons who left an immeasurable mark on American history. The ceremony will also be the first opportunity for the public to enjoy the park, created on what was once a four-lane road separating the historic First Parish Church and the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall).

The statue of Hancock, the Commonwealth's first governor, will be unveiled by Gov. Baker while McCullough, whose masterpiece biography of Adams recast the second president as among the nation's most important founders and later was made into an acclaimed HBO miniseries, will unveil the statues.

"It is beyond time that these great patriots are honored in a way that truly befits the role they played in our nation's history," Koch said in a press release sent out by his office Tuesday. "The Hancock-Adams Common is an opportunity for the community, visitors and future generations to appreciate the City of Quincy's historic past while at the same time creating a vibrant new civic space for our downtown."

The park, which includes more than 30 mature new trees, public gathering spaces, and two major water features, was funded entirely through state grants and the City's hotel room tax. A variation of the concept – eliminating the traffic in front of the church where the Adams presidents and their wives are buried in favor of a park – has been part of the City's downtown vision for decades.

The statues will be on a scale of national monuments dedicated to these great American patriots and historic revolutionaries, John Hancock and John Adams, who were both Quincy natives. The City of Presidents is the birthplace of President John Adams, President John Quincy Adams and President of the Second Continental Congress John Hancock.

Quincy, known as "The City of Presidents," stands as one of the only cities to invest in such a display of tribute honoring these men and their spirit for the future.

"The City of Quincy stands on the foundation of two of the leading pillars of our U.S. history's early settlement." Koch said. "I invite everyone to enjoy this historic celebration as a community rich in history with a vision for our future generations."

direction, I don't pay attention to the lights, and then I run across as fast as a I can," she said. "Let's just say I'm assuming it's red on both sides, I can't tell you how many times I would have been hit."

Cassani said such crossings, known as concurrent crossings, are common in cities like Boston and New York and reduce the wait time for pedestrians.

"Making pedestrians have to wait less for the sign to come up sometimes does mean that you allow concurrent phases. That means I can cross as a pedestrian as a driver may be able to take a right or be on the through [lane]," Cassani said.

John O'Brien said he was concerned about the MBTA's proposal to move the busway at the Quincy Center station to the Burgin Parkway side of the facility as part of the plan to rebuild the commuter hub. O'Brien said he was concerned because traffic on Dimmock Street is already bad.

"Are we going to have a word in that or anything like that?" O'Brien said.

The T, Cassani said, is considering doing so to remove some buses from the stretch of Hancock Street in Quincy Center in front of the station.

"That's a concept right now," he said. "I'm not sure where it stands beyond that."

'Secretary Of The Interior'
Dining Room Ideas

I'm moving to my first home soon and want a modern farmhouse look. Can you give me some ideas for a dining room in a newly constructed condo? June

Your first home – how exciting!

Don't be hung up on the fact that you live in a new condo; make it your own so embrace the modern farmhouse style throughout your home.

A chic modern farmhouse can lean toward rustic, cottage, flea-market or even mid-century or contemporary design or a combination of multiple styles of pulled together pieces with history or personality. Eclectic, casual, and streamlined are the hallmarks of this style and its dining room décor is no exception.

Whether you like polished or distressed, choose mix and match furniture and furniture finishes – painted, stained, wood, metal, and upholstered. For example, try a dark stained wood table top with metal legs surrounded by a painted bench on one side and upholstered side chairs on the other or mix and match different chairs of the same color family. Add a buffet or hutch that repeats one of the finishes, preferably one of the dominant ones.

Window treatments can be absent all together or fashioned from a neutral solid or from subtle-colored patterns where textures and hand-sewn choices rule.

For room color, neutral paint or wallpaper in cream or a light gray are popular but add pops of quiet, not bold, color in rugs, artwork, table linens, floral arrangements and other accessories.

Oops, I almost forgot about the "S" word. You can't go wrong with shiplap on the walls. Instead of hanging it on all four walls, try one focal wall or as a wainscoting. You can leave it natural, sparingly dry-brush on a pale color, or paint it right out. You could even purchase a flooring product for the walls or, believe it or not, shiplap wallpaper is available in several colors too.

PS. I am teaching a new workshop on Modern Farmhouse Design at Braintree Community Continuing education this fall, the schedule will be posted on their website (and mine) mid-month.

Hancock/Adams Common & Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of: August 5th, 2018

- THERE WILL BE A LOT OF CONSTRUCTION ACITIVITIES TAKING PLACE ON THE ROADS THIS WEEK AROUND THE OLD HANCOCK PARKING LOT (Hancock Street, Cottage Avenue, Revere Road and Dennis Ryan Parkway). DRIVE CAREFULLY AS CONSTRUCTION VEHICLES AND WORKERS WILL BE WORKING.

- Sewer work will be taking place on Hancock Street from 7am to 3:30pm for future connections to the proposed building at 1500 Hancock Street. There will be no lane closures for this operation.

- Test pits will be performed on Cottage Avenue from 7am to 3:30pm to determine location of underground utilities for the newly proposed sewer, drain and water utilities. Cottage Avenue will reopen at the end of the shift.

- Deep sewer work will take place on Dennis Ryan Parkway from McGrath Highway/Revere Road to just before the courthouse parking lot. This work will take place at night from 8pm to 6am. This work is expected to last 3 to 4 weeks. THE PARKING LOT AT THE COURTHOUSE WILL BE OPEN FOR PARKING DURING THIS WORK.

- There will be road work to create a lane shift on Revere Road between Dennis Ryan Parkway and Hancock Street. This work is expected to take 3 to 4 weeks to help facilitate the work being done for the new buildings and City Garage on the Hancock Lot parcel. The lane shifts once completed will have two lanes in both directions and will be in place until the projects are completed.

Robert Noble, WWII Veteran, Ex-POW, Passes Away

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Robert Noble of Quincy, an Army World War II veteran and ex-Prisoner of War who never forgot his fellow veterans, passed away unexpectedly Tuesday. He was 93 years old.

Mr. Noble was a beloved community figure and supported veterans events and organizations in Quincy. He was among the veterans who took part in the annual fishing outing for disabled veterans in Houghs Neck last month.

He was the loving husband of the late Gloria Noble who passed away Oct. 1, 2013. They were married 63 years.

Mr. Noble is survived by his four children: Robert Noble, Jr. and his wife Donna of Quincy; Alicia Gardner and the late William Gardner of Quincy; Nancy Noble and her husband Charles McLaughlin of Harwich; and Andrea White and her husband, Roger White, of Quincy.

On Dec. 16, 1944, Mr. Noble was a private first class in the Army infantry when he was captured in Alsace-Lorraine, France, during the Battle of the Bulge. He was two days shy of his 19th birthday.

He was liberated 122 days later, on April 16, 1945.

But before he was freed he endured an ordeal.

Bob was forced to dig trenches in frozen ground for anti-aircraft emplacements. One day, a fighter aircraft shot its 50-caliber machine guns near Bob's group. He took cover in a trench. Bullets came close but did not harm him.

He also spent four days in a box car with another 120 men. The POWs were let out of the car only once.

During his time as a prisoner, Bob suffered frostbite in both feet. He lost 35 pounds off his 135-pound frame.

He tried to take it in stride.

"My attitude was that I took whatever came and did the best that I could and whatever happened, happened. There wasn't anything I could change so I rolled with the punches," he said in an interview in November, 2011.

He was a very proud veteran and very proud ex-POW.

WORLD WAR II veteran and ex-POW Robert Noble is joined by his children after placing a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns on April 9, 2015 at Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia. From left: daughter Andrea White, daughter Nancy Noble, Mr. Noble, Major General Jeffrey Buchanan, commanding officer, U.S. Military District of Washington, D.C.; son Robert Noble, Jr. and daughter Alicia Gardner. Mr. Noble passed away unexpectedly Tuesday. He was 93.

"I am glad that I am a veteran," he said in that interview. "I'm glad I enlisted and did my duty at that time."

He became a strong advocate for the American Ex-Prisoners of War Organization and served as its state commander for several years.

Three years ago, Mr. Noble was honored to present a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia. He selected April 9 to present the wreath – National Former POW Recognition Day.

Mr. Noble saluted as a bugler from the United States Army Band "Pershing's Own" played taps. On Bob's left was Maj. Gen. Jeffrey Buchanan, commanding officer, U.S. Army Military District of Washington. On his right two of his four children: daughter Alicia Gardner and son, Robert, Jr. Each placed their right hands over their hearts.

Among the several hundred visitors to the Tomb watching from the steps of the Memorial Amphitheater were nearly three dozen more family and friends who had traveled from Quincy to support Bob and witness this solemn and moving ceremony.

"I feel it was not for me alone," Mr. Noble said after the ceremony. "I was a symbol for all World War II veterans and Ex-POWs. I had all my friends in mind and all POWs from all the wars on my mind when I placed the wreath and bowed to meditate before the playing of Taps."

Mr. Noble attended Boston College on the GI Bill that also helped him purchase his first home. A retired engineer at a screw machine company, Bob worked as a freelance photographer for The Quincy Sun for many years.

He and Gloria were honored by many community organizations for their dedicated service including The Quincy Sun that presented the husband-and-wife team paper's Citizen of the Year Award.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy. Information about services will be posted on The Quincy Sun website (www.TheQuincySun.com) when available.

Amanda Murphy 'Read To Ride' Bicycle Winner

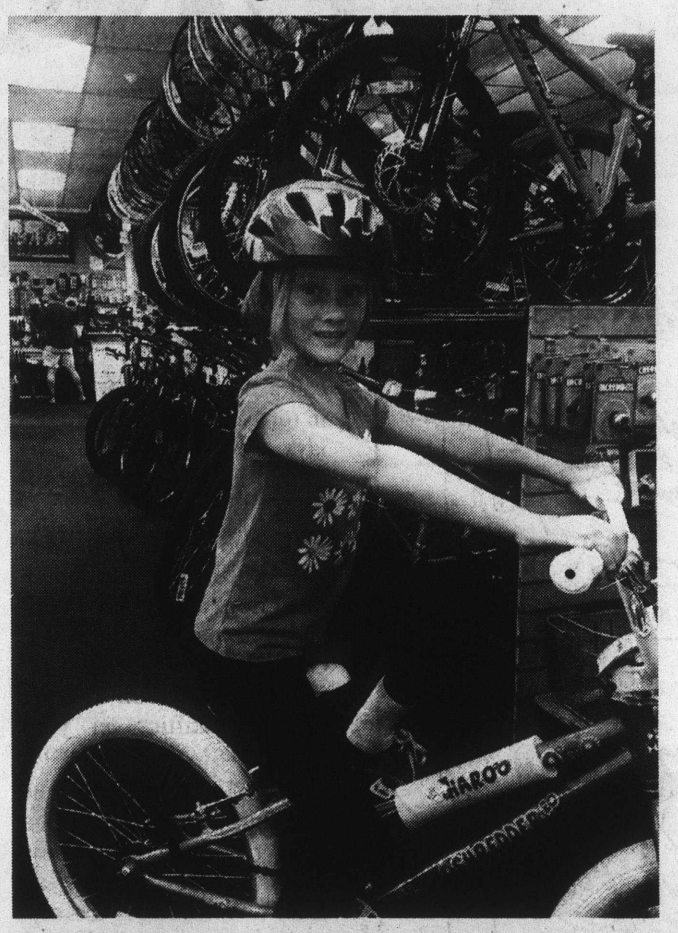

Amanda Murphy, 7, of Quincy, was a recent winner of a bicycle in Dependable Cleaners' "Read to Ride" summer reading contest.

A student at Clifford Marshall School in Quincy, Amanda was thrilled to receive a brand new bicycle, which she chose at The Bicycle Link in Weymouth, a partner in the program.

"Amanda has been riding a hand-me-down bike that the chain kept falling off of," her mother Laura Murphy said. "She is sooo excited to have a new bike like her sisters as her sister won 'Read to Ride' two years ago. Thanks to all the people and companies that support this program."

Besides being an avid reader, Amanda enjoys building with castles and cabins with LEGOs, swimming and art projects involving glue and cut-out construction. Her favorite book read this summer was "Ten Little Ladybugs by Melanie Gerth and as a family, the Murphys are reading "Little House in the Big Woods" by Laura Ingalls Wilder.

"Read to Ride" encourages summertime reading in ages 5 to 15, who have the opportunity to win a bicycle and other prizes. Entry forms are filled out for each book read and submitted to any Dependable Cleaners store or given to a delivery driver. Names are drawn at random each week; the more books read, the more chances there are to win. No purchase is necessary.

UMass Foundation Honors Attorney George Burke

The University of Massachusetts Foundation recently presented an award to Quincy attorney George "Trigger" Burke who has been the sole clerk of the foundation for more than 15 years.

The presentation was made at the Colonnade Hotel in Boston.

The UMass Hall of Fame is named after Burke, his basketball number is retired and he has sent 182 students from Quincy with a $1,000 scholarship each year to attend the University of Massachusetts.

Big Thanks From Morrisette Baseball Program

READERS FORUM

The Morrisette Baseball program would like to say thank you to any and all volunteers that helped with this past week's state tournament. It was a huge success.

The biggest thanks goes to Mayor Koch and the Park Department. When we sat with them back in February, they told us they would make sure Adams was in the best condition and they delivered.

The park department workers busted their butts to make sure Adams Field felt like Fenway Park. New cages, new double barrel bullpens, new clay for home plate and the pitcher's mound. And perfectly maintained. We set high expectations, and they went above and beyond. Can't say thank you enough to the field workers. They get a bad wrap sometimes, not from me.

Doug Concannon deserves a round of applause, too. Doug was in charge of the ad book and raising money. As you know everything cost money, and without the funds to cover the expenses you would be in trouble. He took the reins and never looked back.

Joe Brill for putting together a great raffle at our fundraiser. Spenser Smith for being the social media guru/fill in announcer/all around everything. Pete Doherty and John Norton for being an extra set of eyes and ears. Bob "Bats 7" for helping out with everything. Sullivan's, Carberry's, Kelly's all big helps.

My family for running the best concession stand ever.

And last but not least, the team. Between coaches and players, everyone stepped up. I have the best coaching staff around: Glen Misho, John Folino, Pat Bryan. And the glue that holds it together Ray Ekbom. If you came down you saw the kids give everything they had every night.

We made it all the way until the final day and at some point in time in the tourney beat the two teams that played for the championship. Proud is an understatement. Honored to have coached these kids.

'Til next year..... which starts in a few weeks with fall ball. Details to follow.

THANK YOU AGAIN TO ALL.

Quincy College Surgical Technology Program Receives ARC/STSA Continued Accreditation

The Quincy College Surgical Technology Program has received continued accreditation from the Accreditation Review Council on Education in Surgical Technology and Surgical Assisting (ARC/STSA)

ARC/STSA conducted a site visit in November of 2017 and released their findings in the Spring of 2018 concluding that Quincy College's Surgical Technology Program exceeded all accreditation standards.

Beyond the classroom, Quincy College has also successfully transitioned students to the workforce as certified professionals. Over 90 percent of the 2017-2018 graduating cohort of Surgical Technology students were offered full-time employment in the Surgical Technology field prior to graduation.

"The continued accreditation of the ARC/STSA re-affirms Quincy College's effort in serving our Surgical Technology students and ensuring that matriculating Quincy College students are employable professionals and excellent employees," said Natalie Fulford, Quincy College Program Director for Surgical Technology.

The accreditation visit included a thorough review of program goals, student outcome, the program's 10-person advisory board, budget, clinical affiliates, and more. The organization toured Quincy College's Quincy Campus reviewing campus facilities, lab space/storage space, student services, and conducted a thorough curriculum review.

"Continuing accreditation of the Quincy College Surgical Technology Program is critical to the health of our program," Fulford said. "The ARC/STSA accreditation visit is a valuable, self-reflective opportunity for the Quincy College Surgical Technology program to ensure that our program is exceeding expectations.

"We are pleased to report that the ARC/STSA applauded Quincy College's Surgical Technology Program and found no areas of concern."

Fulford added: "The ARC/STSA site visitor stated that in their over 10 years of experience, this is only the second time that they had a site visit with no issues identified. "

The ARC/STSA also held in-person interviews with the 2017-2018 Quincy College Surgical Technology students, clinical affiliates, advisory board members, and members of the Quincy College Surgical Technology Program.

Quincy College Surgical Technology program's successful outcomes can be traced to a revitalization effort starting in 2006 continuing to today. In all areas where the Surgical Technology program has been benchmarked, in the classroom, in clinical placement, and in certification exams, Quincy College has meet or exceeded expectations.

The updates to the Quincy College Surgical Technology Program have been substantive. The program implemented web based online tools, the use of iPads and online learning tools, online training and certification testing preparation for students. The Program also steamlined policies, mirroring the expectations of future employers performance goals and ensured that incoming Quincy College Surgical Technology students were informed of the rigorous academic and professional expectations of the program.

"We've built very strong relationships with our clinical affiliates with Quincy College students conducting their clinical education at some of our nation's leading hospitals including Brigham and Women's Hospital, Massachusetts General Hospital, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical, and Tufts Medical Center, to name a few," Fulford said. "Hospitals in the region come to Quincy College seeking our students as employees which speaks to not only the caliber of our students and the tenure of our faculty but our program's reputation as a leader in the South Shore for qualified surgical technology assistants."

Over the last 10 years, Quincy College's Surgical Technology program is in high demand as one of the only programs located on the South Shore. The program waitlist has grown year on year for the last five years.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience with those who don't keep up with you can cause resistance, which, in turn, can lead to more delays. Best to be helpful and supportive if you want results.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise announcement from a colleague could put you on the defensive. Gather your facts and respond. You'll soon find the situation shifting in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Time spent away from a project pays off with a new awareness of options you hadn't considered before. Weigh them carefully before deciding which to choose.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Consider confronting that personal conflict while there's still time to work things out. A delay can cause more problems. A longtime colleague might offer to mediate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some emerging matters could impede the Lion's progress in completing an important project. Best advice: Deal with them now, before they can create costly delays.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your aspect continues to favor an expanding vista. This could be a good time to make a career move, and taking an out-of-town job could be a good way to do it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disruptive family disputes need to be settled so that everyone can move on. Avoid assuming this burden alone, though. Ask for -- no, demand -- help with this problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience is called for as you await word on an important workplace situation. A personal circumstance, however, could benefit by your taking immediate action.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't lose confidence in yourself. Those doubters are likely to back off if you demand they show solid proof why they think your ideas won't work.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A temporary setback might cause the usually sure-footed Goat some unsettling moments. But keep going. The path ahead gets easier as you move forward.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There's welcome news from the workplace. There also could be good news involving a relationship that has long held a special meaning for you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still need to cut some lingering ties to a situation that no longer has the appeal it once held. In the meantime, you can start to explore other opportunities.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of what's right can inspire others if you remember not to push too hard to make your case. Moderation works best for you.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- At last it's been confirmed, and we can tell you what Quentin Tarantino has planned for Oscar-winner Leonardo DiCaprio and three-time Oscar-nominee Brad Pitt in his film "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood." The story is about former Western series cowboy Rick Dalton (DiCaprio) and his best friend and longtime stunt double Cliff Booth (Pitt), set in 1969, with the Manson family murders as the backdrop for the story.

As a reporter covering the Hollywood scene when the Manson clan murdered actress Sharon Tate and her friends on Cielo Drive, I remember discos, clubs and restaurants shuttered because celebrities were crippled with fear. In fact, none of them left their homes for weeks until they found out who was behind it all. I chatted with Sharon Tate and Jay Sebring at The Factory the night before the murders and was visited the next week by the FBI, who wanted to know what we talked about.

Tarantino is pulling out all the stops to make this a big film about Hollywood. He's also cast Margot Robbie, Timothy Olyphant, Luke Perry, Dakota Fanning, Al Pacino, Emile Hirsch, Tim Roth and Nicholas Hammond, (original TV series "Spider-Man"). "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood" opens Aug. 19, 2019.

Hollywood is so fickle. Dwayne Johnson rode "Jumanji, Welcome to the Jungle" to just short of $1 billion at the box office and "Rampage" to $426 million, but because his latest release, "Skyscraper," came in third its first week, behind the animated "Hotel Transylvania 3" and "Ant-Man and the Wasp," with a mere $71.6 million (more than half its cost), they think he's off his game. When the kids are done watching their cartoons and superheroes, the rest of us will be thrilled by "The Rock" climbing his skyscraper. He's not worried though; he's already moved on to filming "Jungle Cruise" with Emily Blunt, Paul Giamatti and Jack Whitehall for an October 2019 release.

Harrison Ford must have been disappointed when "Indiana Jones 5" was put off for two years, but he got over it quick by signing to drive a dog sled in the remake of Jack London's "The Call of the Wild," which was most memorably made with Oscar-winners Clark Gable (1935) and Charlton Heston (1972). Maybe playing a wilderness prospector in the Yukon will finally earn Harrison Ford an Oscar, as it did for Leonardo DiCaprio in "The Revenant" (2015).

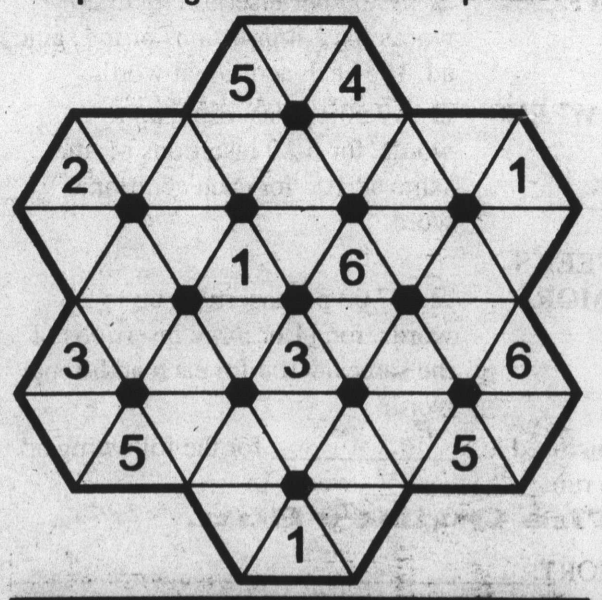

Even though Clint Eastwood didn't get to direct Bradley Cooper in "A Star Is Born" (which Cooper directed and starred in himself), he'll direct Cooper in the crime drama "The Mule," with Laurence Fishburne and Dianne Wiest. Hopefully Bradley isn't playing the title role!

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Campbell Kids --- The googly eyes announce that the designer of the dolls was talented artist Grace Drayton (1887-1936). Born Grace Gebbie, she married Theodore Wiederseim in 1900. They divorced in 1911 -- the same year she married William Drayton. She divorced Grayton in 1923 but kept his name. She illustrated children's books, ads, magazine covers, comics like "Dolly Dingle" or "Dolly Drake," and later music boxes, limited-edition plates, valentines and paper dolls.

Her best-known art is the "Campbell Kids." She drew the pictures for the Campbell Soup ads for many years. The googly-eyed children were used for doorstops, valentines and other projects. These four pictured dolls are all dressed up for a formal party, probably a wedding in the family. They were made in about 1916, and were created using hard composition, swivel heads, sculpted hair and jointed arms by Ideal Toy Co. The set sold for $6,880 at a Theriault auction in Indianapolis.

Q: Are old Jantzen bathing suits collectible? Sellable?

A: Carl Jantzen and John and Roy Zehntgbauer started the Portland Knitting Co. in 1910 in Oregon to make hosiery and sweaters. So when they were asked to make a knit wool bathing suit for a rowing team, they tried. By 1918 their company was called the Jantzen Knitting Mills, and they were making and licensing bathing suits sold all over the world. They made stylish suits that were nationally advertised, and promoted swimming events. The diving girl logo was created in 1920. All types of clothing made for sports have become collectible, and many serious fashion collections that started with designer gowns now have a division for sneakers and sports uniforms. A vintage swimsuit could sell for $25 to $50.

Q: I have a Cream of Wheat framed print that I think is from a magazine. It's signed Leslie Thrasher. Is it worth anything?

A: Charles Leslie Thrasher (1889-1936) was an American artist whose style has been compared to Norman Rockwell. He illustrated ads for Cream of Wheat, Chesterfield cigarettes, Kellogg's and other products, and he also did 23 magazine covers for The Saturday Evening Post and 360 covers for Liberty Magazine. Thrasher did illustrations for several Cream of Wheat ads, beginning about 1913. The paintings were popular with collectors and were reproduced. Most sell for about $10-$20.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was 18th-century French writer Sebastien Nicolas de Chamfort who made the following sage observation: "Conscience is a dog that does not stop us from passing but that we cannot prevent from barking."

* You might be surprised to learn that famed British author Aldous Huxley, best-known for his dystopian novel "Brave New World," was a consultant on Disney's 1951 animated film version of "Alice in Wonderland."

* If you bring to mind an image of John Lennon, more likely than not you'll see him in your mind's eye wearing a pair of round spectacles. In July 2007, a single pair of those iconic glasses was sold at auction for a whopping $2 million.

* The tongue of the alligator is fastened to the jaw all the way around. That's why you'll never see a gator stick out its tongue.

* You might be surprised to learn that the kilt originated not in Scotland, but in France.

* You probably know that certain species of snakes can grow to enormous size, with the longest specimens reaching upward of 30 feet in length and the heaviest weighing more than 400 pounds. Kind of makes you wonder what these monstrous serpents eat -- and you might be surprised. According to reports, a pet python named Houdini swallowed a queen-size electric blanket. Even more amazingly, after a two-hour operation, the snake lived!

* Those who track radio statistics say Led Zeppelin's "Stairway to Heaven" is the most-requested song in the United States -- and this despite the fact that it was never released as a single on this side of the Atlantic.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "Want to make sure that your kids stay on schedule and get the right amount of sleep? Keep the TV off in the morning. Limit TV (and computer/game) time in the hour before bedtime. This works in our family." -- R.G. in Georgia

* "I have lost more than 30 pounds in the past year. Every time I go down a dress size, I give away the clothes that are too big. It gives me added incentive to maintain the weight loss." -- J.H. in Arizona

* Back to school hack: Dry-erase markers work on glass. That means the bathroom mirror, your daughter's vanity, a photo frame or any other glass surface can be used to write notes on. Try chalk markers, too; they're vibrant and colorful, plus opaque enough to be seen with any background, and they clean up with water.

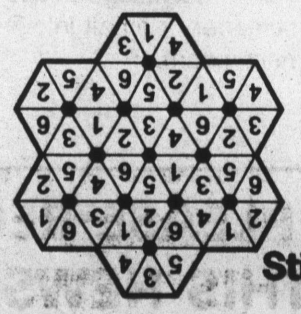

* "I help my kids save money by printing out a photo of their goal: Whether it's a bike, someplace they want to go or tickets to a concert, having the picture helps them to visualize what they're working toward. Often it makes the difference between spending money in the moment or using self-control to delay the gratification until they can get what they really want." -- E.S. in Washington

* Use a flowerpot of oiled sand to store your hand garden tools. The sand cleans and the oil lubricates and protects.

* According to the experts at Weber grills, to get your charcoal grill clean, you should preheat on high for 10-15 minutes. The heat will burn off any food bits left on the grates from your last cooking session. Then follow up with a stainless-steel brush on the grates and bowl. Happy grilling, folks!

Sen. Keenan Opposes Return Of Death Penalty

Legislator Unsure If Votes Exist To Re-Instate Capital Punishment For Those Convicted Of Killing Police Officers

By SCOTT JACKSON

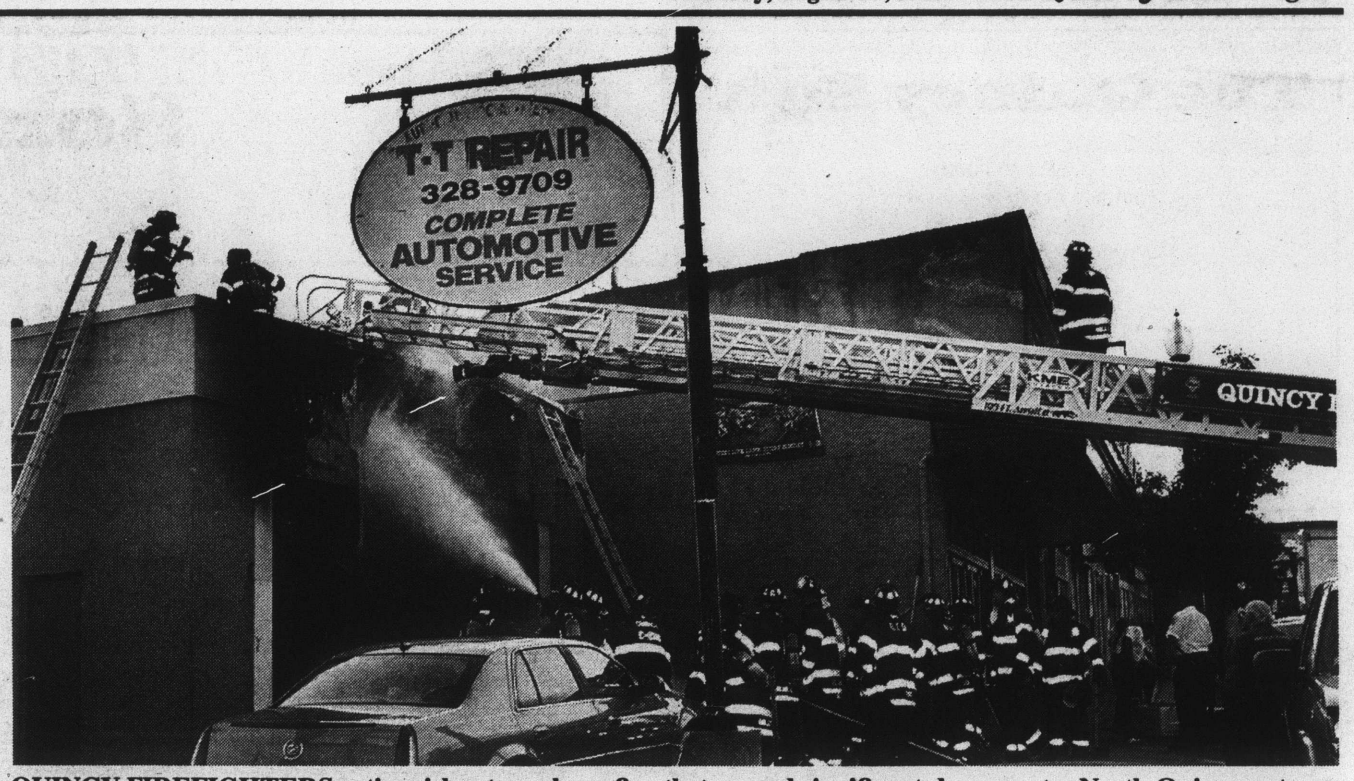

Sen. John Keenan opposes the re-instatement of capital punishment in Massachusetts for those convicted of killing police officers, and is unsure if there would be enough votes for such a measure to pass in the Legislature.

Gov. Charlie Baker has called for the return of the death penalty for those convicted of murdering police officers. The governor re-iterated his support for doing so following the July killing of Weymouth Sgt. Michael Chesna, who was shot ten times with his own gun after being struck in the head with a rock.

Keenan, who is the brother of Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan and whose grandfather, a Boston police officer, was shot in the line of duty, said he would not support re-instating the death penalty for those convicted of murdering police officers. The senator said he is opposed to capital punishment in general.

"I come from a long line of police officers and firefighters. My brother, as you know, is the chief here in Quincy. I don't know if you know, my grandfather was a Boston police officer – I never met him, he passed away before I was born – but he was shot in the line of duty and he was a Medal of Honor winner. My great-grandfather was also a Medal of Honor winner in the city of Boston. So I come from a long line of police officers, but I would not support the death penalty," Keenan said in a recent

Two-Alarm Fire Torches NQ Auto Repair Shop

By SCOTT JACKSON

A two-alarm fire caused "significant damage" at a North Quincy auto repair shop, said Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson.

The fire was reported shortly after 7 p.m. on Aug. 9 at T-T Repair, located at 431 Hancock St. Jackson said damage to the building was significant, and several cars on site were damaged as well.

No injuries were reported.

Firefighters remained on scene for more than two hours and were able to contain the conflagration to the auto shop, Jackson said. The deputy chief credited the firefighters for their efforts, given the density of the neighborhood and the day's hot and humid weather.

"These guys, they made it look easy," he said. "They did a really good job."

The fire started accidentally, Jackson said, as an employee was working on a vehicle.

"The guy was changing out a fuel pump and it ignited somehow," he said.

The Quincy Police Department closed off a section of Hancock Street for about two hours as firefighters battled the flames.

READY FOR A RESET?

Many people inherit jewelry with great sentimental value that they never wear because the pieces are either outdated or in a form that isn't easily worn. If this dilemma seems familiar, there is a way to rescue important jeweled items from vaults and dresser drawers and transform them into wearable pieces. Diamonds and other gemstones can be reset into an original piece of jewelry to give it new life. For instance, sapphires from rings can be reset into earrings or pendant pieces. Gemstones extracted from heirloom pieces can also be augmented with other gemstones to give them an entirely different look or shape. Resetting old stones reflects an ability to change with the times and embrace the future.

If you are contemplating turning previously worn but now-out-of-fashion jewelry into new exciting designs, you'll know you're in the right place when you walk through our doors at Rogers Jewelry. The wise shopper looks for the advice and guidance of those who can offer knowledge, experience, creative ideas, and the highest quality materials. That's exactly what you'll discover here at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center whether you're shopping for a completely new piece or a newly revitalized one. You can reach us at 617-773-3636.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Aug. 31, 1888, the first known victim of London serial killer "Jack the Ripper" is found murdered in the city's impoverished Whitechapel district. At least four more women were found murdered in similar fashion over the next few months. In 1892, with no leads found and no more murders recorded, the Jack the Ripper file was closed.

• On Sept. 1, 1928, Robert Pirsig, author of "Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance," is born. Despite being rejected by more than 120 publishing houses, his 1974 book became a cult classic, selling more than 4 million copies over the next 25 years.

• On Sept. 2, 1945, aboard the battleship USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay, Japan formally surrenders to the Allies, bringing an end to World War II.

• On Aug. 27, 1955, the first edition of "The Guinness Book of Records" is published in Great Britain. The book was intended to be given away for free in pubs to promote the Guinness brand; however, it became so popular that the Irish brewer started selling it.

• On Aug. 29, 1962, American poet Robert Frost leaves for the Soviet Union. The goodwill tour was sponsored by the U.S. State Department in an effort to thaw Cold War relations.

• On Aug. 30, 1983, U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Colonel Guion S. Bluford becomes the first African American to travel into space following lift off aboard the space shuttle Challenger. During their six days in space, the Challenger crew launched an Indian communications satellite.

• On Aug. 28, 1996, Charles, Prince of Wales and heir to the British throne, and his wife, Princess Diana, formally divorce. In 1981, nearly 1 billion television viewers in 74 countries tuned in to witness their marriage ceremony at St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Remembering Bob Noble

It was a few weeks ago when Bob Noble stopped by The Quincy Sun to say hello to us.

Bob was a frequent visitor and enjoyed stopping by the newspaper office.

We chatted a bit and then I walked him to his car that was parked outside the Crane Library.

"I can take it from here," Bob said, stopping at the traffic light and extending his hand for a handshake.

"Thanks Bob. We will get together soon," I told him.

But soon never came.

On Aug. 7, we got several calls that Bob had passed away unexpectedly that morning. He was 92 years old.

It was heart-breaking news. To many in the community, Bob was like a father figure. He had a calming presence and kind smile. Bob always had time to listen and talk. He'd do anything for anybody.

He was a beloved community figure and longtime activist who made our city better. A World War II veteran of the United States Army Air Corps, he personified the duty and sacrifice of "The Greatest Generation" and leaves a legacy of service not only to Quincy but to numerous veterans' organizations and causes throughout his life.

He was also an ex-POW who survived 122 days in captivity in a Nazi German war camp.

I had the privilege of knowing Bob for 30 years. He was a longtime freelance photographer for The Quincy Sun and a very good friend of my dad.

Bob was a dedicated photographer for us for many, many years. Sports, news, features, social events . . . Bob took photos at all of them. He was neat and organized, too. Delivering his photos – either printed out or later on a digital memory card – with captions already hand printed on lined yellow paper.

"I have some photos for you," he would say to Henry and me as we walked into the office.

More than some on most occasions. He took so many that we didn't know what to do with them some weeks. But Bob always told us "use what you can use. I just wanted to give you some options."

A consummate gentleman – considerate and conscientious – in every aspect of his life.

For me, there is no better example of what kind of man Bob Noble was than the day he placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery a few years ago.

For me the story begins one day in February, 2015. Bob called to tell me he had been selected to place the wreath in April. He wanted to stop by the office and give me all the details.

It was Saturday, Feb. 7 when Bob knocked on the door here. He came into my office and sat in Henry's rocking chair and told me all about the wreath. And then told me how much he missed my dad.

They were contemporaries. Henry was also a World War II veteran who served in the U.S. Navy on the USS Cogswell, a destroyer in the South Pacific. He passed away in February, 2009.

I told Bob that the day of his visit was the sixth anniversary of Henry's passing. And I knew what Henry would want me to do. Go to Arlington and take photos of him placing the wreath.

Bob's eyes welled up as did mine. He was touched and happy that my wife Amy and I would make the trip to experience the moment with him, his family and other friends.

Wreath day arrived two months later – April 9, 2015. The day was selected by Bob because it is National Former POW Recognition Day. He never forgot his fellow veterans.

The actual ceremony lasted a few minutes.

But it was much more than just a wreath laying.

ROBERT NOBLE
Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Bob Noble and his attention to detail – and constant consideration of others – made this occasion one for the ages.

First, the wreath itself. Bob selected a 30-inch deluxe wreath adorned with red carnations, daisies and one single yellow rose. Daises are the official flower of the National Former POW Organization because "daises don't tell."

The yellow rose – placed at the 3 p.m. position on the wreath – was selected by Bob in memory of his beloved wife and longtime companion, Gloria, who had passed away 18 months earlier on Oct. 1, 2013.

The weather was overcast but as presentation time approached, the skies brightened as if on cue.

Bob saluted as a bugler from the U.S. Army Band "Pershing's Own" played Taps. On his left was Major Gen. Jeffrey Buchanan, commanding officer, U.S. Military District of Washington, D.C. On Bob's right were two of his four children: daughter Alicia Gardner and son, Robert, Jr. Each placed their right hands over their hearts.

Bob's two other children – daughters Nancy Noble and Andrea White – joined about 40 family and friends in the viewing stand proudly looking on.

Bob placed the wreath on a stand and then bowed his head in solemn reflection. Then, a sudden but subtle gust of wind kissed the wreath. A red, white and blue ribbon fluttered momentarily. A red carnation near the yellow rose dropped to the cement below.

The beloved matriarch of the Noble family had made her presence known.

"Gloria's here," Bob said recalling the red carnation moment as family and friends had dinner that night at a Georgetown restaurant. "Everybody in the family said the same thing. There isn't a day that we're not together – still."

It was a beautiful exclamation mark on a perfectly proper and dignified afternoon.

Bob called the wreath-laying a tremendous honor. And besides Gloria, he had some other folks on his

That's A Good Kid: A Visit With Adam Saunders

By GRACIE WARREN

This week, I met up with a very special little boy named Adam Saunders, his brother Alexander and their mom Ashlee at Faxon Park.

Adam and his family just came back from a month-long trip to his father's home country, Myanmar. Adam attends Clifford Marshall School. His school, with the help of Principal Ahearn, agreed to host a clothing drive during the last week of school.

The family flew to Myanmar with 400 lbs. of clothes. Adam likes flying and he loves toy planes, he even brought one to the playground the day we met up.

For most of his vacation, they went to orphanages and schools to donate supplies. They also gave money, food and clothes to homeless people on the streets of all the villages they went through. Adam even got to ride an elephant while he was there.

Adam's mother Ashlee said,"Our family is so thankful to the Quincy community and most importantly The Clifford Marshall School, who helped us collect 400 pounds of clothing to be distributed to those in need in Myanmar. We traveled to the remote Shan Village in the Mon State to distribute clothes to 298 children, ranging in age infancy to 16 years old. Adam distributed clothing and five large bags of rice to 90 children living in a foster care home in the village of Yangon."

At 6 years old, Adam is a great example of the effect just one person's kindness can have on the world around them. Awesome job, Adam!

QCAN Thanks Quincy Delegation For Bill Support

Dear Editor:

Last month, our state legislature enacted a bill that will help Massachusetts lower its emissions of greenhouse gases and slow the climate change that has been causing or exacerbating devastating hurricanes in Texas, Florida, and Puerto Rico, record-breaking wildfires in the West, and sea level rise that contributed to the flooding from which we're still recovering here in Quincy.

Most notably, the new bill will allow the state Department of Energy Resources to double the amount of offshore wind energy procured for Massachusetts ratepayers compared to previous legislation. It also modestly accelerates the growth of renewable energy as a component of the electric power used by the typical Bay State consumer.

Quincy Climate Action Network would like to thank our statehouse delegation—Sen. John Keenan, and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, and Ronald Mariano—for supporting this useful legislation.

At the same time, however, we can't help noting that the new bill lacks the strength and scope of a Senate version that was watered down dramatically in conference committee. Unlike the Senate bill, the final bill fails to incentivize electric vehicle use; lift the cap on net metering that is impeding the growth of commercial solar operations; and strengthen efficiency standards for appliances. Most disappointingly, perhaps, the new bill doesn't move the state's electricity supply to 100 percent renewable until 2095, far beyond the lifespan of most of us. The Senate version, by contrast, would have gotten us to that crucial goal almost 50 years sooner!

In a hopeful sign, Marc Pacheco, of Taunton, who chairs the state senate's Global Warming and Climate Change Committee, vows to keep pushing for stronger energy policy in the legislative session that begins next year. Speaking to the Boston Globe's Margery Eagan, Pacheco said the just-passed legislation represents a small advance, but it doesn't go nearly far enough. "Sometimes," he said, "I feel like I'm banging my head up against a wall. . . . We're not talking polar bears anymore but public health."

QCAN shares Pacheco's sentiments.

Curious About Conditions Of Long Island Buildings

Dear Quincy Sun:

I commend your printing of a letter from someone so certain you wouldn't print their letter.

I hear Bonnie Ray's points. I was saddened when the bridge demolition brought a halt to such important programs (e.g. the rehabilitation programs, the Serving Ourselves Farm and others), but regardless of whether the bridge is rebuilt or ferry service is created, after three years of disuse since the bridge was demolished, I'm curious about the condition of the facilities there.

Those buildings that were already in shoddy conditions three or four years ago must be in need of some major updating to serve those afflicted by the opioid crisis.

Shouldn't that be part of the conversation in the hearing about the bridge that was recently postponed? If the buildings aren't in adequate condition to house the programs the Boston area is so thirsty for, will the City of Boston finance the necessary renovations? If not, why is there the hurry to spend those resources ($92 million) on the bridge as opposed to identifying a location with adequate facilities that could be ready much more quickly to serve those in dire need of services as immediately as possible, not after more red tape to approve and to build a new bridge?

Bobby Ciulla Grateful For Care, Concern

In the past, the "Sun" has been kind to mention my barbershop. In like manner, please extend my kindness to all the family, friends, and neighbors who honored me recently with a benefit, especially to the committee who organized it. I am also grateful for all their concern and care during my rehabilitation.

Tobin Sued Again Over School Budget; $1.7M At Stake

The School Committee has filed another lawsuit against Mayor Arthur H. Tobin for his refusal to send their budget proposal for fiscal 1982 to the City Council. The suit was filed in Norfolk Superior Court.

The budget that Mayor Tobin sent to the City Council last winter contained an estimated school figure. Later, the School Committee came up with a detailed budget that was $1.7 million higher.

City Solicitor Robert Fleming said that the $1.7 million lawsuit contained the $1.4 million in negotiated teacher salary increases that Tobin and the City Council refused to fund. That figure has been wandering up and down the court system for the past two years.

Tobin said that if the School Committee wins the $1.7 million lawsuit, "the worst the court can do is direct that the School Committee budget be submitted to the City Council." Then, he added, "it would be up to the Council to decide which department to take the money from since there are no additional funds. You'd be taking from Peter to pay Paul."

UNION HOPES TO SAVE JOBS OF 3 POLICE DOGS

Baron, Midnight and Moxie may make it after all.

But whatever happens, no one is going to take them out and shoot them or otherwise put them to sleep.

Baron, Midnight and Moxie are three members of the Quincy Police Canine Corps – that's the Dog Detachment – who have been laid off by Chief Francis X. Finn in an effort to live within his budget.

Finn and Henry Bradley of the police union met for an hour at the behest of Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, to see if they could work out a solution to the mounting canine controversy.

"We have to choose men over dogs," said Chief Finn. "It's as simple as that. Teachers, firefighters and policemen have been laid off and there was nowhere near the hue and cry we've had over three shepherds."

The chief denied reports that the dogs would be killed because they could not be used for other purposes. "They make good pets."

Children's Book Celebrates 90th Anniversary Of Paragon Carousel

Two years ago, the Rev. Ann Suzedell was nearing the end of her 15-year pastorate at the Quincy Point Congregational Church.

She envisioned her retirement years as affording time and opportunity to take on some new challenges. One of the projects she had in mind was writing a children's book. Like so many others who grew up on the South Shore, she had fond childhood memories of summer trips to Nantasket Beach and Paragon Park.

When the Park closed in 1985 almost everything was lost, except the magnificent Grand Carousel, crafted by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company in 1928. Thanks to the dedicated, determined efforts of the Friends of the Paragon Carousel who saved, restored and now operate this historic attraction across from Nantasket Beach, the Carousel remains a"pocket of joy" in a world often marred by confusion and conflict.

REV. ANN SUZEDELL, retired pastor, Quincy Point Congregational Church, is the author of a new children's book entitled "Carina – The Carousel Horse At Paragon Park." There will be a public book signing at the Paragon Carousel, Nantasket Ave., Hull on Sunday, Aug. 26th from noon to 3 p.m.

Carina the Carousel Horse at Paragon Park is set in 1928 and includes themes of acceptance and the value of children's voices. Rev. Suzedell found Carina on a trip to the Paragon Carousel. She is an American Appaloosa with a distinctive Native American saddle blanket. Those who read the book will be challenged to find Carina and other unique horses at the Carousel.

With a children's book, visuals help to bring the the characters and story moments to life. When the author met the artist, Susan Kilmartin and walked into her Hingham studio, she said,"I felt as if I had entered the 'inspiration shop' where Carina the Carousel Horse would come to life. Each remarkable picture offers insight into the people, the times and the story."

There will be a public book signing at the Paragon Carousel, Nantasket Ave., Hull on Sunday, Aug. 26th from noon to 3 p.m. The celebration will include Carousel birthday cake and children's games.

All the proceeds from the $15 book benefit the Friends of the Paragon Carouse

Cool As A Cucumber

By MARIE

Who doesn't like a salad, especially an easy one with only a few ingredients? Every time I go to my granddaughter Lauren's children's birthday parties her mother-in-law, Nancy, always brings something different and delectable.

As you will see today's recipe is no exception!

INGREDIENTS

3 cups of watermelon, cut into bit sized pieces

3 cups of sliced English cucumbers (just rinse - they don't have to be peeled)

8 mint leaves, diced

3 tablespoons of lime juice

½ cup to ¾ cup of feta cheese

Toss all ingredients in a large bowl and serve immediately.

If you like, serve with an artisan bread.

Wild Salmon

By SUSIE

Wild Salmon (please do not purchase farm raised salmon since it is raised questionably and even gets its "pink" color artificially) makes a heart healthy, delicious and easy summer dinner when served alongside a green salad with a bowl of seasonal fruit for dessert.

While the salmon is baking all you have to do is prepare the salad and you have dinner in about 20 minutes! Quicker than takeout and so much better for you. You don't have to be a gourmet chef to cook fish. It is easy and quick.

EASY BAKE WILD SALMON

About 6 ounces salmon

3 Tablespoons honey

3 Tablespoons Dijon Mustard

1 Tablespoon lemon juice

1/2 Teaspoon pepper

1/2 Teaspoon sea salt

Fresh parsley for serving

*Preheat oven to 325 degrees F.

In a small bowl whisk ingredients together for the fish. Arrange fish on baking dish that has been greased with coconut oil or olive oil. Spread mixture over fish.

Bake 20 minutes or so in oven until fish flakes easily with fork but do NOT overcook. Sprinkle with fresh chopped parsley before serving.

Enjoy!

Anita's Chicken Broccoli Divan

By MARIE

Today's recipe was sent to me by my niece, Anita, who lives in Arizona and reads The Quincy Sun. Anita provides me with very delicious recipes from time to time, and this Chicken Broccoli Divan is one of her latest contributions.

Preheat oven to 450 degrees – grease a pie plate

Ingredients:

4 cups of broccoli florets (fresh or frozen)

2 cups of cubed, boneless, skinless chicken breast (Anita used left over roasted chicken cut in pieces)

1 can of Pacific Cream of mushroom soup

1/3 cup of milk

1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

2 table spoons of bread crumbs

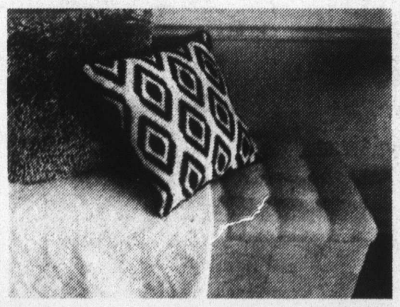

1 tablespoon of melted butter

Place the broccoli and chicken in the prepared 9-inch pie plate.

In a small bowl stir the soup and milk together and the pour the soup mixture over the broccoli and chicken and sprinkle with the cheese.

In a small bowl stir bread crumbs and butter together until blended. Sprinkle the bread crumb mixture over the cheese, bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes or until chicken mixture is hot and bubbly.

HaerborOne Bank Donates Backpacks

HARBORONE BANK and HarborOne Mortgage provided more than 5,000 at-risk children backpacks and educational tools they need to start the school year off right. The backpacks were packed by more than 80 employees of HarborOne Bank and HarborOne Mortgage. Among the organizations that received the backpacks for distribution was Interfaith Social Services based in Quincy. Shown here are Michael Roberge of HarborOne Bank (left) and Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services. Interfaith Social Services received 300 backpacks.

How Does A Heat Wave Affect The Human Body?

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Some might like it hot, but extreme heat can overwhelm the human body. With more possible heat waves on the horizon, the risk of heat-related health problems will also be on the upsurge. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC,) extreme heat is responsible for an average of 688 deaths each year in the U.S.

RUTH JONES

Human bodies dissipate heat by varying the rate and depth of blood circulation, by losing water through the skin and sweat glands, and as a last resort by panting, when blood is heated above 98.6 degrees. The heart begins to pump more blood, blood vessels dilate to accommodate the amplified flow, and the bundles of minute capillaries threading through the upper layers of skin are put into action. The body's blood is circulated closer to the skin's surface, and excess heat drains off into the cooler atmosphere, diffusing through the skin as perspiration. The skin handles about 90 percent of the body's heat dissipating function. Sweating, by itself, does little to cool the body, unless the water is removed by evaporation. High relative humidity slows evaporation, so humidity affects our body's cooling mechanisms.

Heat exhaustion is a comparatively common reaction to severe heat and can include symptoms such as dizziness, headache and fainting. It can usually be remedied with rest, a cool environment and hydration, including replacement of electrolytes, which are essential for muscle and other body functions. Heat stroke is more severe and requires medical attention. It is often accompanied by dry skin, body temperature exceeding 103 degrees Fahrenheit, confusion and occasionally unconsciousness.

The impact of sustained extreme heat on the human body can be devastating. The systems in the human body that enable it to adapt to heat become overwhelmed. When a person is exposed to heat for an extended period of time, the initial body function that is affected, is the ability to sweat. Once a person stops perspiring, in a very short interval, a person can move from heat exhaustion to heat stroke.

It commences with perspiring profusely, and when that ceases, the body becomes extremely hot. Eventually that begins to affect the brain, and that's when people begin to get confused and can lose consciousness. The analogy commonly used is if you're driving a car and you notice that the temperature light comes on when the cooling system of the car is becoming overwhelmed. If you turn off the car and let it cool, ultimately you can begin driving again. But if you continue to drive the car, the problem goes beyond the cooling system to affect the engine, and eventually the car will stop. As the body temperature increases very rapidly, the central nervous system and circulatory system are impacted, similar to that car engine.

Before someone gets total heat stroke, the person may exhibit reactions to the excessive heat. Heat rash and muscle cramps can be early signs of people being overwhelmed by heat. If those aren't treated promptly, it can lead to more severe symptoms. Cramping of muscles can occur as a result of a number of different issues, including electrolytes not getting to the muscles. It is important that people be aware that their skin turning red and dry are indicators that heat is impacting them.

Certain people may be more vulnerable to extended high temperatures. We know the high risk factors for dying from heat are often urban dwellers who are elderly, isolated and don't have access to air conditioning. In a study from the 1995 Chicago heat wave, it was found that certain medications put people at higher risk including, diuretics for high blood pressure, and beta blockers. There are also findings that have shown that certain mental health medications may impact a person's ability to deal with the heat. The risk of heat-related illness varies from person to person. A person's general health influences how well the person adapts to heat. Those with extra weight often have trouble in hot situations as the body has difficulty maintaining a good heat balance. Age (particularly for people about 45 years and older), poor general health, and a low level of fitness will make people more susceptible to feeling the extremes of heat. Medical conditions can also increase how susceptible the body is. People with heart disease, high blood pressure, respiratory disease and uncontrolled diabetes may need to take special precautions. In addition, people with skin diseases and rashes may be more susceptible to heat. Other factors include circulatory system capacity, sweat production and the ability to regulate electrolyte balance. Subsequently, those who are exercising or working in the heat, but who don't meet those criteria, can also be putting themselves in jeopardy.

Heat-related illnesses are largely preventable by taking some basic precautions. The single best way to reduce your heat stress risks while working is to steadily replenish the water you lose as sweat. Drinking small amounts frequently, such as 6 to 8 ounces every 15 minutes, is more effective than large amounts less often. Most people do not feel thirsty until their fluid loss reaches 2 percent of body weight and is already affecting them, so keep in mind relying on thirst as a signal to drink is a dangerous practice. The other leading factor that averts death from heat is access to air conditioning. Fans are not a successful tool in preventing overheating in extremely hot temperatures, and can actually worsen the situation.

Spending a day of fun in the sun with friends or family is a perfect getaway for a long weekend, but as Mother Nature turns up the heat, be aware of these predictable and preventable perils.

'Are You OK?' Program Gets Help For 2 Elderly Woman In 2 Days

Two elderly women in need of medical attention on the mornings of Tuesday, July 31st and Wednesday, Aug. 1st were rescued by public safety personnel, thanks to a Norfolk County Sheriff's Office collaborative program run by Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti and Fallon Ambulance Service.

Each morning, 365 days a year, an "Are You OK?" officer places a phone call to every program participant. If the participant does not answer the phone or indicates in some other way that he or she is in need of medical attention, the officer takes quick action to get them help.

On, July 31st the "Are You OK?" officer placed a call to a new 86-year-old Quincy client to get some information for her file. The elderly woman explained she was experiencing dizziness and requested an ambulance. The program officer instructed her to sit down and remained on the phone until the ambulance arrived.

The following day, a 90-year-old Medway woman was admitted to an area hospital after Sheriff Bellotti's "Are You OK?" program summoned help to her home.

The elderly woman, did not answer her daily well-being check phone call from the "Are You OK?" officer on the morning of Aug 1. The officer called the Medway Police and asked them to go to the woman's address to check on her. They found her lying on the floor, unable to get up by herself. She stated that she had fallen out of her chair sometime during the night and was weak.

The elderly woman was transported by ambulance to the hospital where she was evaluated and diagnosed with a back fracture, according to the program officer.

"Once again, this lifesaving program proves itself to be effective in protecting senior citizens living alone," Bellotti said. "We're glad we were able to get both of these women into the hands of medical professionals right away."

Anyone wishing to learn more about "Are You OK?" or sign up for the program should visit the senior programs section of Sheriff Bellotti's website at www.norfolksheriff.com or call the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at 1-866-900-7865 (RUOK).

November Opening Eyed For Independence Ave. Gate

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials are aiming to open the Independence Avenue entrance to the Quincy Adams MBTA station in November.

The city plans to implement a new residential parking program in the abutting neighborhood and install a new traffic signal at the intersection of Independence Avenue and Verchild Street ahead of the gate opening.

Ed Grennon, a junior traffic engineer for the city, shared those details with the dozen residents who attended an Aug. 8 community meeting at Lincoln-Hancock on upcoming garage improvement projects the MBTA will begin in the coming weeks at the Quincy Adams and Braintree stations.

Mayor Thomas Koch had announced earlier this year he would re-open the gate, which has remained locked since the 1980s, this fall based on feedback the city received from residents. The Penn's Hill Neighborhood Association hosted an online survey on the gate last year and held a pair of community meetings on the topic then as well. Five hundred four people responded to the survey, with 80 percent in favor of re-opening it and 18 percent opposed. The other 2 percent were undecided. The neighborhood group took no position on opening the gate.

The gate's closure has meant that residents living in the neighborhood to the east of Quincy Adams have no direct access to the station, requiring them to walk 30 minutes or more each way to and from the station on a daily basis.

The gate re-opening has not been without controversy, with some residents concerned T commuters will park on residential streets in lieu of the Quincy Adams garage. Ron MacDonald, a Penn's Hill resident, said he was concerned the T's decision to increase parking rates at Quincy Adams starting next month would provide an additional incentive to park in the neighborhood.

"Increasing the fees encourages people to go around the other side and find a parking space on Independence Avenue," he said. "My question for the T is this: What are you going to do proactively to help the city and stop that kind of parking going on on that side of the station?"

Rick Colon, the public affairs director for the state Department of Transportation, said the T would cooperate with city officials as they have done during the closure of Wollaston station and other projects.

Grennon said the city would enforce existing parking restrictions in the area and the new residential parking program, which the City Council must approve before it can take effect, will help mitigate concerns about parking as well. The Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department will also increase enforcement in the area following the hiring of two new parking control officers, one of whom will be assigned to the neighborhood.

"We already have some restrictions in place over there, which will allow us to enforce people parking all day in zones that they shouldn't be parking. The additional residential program will broaden those restrictions even further to give us a wider reach to where we can keep people out of," Grennon said.

"We did add more parking enforcement. We are going to focus our efforts over there."

Residents with concerns about commuters parking in their neighborhood and walking to the station should contact TPAL, he added. The department would then be able to determine if there were restrictions in place that could be enforced, or if new restrictions would be required.

Councillor Anne Mahoney said the city should reconsider trying to implement the gate opening, the new residential parking program and the new traffic signal at the intersection at roughly the same time.

"If you're going to open the gate and have a residential parking program happen at the same time and the traffic light happen at the same time that could be a disaster," she said. "If you're onboarding everything at the same time, you're not giving anybody time to learn the traffic patterns for what's coming."

The T will begin its $64.3 million project to overhaul the Quincy Adams and Braintree garages in late August or early September, according to project manager Steven Belanger. The work will be substantially complete by October 2021 and entirely finished by the end of that year.

The project is intended to extend the lifespan of the two garages, both of which opened in the 1980s, by 40 years.

The work at Quincy Adams will include improvements to the Independence Avenue entrance, including new lighting, new pavement and tree trimming.

Up to 300 parking spaces total between the two stations will be unavailable on any given weekday, Belanger said. To mitigate that impact, the T will make available more than 400 spaces – 88 at Quincy Adams and 313 in Braintree. The new spaces at Quincy Adams will be created within the current parking area, while privately owned lots will be used near the Braintree station.

Beth Larkin, an assistant general manager for the MBTA, said the transit agency had reached out to Home Depot to use spaces in its parking lot near Quincy Adams. Those spaces are not available, however, because Home Depot has an agreement with a developer in place for that lot.

There are currently more than 2,500 parking spaces available at Quincy Adams, and more than 1,300 at the Braintree station.

Some residents at the community meeting questioned the timing of the garage projects given that the Wollaston station will be closed through next summer as it is rebuilt, a mixed-use project will soon break ground at North Quincy, resulting in a loss of parking spaces there, and the Quincy Center garage is now being demolished, which could set the stage for development there.

Sen. John Keenan said those projects and others to improve the Red Line by replacing entire fleet of trains and upgrading its signals are competing for funding against other transit proposals around the state.

"I have colleagues in the state Senate who are very aggressive in seeking funding for their projects, particularly for rail to go from Boston to Springfield and for rail to go from Boston to the South Coast – Fall River and New Bedford," Keenan said.

"They are very aggressively seeking funding and we've got the funding, so we've got to take advantage of it and use it while we do have it and that may mean, as it does, that everything is going to happen quickly at once, but we're just going to have to do it that way and get through it."

Social Security 'Notch Baby' Seeks Restitution

By RUSSELL GLOOR
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My husband was a "notch baby" and has been collecting less Social Security than his brother-in-law who had a lesser profession. Is there any hope for correcting this? Signed: Wondering and Hopeful

Dear Hopeful: Well, the whole "notch baby" controversy has been simmering for a lot of years now and has even gotten the attention of Congress several times in past years. The term "Notch Babies" refers to Social Security beneficiaries who were born between 1917 and 1921 because they, as well as those born earlier, were caught up in an error made by the Social Security Administration when transitioning to automatic Cost of Living Adjustments (COLA) in 1972. An error in the new COLA computation, which resulted in beneficiaries being overpaid wasn't discovered until a few years afterwards. In an effort to resolve the issue Congress ruled that for those born before 1917 the higher (incorrect) COLA formula would continue to be used, and COLA for those born in 1917 or later would use a new corrected COLA formula. But bowing to public pressure, Congress later created a transition period which said that anyone born between 1917 and 1921 would get COLA according to a special formula which was not as generous as the incorrect one used for those born before 1917, but more generous than the corrected formula used for those born after 1921. And those born between 1917 and 1921 are referred to as "notch babies" (some lobbying groups have even expanded the term to include those born up to 1926). Nevertheless, most "notch babies" feel they are losing out because they didn't get benefits using the old incorrect COLA formula as did those born prior to 1917, even though the formula used to compute their COLA is more generous than for those born after 1921.

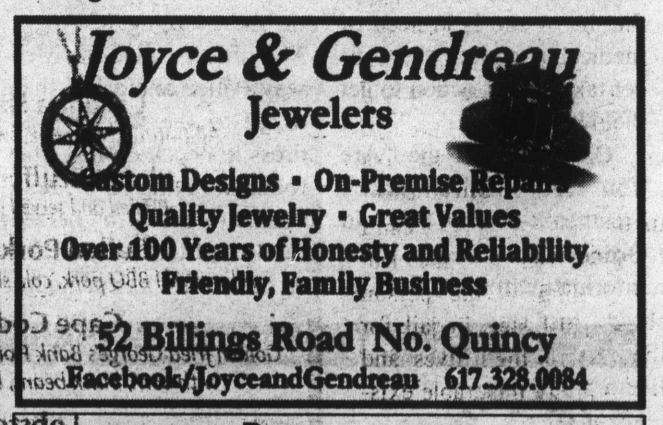

Obviously, your husband falls into the "notch baby" category while his brother-in-law apparently benefited from the higher (incorrect) formula used for those born prior to 1917, presumably accounting for the disparity in their benefits. As for any "hope for correcting this," Congress' view over the years has consistently been that there is really nothing to correct because those born between 1917 and 1921 are/were receiving COLA increases using the special formula which is more generous than for those born after 1921. Currently H.R. 867 – The Notch Fairness Act of 2017 has 8 cosponsors and has been referred to the Subcommittee on Social Security, but little progress has been made in today's political climate focused more on reducing program costs than on raising them. So, I'd have to say that I doubt if legislation addressing this issue will be successful anytime soon.

Residents Pleased With Wollaston Beach Water Quality

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Massachusetts Beaches Commission recently held a public hearing on the condition of Wollaston Beach, and will use feedback from residents to develop recommendations on the future of the site.

The commission held its public hearing earlier this month at the Kennedy Center in North Quincy. Sen. John Keenan, a member of the commission from Quincy, said residents feel better about water quality and the condition of the beach than they have in the past.

"Compared to past years, people seemed to be pretty pleased with the condition of the beach, the maintenance of the beach and water quality, but there was a recognition that more has to be done to improve the water quality because in the ranking of the beaches, Wollaston, even though it has over 90 percent water quality rating, it could use improvement," Keenan said.

Residents at the meeting did say they have concerns about traffic and parking along Quincy Shore Drive, as well as concerns about pedestrian safety.

"The other concern that was raised was the speed of the traffic on Quincy Shore Drive and parking – in conjunction with the speed, difficulty getting in and out of the parking spaces because of Quincy Shore Drive. And then some of the pedestrian safety issues," Keenan said. "Pedestrians aren't using the crosswalks as they should. They are crossing between cars and coming out into traffic and people are concerned about that as well."

Input from the meeting – and others held on beaches throughout Metropolitan Boston – will be used to create a new report outlining improvements that could be made to the beaches under the commission's purview.

"The beaches commission will gather all the information from their various meetings and, like they did a couple of years ago, come up with a report reflecting what they've heard across the metropolitan beaches communities and then some recommendations as to what should be next," Keenan said.

The senator said there are currently no specific plans by the state to improve Wollaston Beach, but money from recently approved bond bills could be used to improve seawalls there and fix sidewalks damaged by this year's strong winter storms.

"We passed some bonds that will allow for rebuilding of seawalls, construction of new seawalls. Whether that will specifically impact Wollaston Beach, we will see," Keenan said. "To the extent that some of those seawalls need to be addressed, we will look to address them. There are still some areas of sidewalks that need to be repaired as a result of storms over the last winter."

The state is also looking to dredge Quincy Bay, which has not been done for quite a while, Keenan said.

"We're looking at dredging of Quincy Bay near the yacht clubs and elsewhere," he stated. "There was money in a bond to do some dredging, and the hope is some of that money will finds its way to Quincy Bay."

Quincy Police Increasing Impaired-Driving Patrols

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Police Department will step up patrols meant to catch impaired driving using grant funds received from the Highway Safety Division of the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security.

Quincy police will be joining local police throughout the state, as well as the Massachusetts State Police, in the national "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" enforcement mobilization and public information campaign.

This year's campaign will urge drivers drinking alcohol or using marijuana and other drugs to plan ahead and designate a sober driver, use a ride-share service or take public transportation.

"Impaired drivers create a dangerous situation for everyone around them, threatening the destruction of lives and entire families," Police Chief Paul Keenan said in a statement. "This grant will help increase our efforts during the busy summer travel season to keep our roads free of impaired drivers and avoid the tragedy they wreak."

"Getting behind the wheel after drinking alcohol, using marijuana or both is one of the most dangerous things drivers can do," said Jeff Larason, director of the Highway Safety Division. "A little planning can save your life or someone else's. Regret or remorse won't bring someone back."

Marijuana or marijuana-type drugs were the most prevalent types of drugs found in people killed in crashes from 2011 to 2016 in Massachusetts, Quincy police said. Alcohol impaired driving fatalities increased 9 percent – from 109 to 119 – in the state between 2015 and 2016. Between 2011 and 2015, 82 percent of impaired drivers in fatal crashes were men and 45 percent of all alcohol-related driver fatalities were ages 21 to 34.

Nationally, about one-third of all traffic crash fatalities involve drunk drivers. More than 10,000 people die each year in drunk-driving related crashes.

Sen. Keenan Opposes Return O Death Penalty

interview.

"I don't support it in general and it's very difficult because when you look at what happened with Officer Chesna, that was one of the most horrific things that I recall ever happening to a police officer – just the way it happened. I understand the death penalty is something that people are giving a lot of thought to there and I can fully understand why – and that's my reaction in some way too because of what that guy did.

"But the history of the death penalty is it takes such a long, long, long time for somebody to work through the system of appeals to get to the point where they actually end up being killed. I never suggest that I would put myself in a position of any family who has lost somebody – a police officer in the line of duty. I can't imagine what it's like. But my feeling is the person should just stay in jail for the rest of their lives and live a pretty miserable existence there."

"I oppose the death penalty in general and as it relates to police officers it is a very difficult decision, but that's where I am," Keenan said. "A guy like that should just rot in jail."

Massachusetts last executed someone in 1947, and in 1984 the state's Supreme Judicial Court ruled the death penalty statue was unconstitutional. Efforts have been made to re-instate the death penalty in recent years, but those have failed.

Keenan said the latest push for capital punishment could have a stronger chance of being approved by legislators, but he does not know if it would pass or not.

"Given the recent events, it might have a better chance, but I really don't know," he said. "I have no sense from my colleagues as to whether it would pass."

Remembering Bob Noble

mind as he placed the wreath on a rack in front of the Tomb with the help of a soldier from the U.S. Army Third Infantry Regiment – "The Old Guard."

"I feel it was not for me alone. I was a symbol for all World War II veterans and ex-POWs. I had all my friends in mind when I placed the wreath and bowed to meditate before the playing of Taps," Bob said.

It is a select group of individuals who are invited to lay a wreath at the Tomb. For Bob Noble, he was in even more rarefied company.

Escorting Bob from the stairs of the Amphitheater to the Tomb was MG Buchanan. The major general also escorts the three leaders of this nation – the President, Vice President and Speaker of the House – at similar wreath ceremonies at the Tomb.

"I didn't know he would be taking part before the ceremony. I feel very humbled," Bob said. "It made me realize how significant an honor it was to be there for that.

"It's something I never thought would happen. That honor was doubled by the number of people who came from Quincy to be there with me."

If anyone was deserving of laying a wreath at the tomb, it was Bob Noble.

For many years Bob spoke very little of his experience as a Prisoner of War. But through the encouragement of support of friends and family – especially his beloved Gloria – Bob opened up about his time in captivity when he was just a teenager in World War II.

BOB NOBLE as a private first class in the U.S. Army Air Corps, 87th Infantry "Golden Acorn" Division, during World War II. Bob was later promoted to the rank of corporal. He was a proud World War II veteran who never forgot his fellow veterans and ex-POWs.

He was serving with the 87th Infantry Division when he and other soldiers were captured by the Nazis on Dec. 16, 1944 in Alsace-Lorraine in France on the "Western Front." This was the same day that the Nazis began an offensive attack that would become "The Battle of the Bulge," a key turning point in World War II.

Bob filled me in on some details during an interview in 2011.

In the darkness he heard someone speaking German and a group of men standing together about 10 yards away. But he couldn't make out their identity.

Bob had a decision to make. Shoot his automatic weapon or hold his fire.

For some reason, he didn't pull the trigger. As it turned out, they were Americans. They were captured soldiers and soon Bob Noble was captured, too.

Two days after being taken prisoner, he turned 19 years old. He was liberated 122 days later, on April 16, 1945, by the British Army.

But before he was freed, he endured a harrowing ordeal.

Bob was forced to dig trenches in frozen ground for anti-aircraft emplacements. He was shot at, suffered frostbite in both feet, and lost nearly 40 pounds off his 135-pound frame.

QUINCY WORLD WAR II Army veteran and Ex-POW Robert Noble (left) places a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, VA on April 9, 2015 - National Former POW Recognition Day. Assisting Bob as the memorial wreath is placed on the rack in front of the Tomb is Specialist Drew C. Glover of the U.S. Army Third Infantry Regiment, "The Old Guard." Saluting in the background is Bugler and Master Sergeant Christian Hinkle from the United States Army Band, "Pershing's Own." Bob Noble said placing the wreath of the tomb was a "tremendous honor" in recognition of all World War II veterans and ex-POWs. Mr. Noble passed away Aug. 7. He was 92. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

There were other life-endangering hardships, too. But Bob was one of the lucky ones. He made it back home.

The experience of being a POW became a beacon of his faith and service to his fellow man.

"It was during his time as a POW that taught Bob how precious the gift of life is," said Rev. Charles J. Higgins, pastor of St. Albert the Great Church in Weymouth. Rev. Higgins was the celebrant at Bob's funeral Mass Monday.

On the back of the funeral program was a scanned photo of a letter that Bob's paternal grandparents mailed to him on Oct. 14, 1944 – two months before Bob was taken prisoner. The letter was returned to sender because Bob was missing in action. He went MIA on Dec. 16, 1944 – two days before his 19th birthday.

The letter reads:

"Lots of love and may the sheltering arms of Jesus, Mary and Joseph guard and guide you through life."

Rev. Higgins quoted the letter in his homily and then added: "May Bob now share in the fullness of that letter in the presence of the Almighty God."

His funeral was a beautifully touching tribute. His children and grandchildren participated as pallbearers, readers and singing. It was capped off by his son, Robert, Jr., who delivered heartfelt remarks about his dad on behalf of the entire Noble family. His eulogy appears on Page 13.

Many of us have other memories or stories of Bob that we will always cherish. His acts of kindness that defined his spirit and endeared him to so many.

I look over at that rocking chair in my office and I remember Bob visiting me after he placed the wreath on the tomb. He sat in that chair and told me a story that will forever stay in my thoughts.

After the wreath was placed at the tomb, Bob was still thinking about those who sacrificed and served during World War II.

He was aware that according to protocol, the wreath that he placed at the Tomb would be removed and set on the steps on the other side of the tomb for 12 hours.

He then had an idea. After its time at the tomb Bob wanted to place the wreath at the World War II Memorial located on the National Mall between the Washington Monument and Lincoln Monument.

So he asked and received permission from an Army official to relocate the wreath to the memorial. Arrangements were made and about 24 hours after placing the wreath at the tomb Bob and his family placed the wreath near the memorial's reflecting pool and gold stars that represent the 400,000 U.S. servicemen and women who were killed during World War II.

Bob was also given a warm reception at the WWII memorial. School children from Indiana thanked him for his service and some had pictures taken with Bob.

All the flowers on the wreath were left intact – except for one.

Gloria's yellow rose.

That flower was given to daughter Andrea White who created a keepsake with it.

"I was very pleased that my grandchildren were with me at the World War II Memorial when we placed the wreath there," Bob said. "This whole experience was a tremendous honor that I never expected would happen but it's something I will never forget."

Bob Noble was buried with full military honors beside his beloved Gloria Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

His passing is a loss for his family, his friends, this city and his fellow veterans.

I am grateful to have known him and to have so many fond memories of a man who truly was an American hero.

Thank you, Bob Noble for your service, love and friendship.

You did not merely walk this Earth for more than 92 years.

You graced it. In everything you did.

Gonna miss you, Bob, until we meet again.

'Dad's Life Involved Around Three Core Values: Faith In God, His Family, Devotion To Community, Country'

Robert G. Noble, Sr. Eulogized By Son Robert Noble, Jr.

Robert G. Noble, Sr. Obituary Page 33

The following eulogy was given by Robert Noble Jr. in tribute to his father, Robert G. Noble, Sr. at Mr. Noble's funeral Mass Monday at Saint Albert the Great Church, Weymouth.

By ROBERT G. NOBLE, Jr.

Nelson Mandela is quoted as saying, "What counts in life is not the mere fact that we have lived. It is what difference we have made to the lives of others that will determine the significance of the life we lead." This I believe encapsulates our father's life. Dad's life revolved around three core values: Faith in God, his family, and devotion to community and country.

Dad's faith in God was put to the test in December 1944, when, as an 18-year-old soldier, he was presented with an agonizing decision. In the dark of night, he was alone in a slit trench when he heard men's voices, speaking German, approaching him. As he raised his weapon to fire, he heard a voice in his head that told him not to. Dad chose to withhold his fire and it turned out that the approaching men were fellow American soldiers; the decision ultimately led to him being captured, as the soldiers had been previously seized by German troops and were being used as human shields.

Dad always believed that an "Angel" was on his shoulder that night and going forward, if he put his trust in God, that no matter what happens, he would accept it as God's will and continue to move forward. He would do this for the rest of his life. Through the remainder of his life, Dad practiced his faith with loving devotion. He was often seen at Saturday evening Mass here at St. Albert's, and his parish became like family.

When you talk of Dad's dedication to community and country, you cannot do it without including his wife, Gloria. They were a team in every sense of the word. They involved themselves in several civic organizations, supported a myriad of charitable causes, tirelessly campaigned for their favorite candidates (as long as they were Democrats).

Our parents strongly believed that you were put on this earth to give back to society and practiced this belief throughout their lives. Through this commitment they have impacted the lives of many people. To meet someone that knew our parents often comes with a fond memory, an appreciation for their support, or a thank you for what Mr. and Mrs. Noble did for them. Dad loved his country and being a citizen of Quincy was always said with extreme pride.

The word "hero" is defined as "A person noted for feats of courage or nobility of purpose." This word has been used to describe our Dad primarily for his service to his country and his experience as a P.O.W. Frankly, Dad was always very uncomfortable with his distinction as he felt that he was not deserving of such an accolade. He felt others had endured far more than he and those men were the true heroes.

Contrary to what Dad thought he deserved, we believe the word "hero" is in fact the perfect definition of the man he was and not for reasons that are so readily apparent. Dad got up every day before dawn to work two jobs: One as an industrial engineer and the other for the U.S. Post Office. Without complaint, day after day, month after month, year after year, he worked so he could provide his family with everything that we needed or wanted. The love and commitment to his family showed no bounds.

Dad would be at every ballgame, recital, graduation, wedding, vacation, holiday, you name, be it for his children, nieces and nephews, his grandchildren or great-grandchildren, he was there. Almost all of our cherished memories include Dad by our side, capturing it with his camera, and a smile on his face. He had a knack for making anyone he met feel as if they were family. He wouldn't hesitate to drive you to a doctor's appointment or to the store, or help with errands if you were in need of assistance. Not because he had to, because he wanted to.

Finally, when our mother's health deteriorated in the last year of her life, Dad's devotion, patience, and above all love was the very epitome of what being a hero truly is. It is these feats of courage and nobility of purpose that made Dad a hero in our eyes and a role model for us all.

Bob Noble built us a legacy of faith, commitment and love – for God, for country, for family. Core values that when we see them in ourselves, we will proudly say "We got that from our Dad."

In closing, I truly believe, and I think you would all agree with me, when I say "Heaven get ready, because once again Bob n' Glo are on the go." (Sustained applause from those attending his funeral Mass.)

'BOB AND GLO on the go' . . . Bob and Gloria Noble were a dedicated team serving numerous local organizations and causes for decades. They were married for 63 years. Gloria passed away Oct. 1, 2013. Bob passed away Aug. 7. Bob coined the familiar phrase "Bob and Glo are on the go" to describe their level of activity and commitment in the community. He used it for his phone answering message for many years.

Bob Noble's Passing: Saddest Of Sad News

The passing of a Quincy legend like Bob Noble is the saddest of sad news. A community or a city is not built with brick and mortar but with living human beings who are always the foundation of a place.

Bob Noble may not have been born in Quincy but he was re-born in the City of Presidents. He became the proto-type for a community activist. No one spoke out more on the issue of military veterans than he. He wasn't just a voice but a doer. Bob will be missed and no one can ever replace him.

I have been lucky to have known him for over 25 years while living in Quincy and even after leaving, he and I remained friends.

Bob Noble is also a piece of American history too. A WWII veteran and a POW in that war. The last time I bumped into him was at this year's Memorial Day Parade and exercises that followed at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. He will be missed by his family and by the entire community, especially the veterans' community.

As St. Paul said toward the end of his life, "I have fought the fight and finished the race." Bob Noble always fought the good fight and has finished the race and is now at peace in heaven.

I will miss him.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, Aug. 5, at approximately 11:40 p.m., Officers Paul Farina and Daniel Parisi (with K9 partner) were dispatched to Creedon Field on Hunt Street for a report of a breaking and entering in progress. Communications was monitoring the suspect by surveillance security cameras within the field.

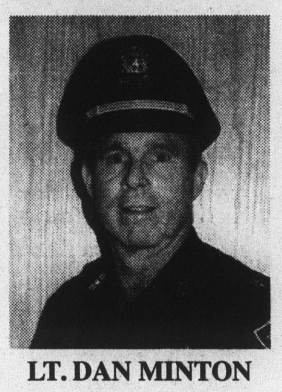

Upon arrival, communications stated the male suspect was still in the area and had entered the concession stand. The officers noted that all the exterior gates were locked.

As Officer Parisi prepared his K9 partner to go inside the field, Officer Farina used bolt cutters to remove the lock to the main gate. Communications personnel were monitoring the camera feeds and updated the officers that the male suspect was now at the rear of the concession stand.

As the officers neared, they saw the suspect exiting the men's bathroom at the end of the concession stand. He was halfway out the door when Officer Parisi yelled "Quincy Police" and ordered the suspect to the ground. He immediately complied and went into the prone position on the ground with his hands placed on the small of his back.

Officer Farina handcuffed the suspect while Officer Parisi gave the suspect his Miranda rights and asked him if he had any weapons on him, or near the area, and he said no. The suspect said that he is homeless and does not have any place to go to wash himself or his clothes. He said that he found keys that were to Creedon Field outside of the Stadium.

Officer Parisi tried the keys on the outer gates of the field but the keys did not work. The suspect said the day before he was able to get into the women's bathroom located in the concession stand, where he washed some of his clothes and then left, stating he would come back when they were dry. He left his T-Shirt in the door jam of the women's bathroom. He said that he came back today in the afternoon but could not get back into the women's bathroom as the T-Shirt did not properly wedge the door open.

LT. DAN MINTON

He said he left the area at that time and decided to come back later. He said he came back tonight and still could not get into the women's room. He jumped the fence to gain access to the field house, as the keys he had did not open any of the outer gates.

Since he could not gain access to women's room, he broke into the Men's room using a tool. He stated he only wanted to rinse off and hopefully gain access to his clothes in the other bathroom. Officer Farina checked both bathrooms and found them to be locked.

The suspect, a 27-year-old homeless man, was placed under arrest for breaking and entering in the nighttime and transported to the Quincy Police Station for booking. Once at the station, it was determined the suspect had an outstanding default warrant. The keys that the suspect had were unlabeled and taken as evidence.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Tuesday, August 7, at approximately 11 p.m., Officers Paul Farina, Tom Gaeta and Eugene Smith were dispatched to Quincy Medical Center for a report of a disorder with a female patient.

Upon arrival, officers met with the security staff who said the female was now in the bathroom. Security said the woman was screaming at her mother and when she exited the bathroom she became increasingly agitated while flailing her arms in the lobby. It was clear to security that people in the lobby were scared by her actions and moved further away from her. Normal operation of the emergency room lobby came to a complete standstill.

Prior to the officer's arrival, the staff called for additional security to calm the scene. Officer Farina attempted to calm the female down and asked her to move out of the lobby. She refused to listen and continued to disrupt the emergency room area, so Security asked the Police Officers to escort the female off the property.

The female then blurted out, "My husband is the prince of Cape Verde. You have no idea who you are f@#$%^& with." She started screaming at the two security guards while screaming,

"I'm not a f@#$%^& racist - you don't know who I am."

The officers eventually got the female outside but she continued yelling and swearing. Patrons walking into the hospital stopped in their tracks to see what was taking place.

One patron was hesitant to even enter the hospital until officers directed her around the disruption. She was asked numerous times by security and by officers on scene to calm down and lower her voice. She continued to scream out using foul language at her mother, who was there to take her home.

Since the female, a 33-year-old Braintree resident, refused to cease her disorderly behavior and since she would not leave the hospital grounds, she was placed under arrest on the charge of disorderly conduct.

Nice Work!

Removing Tree Sap, New Tires At Dealer, Small SUVs

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

I have a question about my 2014 Toyota Camry Hybrid. This is the second Camry Hybrid I have owned. In February I went to the dealer where I purchased the car to have the 50,000-mile check-up and oil change. This type of service usually has taken no more than one hour, but this time took three hours. After a couple of hours, the service guy told me my car needed a special repair. I received an estimate and explanation of what was needed. Here is what they told me. The "sway bar links" and "front boots" were leaking/damaged, and the cost to repair this would be $545. They did say that I might not notice any problem with the car, but that eventually its handling on the road would be affected. I told them I didn't have the time, but, I didn't trust them. I have not had any problems with the car either prior to the service or since. Now it is time to bring the car in for another service. I was wondering if you have any insight into this potential "necessary repair." I don't intend to go back to this dealer for service. It seemed to me that they were trying to take advantage of a single, older female who, they assumed, is not knowledgeable about cars.

At this point I would certainly get a second opinion with another dealer or independent repair shop. Both items they mentioned are easy to see and verify if the repairs are necessary. Sway bar bushing (rubber) will crack with age and when completely worn out will affect the vehicle handling to a limited extent. The front boots, I assume, are the bellows style boot for the steering system. These too are rubber and can crack as they age. In both cases it seems a bit unusual that these items would have failed at only four years of age.

My car had tree sap all over the hood and my son decided to clean the sap off with gasoline. The gas did get the sap off but what did it do to the paint?

After washing the car with car soap and water, I would use a light-duty polishing compound and then a good quality wax. In this case I would use a carnauba-based wax that will help "nourish" the paint and bring depth back to the finish. Once the paint looks better buy some bug/tar/sap remover or depending on the trees a car cover.

I recently purchased a low-mileage 2014 Buick with a six-speed automatic transmission. This car looks brand new and I'm pretty sure no one other than the driver has been in the car. The car runs well, although I can feel a slight jerky sensation in the 20 to 45 mph range. This isn't noticeable when I'm accelerating but when I am on back roads it is quite noticeable. He is the real problem: this sensation is very annoying to my wife. I went back to the dealer who pronounced this as normal. My other concern is that even though this car has low mileage, I'm the third owner. Do you think I just have to get used to it or is there something that can be done to minimize the jerky feel? Maybe the first two owners weren't happy with the car and traded it?

General Motors issued a technical service bulletin that describes a clunk noise similar to your car. Here is the complicated explanation of why this happens. The reason is that during a 2-3 upshift, the 2-4 band is released, and the 3-4 clutch is applied. The timing of this shift can cause a momentary torque reversal of the output shaft which results in a clunk noise. This same torque reversal can also occur on a 3-2 downshift when the 3-4 clutch is released, and the 2-4 band applied. Long story short: General Motors considers this normal and no service is necessary. At this point it looks like you and your wife are going to have to get used to the sensation.

I'm always interested in your column even though I haven't had cars with problems, but now I do. We have a 2013 Mercedes 300 with 46,000 miles on it. The dealer says that one rear differential seal "is just starting to leak" and will cost about $875 to replace. Is there another solution, and if not, is this a task a good independent garage could do? Should both seals be replaced even if only one is leaking?

The first thing to determine is what does the dealer technician mean by "just starting to leak." Many seals will seep slightly and although this seeping will not get better by itself it may never change. In this case if the seal is leaking I would only repair the seal in question. There is no reason why a qualified independent shop couldn't replace a differential seal. The first place I would start is with a second opinion.

The Toyota dealer has determined that my 2012 Highlander needs a center-driveshaft replacement, because of a rumble type vibration when accelerating. The cost will be about $1,100 including labor. Do you think I should look for a used drive shaft and have it replaced at a local garage or do you believe a new driveshaft replaced by the dealer is the way to go? The car is in excellent condition with 165,000 miles on it and this is the first repair it has needed. I plan on keeping this car at least another three years.

Certainly, replacing the driveshaft with a used unit from a salvage yard could be an economical alternative. The only issue I see is you want to have the shop carefully inspect the part before installing it in your vehicle. If the donor vehicle was in a bad crash the driveshaft could be damaged. There are also aftermarket or rebuilt driveshafts that offer a cost savings.

The owner's manual for my 2014 Toyota Avalon implies that I need to get any new tires at a Toyota dealer, otherwise the tire pressure warning system will no longer work. Is this true or just a marketing ploy? Is it necessary to replace the valves and transmitters when changing the tire? Can tire dealers perform the steps needed to register the new valves and transmitters?

You can purchase tires anywhere for your Avalon. The tire pressure warning systems won't need to be reprogramed if the wheels are put back in the same location. If the tires are not put back in the same location, nearly every tire store and many general service shops have tire pressure (TPMS) monitor programming tools. Regarding the life of a TPM sensor, most will last 7 to 10 years. I would expect the sensors in your vehicle to last through the next set of tires before the batteries that power the sensors fail.

Wondering if you can shed some light on the 2018 GMC SUVs along with the earlier models. We've had the GMC Terrains for the last several years, 2011, 2014, 2017 and although I really like driving them I always had a problem with their air conditioning system as there were no vents for the back seat which made riding in the back a problem. What I really liked, and got use to, was the line crossing warning and felt it was a real safety item. This year when the Terrain got smaller and looking more like a hatchback car we opted for the Acadia which got smaller and fit our life style. So telling you all that, do you have any idea why the "lane crossing warning" was only put in with the more expensive Denali? And along with that did no one complain all those years about the lack of air conditioning in the back of the Terrain? I've asked the dealer who hasn't a clue.

The system you are referencing is lane departure warning (sort of an electronic rumble strip). Like many vehicles the manufacturers put options together as packages. More than likely as helpful as some of these systems are, they weren't being ordered in the more basic models. I haven't looked at the climate control on the Terrain, but I am surprised since even the most basic models these days have some sort of vent to provide warm or cool air to the rear passengers.

I am an older woman who lives alone and is about to purchase a reliable used car. I thought I might want a small SUV but after test driving a Subaru as well as the Buick Encore, they feel too big. I need a car with a driver seat that raises high since I don't see over the steering wheel in some cars. My children tell me I should buy an AWD car and I agree. However, I recently test drove a 2015 Lexus CT 200h (a hybrid car that doesn't have all-wheel-drive) and felt very comfortable in it. The car had 40,000 miles on it, was in the $21,000 range, and had a warranty through 2021. What do you think of that car? The car I buy doesn't have to be an SUV but it must have a driver seat that raises quite high. Your opinion on other options would be appreciated.

Cars are very personal and a vehicle that fits one person may not be perfect for someone else. All-wheel-drive will give you better traction and control in poor weather conditions. If it isn't necessary for you to be out in those conditions front-wheel-drive is just fine. In addition, front-wheel-drive with dedicated winter tires can dramatically improve any vehicles winter performance. Since you want a smallish car with adjustable seat height the choices can be somewhat limited. The Lexus 200h is a nice handling, well-constructed car and one that is easy to recommend. Some others are the Audi A3 and the Honda FIT. You mentioned the Subaru was too big, but you might want to give the Crosstrek a second look. It has all-wheel-drive and a good seating position.

My car is five years old with only 9,000 miles on it. The other day, we made a left turn onto a straightaway and suddenly out of nowhere a deafening sound began and then finally stopped – but not after making us all momentarily deaf. We were totally stunned with this earsplitting noise out of "left field." The air conditioner and the radio were both on. There was a terrible rumbling sound which another car member said sounded like static and also said it also sounded like a high ringing tone. The car was used the next day, but no noise like the previous day. In all the cars I've driven, over decades, I have never heard a noise like this. We were totally stunned! What could be wrong with my car? I'm planning to take it to the service center of the dealership where it has been serviced for five years now. What can I tell the mechanic as to what the problem could be? The car is a 2013 Infiniti G37. If this situation happens again before I get it to the dealer service center – what should I do?

If the noise happens again – providing you can do so safely – shut the car off, wait a few seconds and restart the car. I suspect if you do this the noise will have gone away. I believe the problem is a short circuit in the car's sound system. I think the noise you heard was the amplifier blasting audio noise at full volume. The problem is being able to demonstrate it to the technicians that will need to fix the car. Although I have not seen this problem in an Infiniti before I have seen it in other models.

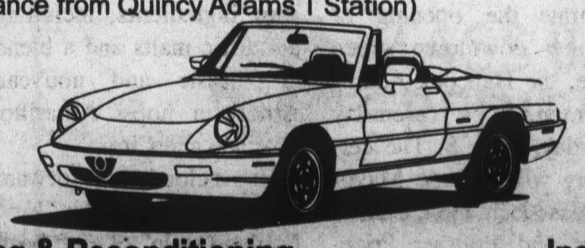

My 2007 Honda Odyssey with 135,000 miles on it runs great. The only issue is the air conditioning does not kick in consistently. When it works it blows nice cold air, other times the air is just warm. Any suggestions?

One issue I have seen in some Honda models is an intermittent failure of the air conditioner clutch. If the system has been checked for proper operation and the pressures are found to be within the normal range, then it is time to look at the operational side of the climate control system. Like most vehicles today, the climate control and heater are both working and airduct controllers mix cool and warm air. What could be happening is the motor for the duct is malfunctioning and allowing too much warm air to mix with the cool air.

We have a 2013 Volvo S60 AWD with a turbocharged engine. The car was purchased used in 2016 with 96,000 miles on it. It now has 133,000 miles on it. The oil is changed every 7,000 miles with synthetic. Following the last two oil changes the low oil light has come on after putting between 4,000 and 5,000 miles on the car. Both times it took three quarts of oil to bring back to full. The dealer has checked the car and can't find any leaks, nor is there oil in the driveway where the car is parked. What could be causing the loss of oil and where is it going?

FBMS Raises Over $335K At 24th Annual FoodFest

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS), a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to ending homelessness in Southern Massachusetts, raised more than $335,000 at its 24th annual FoodFest July 31 at The Launch at Hingham Shipyard and Hingham Beer Works.

FoodFest, FBMS' signature fundraiser held each July, raises money to support the agency's range of services for individuals, families, and veterans experiencing, or at risk of, homelessness. The agency assists more than 6,500 people annually by providing emergency shelter, homelessness prevention services, employment programs, and more than 500 permanent supportive housing units.

Funds raised at FoodFest particularly help FBMS close the 54 percent funding gap at its emergency shelters in Quincy and Brockton. Agency leaders had hoped to match last year's FoodFest fundraising total of $320,000, and the event wound up exceeding that goal by more than $15,000.

The fundraiser, attended by approximately 750 people, featured delicious tastings from 40 of the South Shore's most popular restaurants, bakeries and beverage distributors. Guests also were treated to a wine pull, live music, a chance raffle, and a silent auction for an assortment of valuable items.

This year's FoodFest had approximately 80 corporate sponsors, including the following three Presenting Sponsors who were recognized at the event: Arbella Insurance Foundation, Bank of America, and United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley. The event's Premier sponsors were Citizens Bank, Flatley Foundation, Granite Telecommunications, Jack Conway Realtor, and United Way of Greater Plymouth County.

FoodFest's venue sponsors were The Launch at Hingham Shipyard and Hingham Beer Works, and media sponsors were The Patriot Ledger and Wicked Local.

"This year's FoodFest was another reminder that we belong to a wonderful community which goes above and beyond to help our neighbors most in need," FBMS President and CEO John Yazwinski said. "We're incredibly grateful to all of our corporate sponsors, our venue and media sponsors, the vendors, the in-kind auction donors, and the hundreds of individuals who attended the event to send a resounding message of compassion and hope."

During the event, Yazwinski presented the agency's Richard C. & Virginia A. Welch Dedicated Volunteer Award to the volunteers from Hingham Congregational Church, which has been supporting FBMS' mission for three decades. The Rev. Dr. Peter Allen, Libby King, and Pennie Baltera accepted the award on behalf of the volunteer group.

New Craft Beer Celebrates Quincy

'City Of Presidents American Pale Ale' Debuts Here Friday

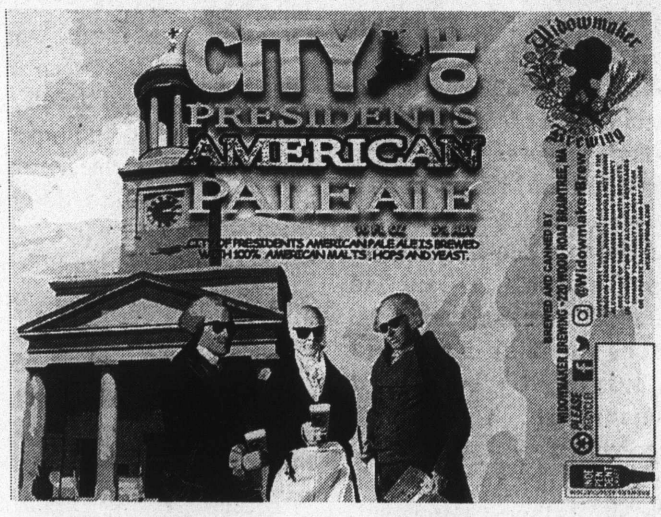

City of Presidents American Pale Ale is scheduled to arrive at Quincy Center bars and restaurants on Friday, Aug. 17, the first craft beer brewed exclusively for distribution in Historic Quincy.

The flavorful, complex pale ale was crafted by Widowmaker Brewing of Wood Road in Braintree.

"This beer celebrates the history of a great American city and pays homage to downtown Quincy's rapid rise as one of the region's most dynamic new dining destinations," said head brewer Ryan Lavery of Widowmaker Brewing, a former Quincy resident. "Quincy businesses and residents have supported our brand in great numbers and we're excited to provide this exclusive offering."

The beer is being released at a time when Quincy Center is enjoying a construction boom and is about to welcome a second wave of new eateries on the heels of last year's arrival of 10 new dining destinations.

Pending newcomers include Idle Hour, a cocktail-centric neighborhood bar featuring dishes from celebrated former Drink chef de cuisine Ashley Gaboriault; Rewild Plant Food + Drink, touted as America's first plant-based beer hall and café; and Belfry, a new urban beer hall from the team behind critically acclaimed Quincy Center cocktail boite The Townshend.

The City of Quincy will celebrate the opening of its new downtown green space, the Hancock-Adams Common, at a ceremony Saturday, Sept. 8. The ceremony will include Mayor Thomas Koch, Gov. Charlie Baker and Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and John Adams biographer David McCullough. The public park will feature green space, fountains and monumental statuary of Quincy natives and Founding Fathers John Hancock and John Adams.

City of Presidents American Pale Ale is a brewed with 100 percent all-American ingredients, including domestic malts and a blend of classic and nouveau American hops: Amarillo, Cascade and Citra.

It's a cloudy hop-forward pale ale in the popular "New England style" of craft beer, but one that features a lemonade-yellow hue from the use of lightly toasted American malts.

The beer is available in 16-ounce cans with a label that features the facade of Quincy landmark Church of the Presidents, plus modernized images of Quincy's favorite sons chilling out with sunglasses drinking this cool new brew: President John Adams, President John Quincy Adams and President of the Second Continental Congress John Hancock.

The label was designed by Quincy artist Jacob Callaway of Verified Beer Traders.

The first run of City of Presidents American Pale Ale will be available exclusively at Quincy Center bars and restaurants, including 16C, Alba, Angelo's Coal Fired Pizza, Cagney's, Fat Cat, The Fours, Fowler House, Fuji at WOC, Idle Hour, Malachy's, Paddy Barry's, The Pour Yard, Rozafa, S6, Shaking Crab, The Townshend and Zef Cicchetti & Raw Bar.

MBTA Projects At Red Line Stations 'Moving Along'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The MBTA's project to rebuild the Wollaston Red Line station remains on schedule, and the transit agency is still preparing a mitigation plan for parking at the North Quincy station once a mixed-use project begins there.

Work is also underway at Quincy Center, where the top levels of the garage are being demolished. The T will soon begins repairs at the Quincy Adams and Braintree garages as well.

The Wollaston station closed in January for demolition, setting the stage for a new station designed to today's standards with elevators providing access to the platform; prior to the ongoing project, Wollaston was the only Red Line station not in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. Sen. John Keenan said the project remains on schedule.

"The Red Line work is moving along. They are doing repairs – substantial repairs – at Braintree and Quincy Adams. You can see the work that is proceeding over at Quincy Center relative to removing the garage. It's like taking Legos down or Jenga, pulling the pieces. Wollaston Center, there is a steel frame up, so that's moving along. I've been told as recently as three days ago that that is on schedule," Keenan said during an interview the first week of August. "That work is quite visible now.

"The bus shuttle service continues. We get virtually no complaints anymore other than some small complaints that may occur... overall, shuttle service seems to be running well and we seem to be getting some positive feedback on it."

Keenan also noted he was able to work with other local lawmakers to urge state officials to stop parking fee increases for North Quincy and Wollaston, and reduce and delay the increases at Quincy Adams and Braintree. The rates at those stations will go from $7 to $9 starting Sept. 1, instead of $10 starting this month as had been initially announced.

"There was a proposed fee increase for parking. We worked with the Department of Transportation and the MBTA on avoiding those increases in North Quincy and Wollaston and decreasing them and pushing them a little back for Quincy Adams in Braintree," Keenan said.

"We had some direct contact and very strong contact with both entities and they understood what

Quincy has been facing and adjusted their parking fee increase for Quincy, so we very much appreciate that."

The MBTA is in the process of reviewing bids for construction of a new 852-space garage at the North Quincy station, the first phase of $205 million project that will include 610 apartments and 50,000 square feet of retail space, Keenan said.

"The next challenge is going to be the North Quincy train station," he said. "The MBTA is working on parking mitigation. We're pushing them as much as we can to put a plan in place. The options are somewhat limited, but nonetheless we're pushing them pretty hard to come up with a parking plan that works."

The parking lot at the Wollaston station remains open during the construction project, with 432 of 538 spaces available for use. Keenan said only a dozen or so people park there each day.

"Wollaston station is not being utilized at all right now by commuters in terms of parking. There may be on any given day 12 to 15 cars there, so those spaces are available," he said. "It will cause people to have to adjust their commuting practices again, but those spaces are available.

"There are occasionally some spaces up at North Quincy, but there is going to a significant number of spaces taken out of service once they start building the garage on the southerly end of the parking lot."

Keenan, who takes the T from his house in Adams Shore to Boston, said commuters have done a good job of adjusting to the closure of Wollaston station.

"People have adjusted. It's pretty interesting," he said. "I know I would oftentimes drive to the Wollaston train station, get on the train at Wollaston. Then initially I was going to Wollaston and getting on the shuttle to North Quincy…but I haven't done that in a while. Now I take the bus at the top of my street to Quincy Center and just get on the train there, or if timing is right I use the commuter rail option into South Station and then hop into the Red Line there. It's working pretty well."

"I can get to the State House faster by bus and T faster than I can by car," Keenan added. "That will hold especially true in the fall once the traffic really picks up again."

In addition to the work at the Red Line stations in Quincy and Braintree, the MBTA is in the process of replacing its entire fleet of Red Line cars at a cost of $452 million. The T is also in the midst of a $186 million project to replace the signal system used on the line. Those improvements will allow the Red Line to run on a more frequent basis, increasing the number of passengers that can be accommodated.

"There should be a model coming shortly of the Red Line car, and I'm looking forward to that," Keenan said. "They recently had the Orange Line model in, and beyond the model they've also had in cars that they're now testing. So the Red Line model will be in shortly and once they work that out, get feedback on it, then they'll start limited production, bring some over, and do the testing. They're working on getting the testing sites all lined up for them. There is still a ways to go, but it's pretty exciting.

"The signal work is progressing as well.

"The combination of a new station at Wollaston, improvements at Quincy Center, Quincy Adams and Braintree, the new construction at North Quincy, plus the signalization, plus the new cars – in about three to five years, the MBTA Red Line south of JFK/UMass is going to be very, very different.

"It will be able to accommodate more passengers with trains coming more frequently – modern trains running on a brand new signal system."

RE Transactions Up 2 Percent; Average Sales Price Up Significantly

While residential and commercial real estate transactions crept slowly higher for the month of July 2018, the average sales price of Norfolk County property remains as hot as the summer's weather.

"During the month of July, a total of 1,796 residential and commercial properties were sold in Norfolk County, representing a modest two percent increase year over year," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell. "This small growth in sales activity, contrasting with the significant increases seen in total dollar sales volume and average sales price for both residential and commercial properties, clearly demonstrates the extremes of the market."

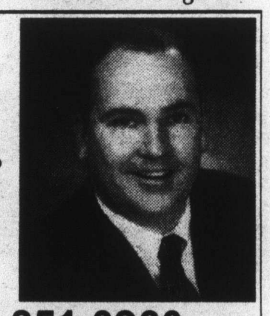

For the month of July, total real estate sales volume was $1.06 billion, a 33 percent increase compared to July 2017. Also, the average sales price, again for both residential and commercial properties, was $835,316, a 29 percent increase compared to the previous year.

"Industry observers," O'Donnell said, "are seeing sellers getting their asking price and in some cases, even more. This data strongly points to the continuing competition amongst prospective buyers for a very limited pool of real estate inventory."

Lending activity for July decreased by four percent countywide. A total of 2,309 mortgages were recorded during the month compared

Close Finishes, Exciting Competition, Amazing Talent At Kelly Track Meet

The 43rd annual Frank Kelly Meet had everything you'd expect from a summer youth track meet: close finishes, exciting competition and amazing talent.

Clubs from Westwood, Brockton, Boston and Hingham descended on Faxon Field July 27th for two hours of competition which ended the spring/summer program for the Quincy Track Club. One hundred and fifty boys and girls ages 5 to 14 competed in long-jump, standing broad-jump, high-jump, shotput, turbo javelin, 100, 200, 400, 800 and 50 meter hurdles.

Quincy Track Club Director Geoff Hennessy was starter and meet director and long time Central Middle School Track Coach Ricardo Cordero coordinated the finish line assisted by Emily and Julia Bryson. The Brysons attended North Quincy High, grew up through the track club and now compete for Brandeis University.

Hundreds of ribbons were given out to all competitors and a special 4 and under mini-dash mid-way through the schedule highlighted the meet.

"We continue to follow the beliefs of our founder, Frank Kelly: training hard, doing your best and showing good sportsmanship always," said Hennessy.

Several QTC members were double winners in the field events.

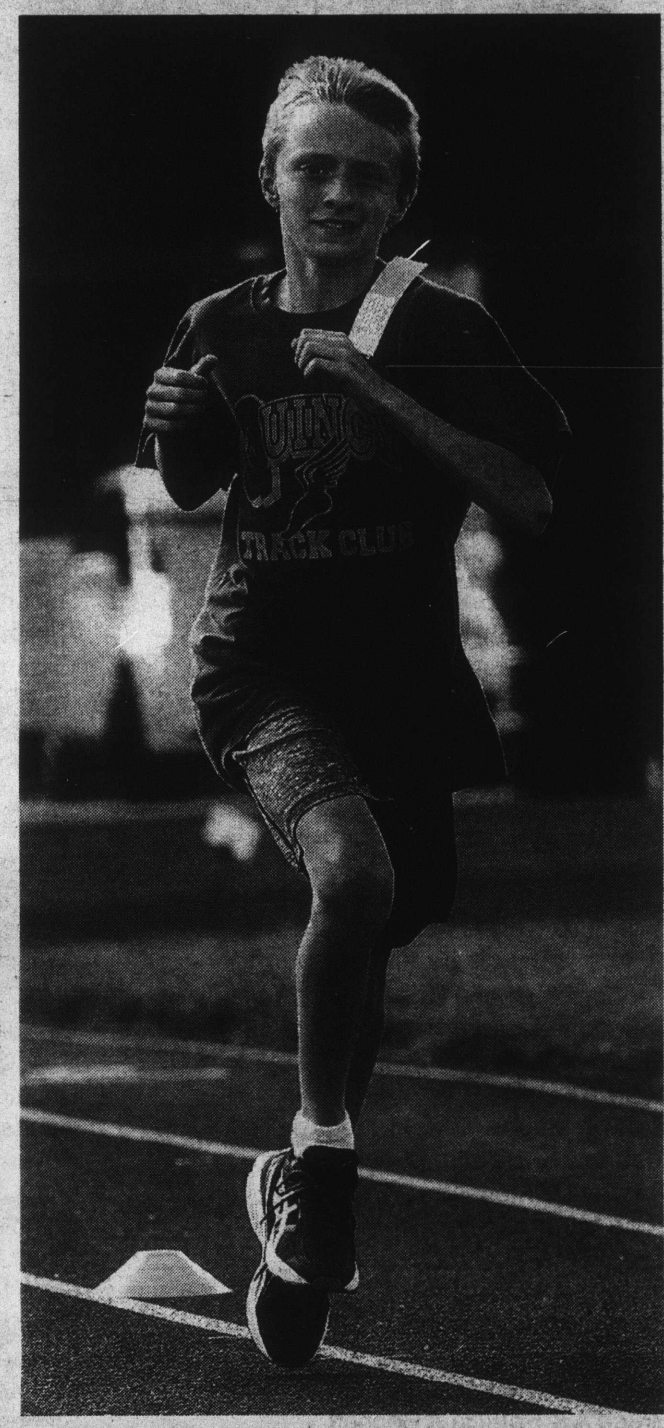

Milan Matijasevic won the boys 5-6 turbo javelin and standing long jump. Eliza Henry took the girls 9-10 long jump and turbo jav. Daithi Quinn won the 11-12 boys shot-put and turbo jav. Claudia O'Neill took the girls 11-12 turbo jav and high jump. Kofi Fordjour won the boys 13-14 long jump and high jump and Jamie Fulton took the girls 13-14 long-jump and Turbo-javelin.

"While it's hard to watch a meet and start it at the same time, it was obvious our kids did well," Hennessy said. "It was also exciting to see a former club member John Fidalgo start up a club in Brockton and bring some of his best athletes to compete against us."

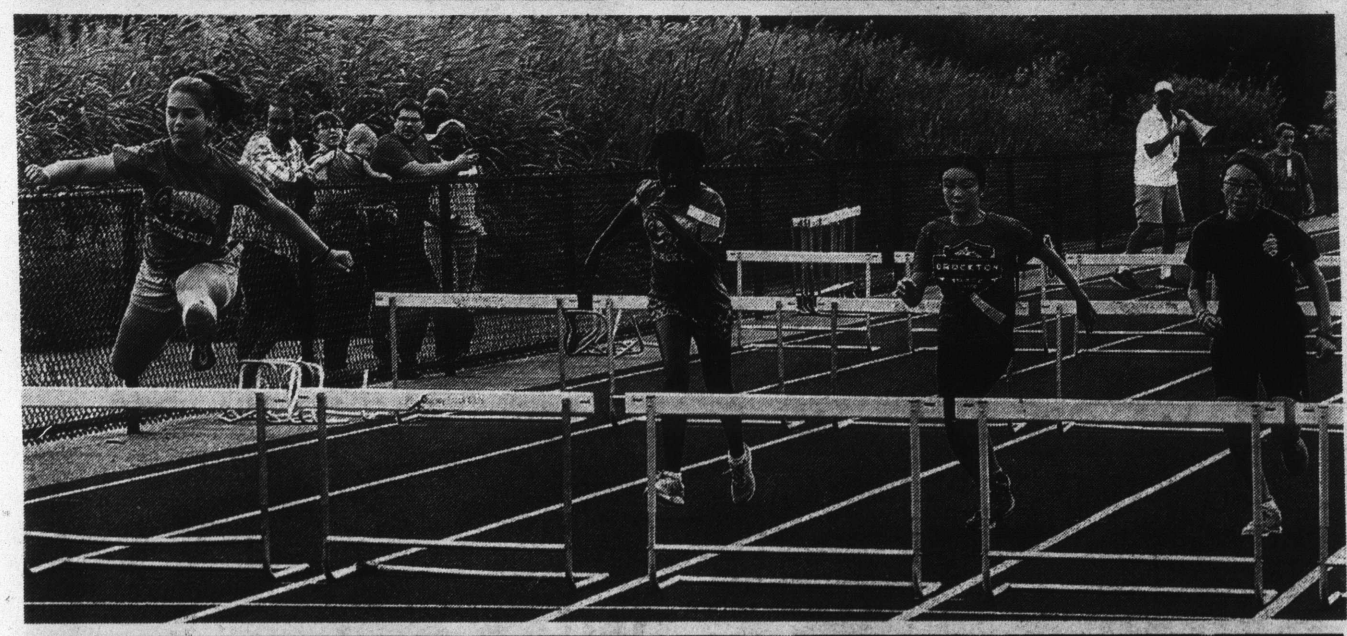

Fidalgo attended North Quincy High where his mom still teaches business education. John ran cross country, track, and played baseball before attending Johnson and Wales University. He taught briefly at North before moving on to Brockton High. He coaches track and cross country for the Boxers and last year began a youth club modeled on the QTC.

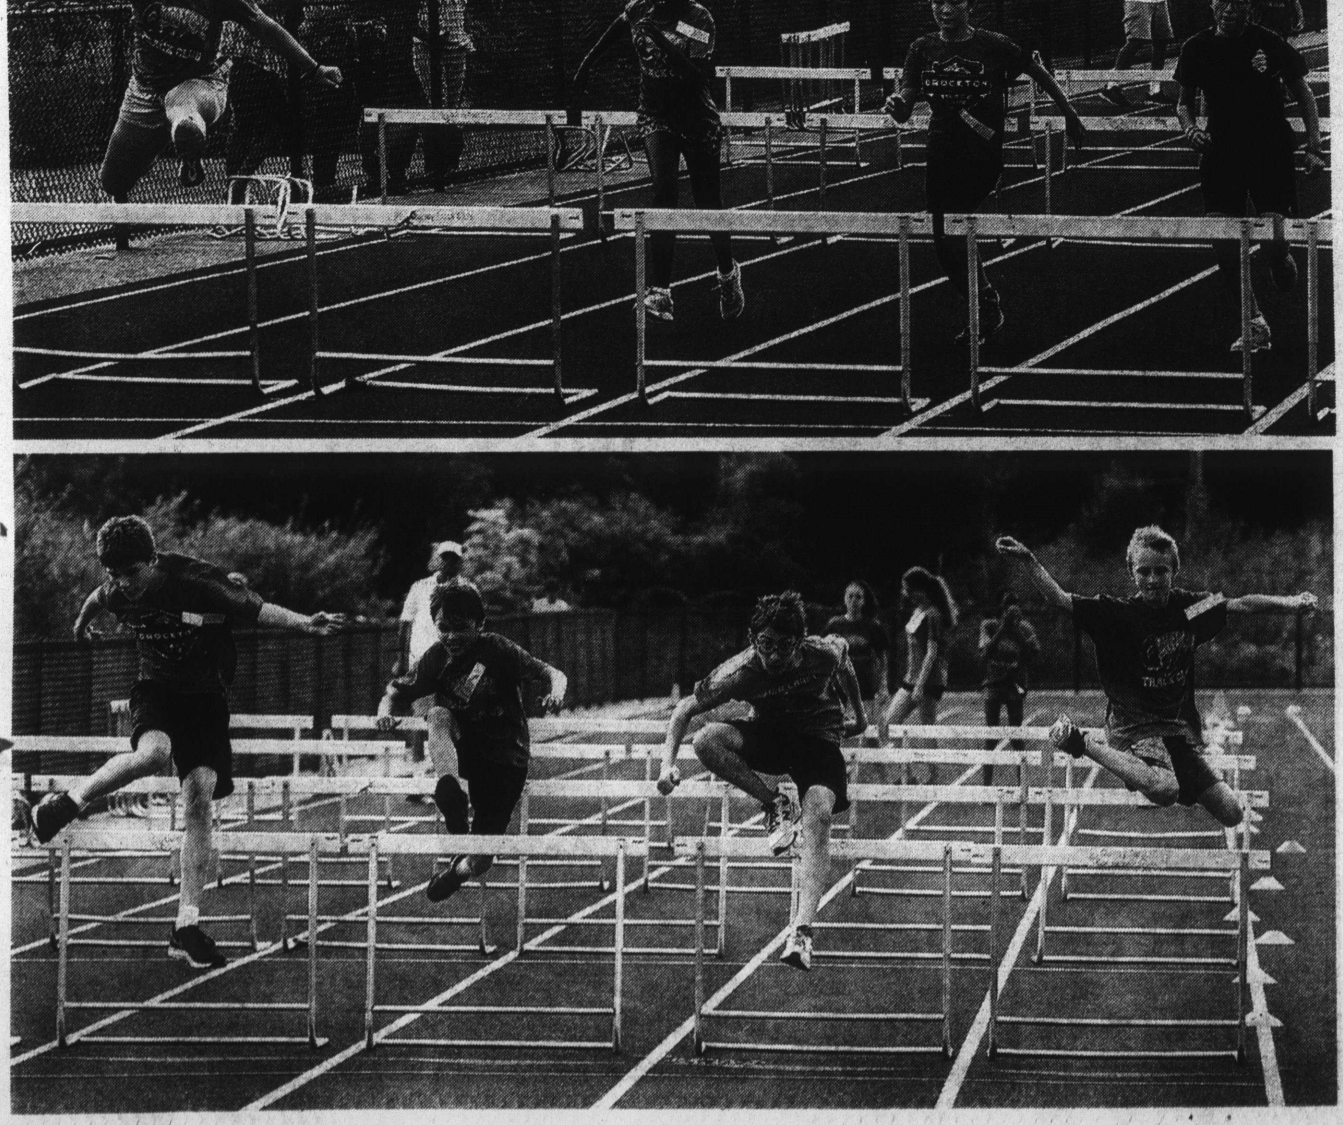

The Kelly meet began promptly at 6 p.m. and concluded just shy of 8 p.m. Helpers, staff and volunteers were treated to pizza courtesy of Romanzza's of Quincy Center.

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

There have been several issues with this model Volvo and oil consumption. The oil is not leaking but burning during the normal combustion process. When an engine burns a lot of oil you will see blue smoke coming out of the tailpipe. Burning one quart of oil every 1,000 miles or so isn't really enough to see. In addition, synthetic oil still burns, but it is not the same blue smoke that convention oil produces. The oil consumption is normally due to worn valve guides, which can be a costly repair. If this were my car with 133,000 miles on it, I would just check the oil every 1,000 miles and add as necessary.

I'm a healthy senior currently driving a 2009 Toyota Camry. I due a fair amount of driving each year and I have been thinking about a new car with the latest safety features. The cars I have been looking at are the Ford Fusion, another Camry, or one of the Subaru models such as the Legacy or Crosstrek. What would be the best choice for a comfortable and quiet ride?

If you don't mind driving a similar car, I think the Toyota Camry would be a good choice. The ride is quiet and smooth and depending on the trim level there is a full suite of safety features. Every Camry gets forward-collision warning, adaptive cruise control, and lane-keeping. In higher-level models blind-spot monitoring and rear cross-traffic alert come standard. If getting through the worst of winter weather is important then I would look at the Subaru Legacy with its standard all-wheel-drive.

Like many of your readers I too leave my car in Florida for six months at a time. I used to put Damp-Rid packets in the car to absorb the moisture build up, but last year they leaked and ruined the car's upholstery. Years back people would put trays of charcoal briquets to absorb any moisture buildup. What do you think of charcoal or is there a better way?

Charcoal briquets can help eliminate odors and some moisture but you need to be careful with what kind of briquets you use. Some briquets have chemicals such as lighter fluid manufactured into them. One option you could try is a solar ventilation fan. These small fans mount in a partially closed window and help keep the air circulating inside the car. The nice thing is these fans run off the power of the sun and it doesn't affect the car's battery life. The constantly moving air is less likely to produce mold.

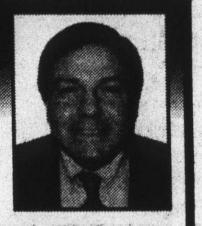

I have an old Ford Bronco and I love this big old truck, but it has one annoying problem: there is a rattle going over bumps. I have had the front end all checked out, the shocks replaced but there is still a rattle. Any thoughts what is could be?

The problem is likely a simple on. The brake pads on these old Broncos and many other vehicles have a metal/spring clip that holds the front brake pads from rattling. At some point during a brake service more than likely the clips were left off. A simple test is drive on a bumpy road where you can hear the rattle. Then drive on the same road while lightly applying the brakes. If the rattle is gone, the clips are missing.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GOING HOLLYWOOD!

If you've ever wondered why so many actors, models, celebs, and media personalities all seem to have such perfect teeth, you should familiarize yourself with "dental veneers." Also referred to as "Hollywood teeth," dental veneers are wafer-thin, custom-made shells of tooth-colored materials (porcelain or resin) that are designed to cover the front surface of teeth. After removing about a half-millimeter of enamel from the tooth surface, the dentist bonds these thin shells to the front of the teeth, effectively changing their color, shape, size, and/or length. Dental veneers are available to anyone looking to improve the aesthetics of his or her smile. They are also routinely used to fix chipped, broken, worn, irregularly shaped, misaligned, and uneven teeth.

It's simple, really. When you look good, you feel good. If your smile is not becoming to you, you should be coming to us for dentistry tailored specifically to your needs. Aren't you curious how today's cosmetic dentistry procedures can virtually change your life? We'd be glad to tell you about the many ways we can help make your smile a dazzling one. Just call us at 617 479-6220. Our family dental practice at 44 Greenleaf Street is geared to your complete oral health and to long-term patient satisfaction. For more information about us, visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Dental veneers are sometimes used as an alternative to orthodontic treatment when patients want to fill the gaps between front teeth that otherwise detract from their smiles."

to 2,407 recorded in July 2017. O'Donnell noted, "It would appear rising interest rates are causing consumers to pause when borrowing money for big ticket expenditure items."

An aberration in the July data was the steep decrease in total residential and commercial borrowing which fell by 79 percent to $992 million. However, this major drop-off can be largely attributed to a $1.6 billion mortgage taken out against a commercial property on the Weymouth and Quincy line in July 2017.

On the consumer front, July also saw a slight three percent increase in the number of Homesteads recorded from the same time last year. "A Homestead is an important consumer protection tool that provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell said.

During July 2018, there were small increases seen in foreclosure activity. A total of 20 foreclosure deeds were recorded during the month compared to 18 in July 2017. In addition, 38 Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process, were filed versus 34 year over year.

"We continue to watch closely the foreclosure numbers here in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lending institution. Another option is to contact the Massachusetts Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (CARD) at (617) 727-8400.

"Norfolk County continues to mirror eastern Massachusetts when it comes to limited real estate inventory, resulting in higher housing costs," O'Donnell said. "The reduced lending numbers also tell us that consumers are looking at the impact of higher interest rates before making major purchases, especially in the area of real estate."

Beth Shalom – Blue Hills Open House Aug. 30

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will hold an Open House and Ice Cream Social on Thursday evening, Aug. 30th, for prospective members and Religious School students.

It is free and open to anyone interested in the synagogue and its activities, including its Rabbi Jerome Weistrop Religious School, but RSVP's are requested.

The Open House will be at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge St.) in Milton, with overflow parking on nearby Pleasant Street only.

Families with children are invited to join our Religious School families for the Ice Cream Social from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Adults are welcome to join us from 7:15-8 p.m. for dessert and beverages. All interested families in the South Shore and Greater Boston area are invited to attend and meet Rabbi Alfred Benjamin and Education Director Nancy Mollitor, learn about the congregation's programs and activities, tour our building, and get information about our Religious School and joining our synagogue family.

First time attendees to either part of the Open House will receive one complimentary ticket for either our second day Rosh Hashanah Congregational Service, or the Kol Nidre Service on Erev Yom Kippur. In addition, all are invited to attend our First Day Rosh Hashanah Afternoon Community Service, 3:30-4:30 (no ticket required).

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills is currently accepting registrations to its Religious School, which meets on Sunday mornings and Tuesday afternoons. The school has small class sizes and a very active and innovative curriculum, including unique holiday celebrations, monthly pre-school-age Story Hour, field trips, Bar/Bat Mitzvah classes, and Holiday Family Activity Days. The school is also a partner in the Passport to Israel Program, which helps fund teen trips to Israel. For Religious School information, call the synagogue office at 617-698-3394.

OBITUARIES

Annunziata Giannandrea, 79

ANNUNZIATA GIANNAANDREA

A funeral Mass for Annunziata "Nancy" (Nardelli) Giannandrea, age 79, a longtime Quincy resident, was celebrated Aug. 10 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Giannandrea died peacefully Aug. 6 at home, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born and raised in Atina, Province of Frosinone, Italy, to the late Orazio and Beatrice (DeAngelis) Nardelli. Mrs. Giannandrea immigrated to the United States on Dec. 1, 1955. She lived briefly in Weston, followed by Watertown for twelve years, before settling in Quincy for fifty-one years.

Mrs. Giannandrea was a dedicated homemaker but as a young woman had worked several years for the Raytheon Corporation. She enjoyed knitting, word search puzzles, and was well-known for her cooking talents. She was a Boston sports fan and loved soccer and her favorite Italian team, Juventus F.C.

Most of all, Mrs. Giannandrea was devoted to her family and especially to her cherished grandchildren, supporting all their many activities and accomplishments.

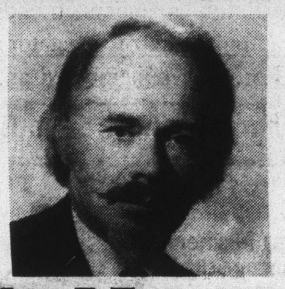

Beloved wife of the late Antonio Giannandrea. Devoted mother of Lia T. McInerney of Wareham, Tricia Keane and her husband Christopher of Braintree, and Tony Giannandrea of Quincy. Loving Nonna of Ryan, Brenna, Michael, Olivia, Nolan, Avery, Shealy, and Nathaniel. Dear sister of Lucia DiDuca and her husband Marco of Framingham. She is also survived by many nieces, nephews, and in-laws.

Entombment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

For those who wish, donations in Nancy's memory may be made to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, 220 North Main Street, Suite 104, Natick, MA 01760 or by visiting cff.org.

IN MEMORIAM

JENS E. THORNTON

Josephine J. Palmisano, 100

JOSEPHINE J. PALMISANO

A funeral Mass for Josephine Joanne Palmisano, age 100, of Scituate, formerly a lifelong Quincy resident, was celebrated Aug. 11 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Ms. Palmisano died peacefully Aug. 5 at Life Care Center of the South Shore in Scituate, in the comfort of her loving family.

She was born and raised in Quincy to the late Anthony and Josephine (LaMantia) Palmisano. She was a graduate of the former Saint John's Elementary School, Quincy High School and Burrough's Business School. She had lived in Scituate for four years.

Ms. Palmisano was employed for many years in Boston as an administrative assistant to a financial analyst. She was a former member of the Quincy Historical Society.

After her retirement, Ms. Palmisano enjoyed traveling throughout the United States, many foreign countries and enjoyed winters in Silver Springs, Florida, for many years. Ms. Palmisano loved to bowl, play cards and work on craft projects. She will be lovingly remembered and sadly missed by all.

One of nine siblings, Ms. Palmisano was the devoted sister of Catherine F. Logren of Scituate and pre-deceased by Anna Marie Palmisano, Leonard Palmisano, Rose Russo, Norman Palumbo, Anthony Palmisano, Mary Farrell and Christine Palmisano. "Auntie Jo" is also survived by many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Perkins School for the Blind, 175 N Beacon Street, Watertown, MA 02472.

Toivo J. Karhu, 98

A memorial service for Toivo Jonas Karhu, 98, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday in Linden Ponds Performing Arts Center.

Mr. Karhu died Aug. 9.

He proudly served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and the Korean Conflict. He worked at the Fore River Shipyard as a heat treater for Vulcan Tool Company, where he worked for 30 years.

Mr. Karhu was an active member and former deacon at Park Street Church in Boston, serving on their board of missions as well as being a tutor for ESL F.O.C.U.S for 26 years. He was a former member of the Quincy Tennis Club and enjoyed playing tennis at Linden Ponds. Throughout his lifetime, he also donated over 100 pints of blood to the American Red Cross.

Cherished husband of the late Mabel Karhu and loving friend of the late Elizabeth Harvey. Devoted father of Paul Karhu and his wife Marcia of Dennis and Joyce Wells of Weymouth. Loving brother of Hilma Albrecht of N.J. Cherished grandfather of Ken Matsumoto and Mio Cha of R.I., George Matsumoto and his wife Samantha of CA and Kyoko Takanata of CA. William T. Roche, Jr.

WILLIAM T. ROCHE, JR.

A funeral Mass for William T. Roche, Jr. of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy and South Boston, was celebrated Tuesday in St. Jerome Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Roche died Aug. 8.

He was born and raised in South Boston, one of three children. He was a proud 1957 graduate of South Boston High School, where he met his childhood sweetheart, Maureen O'Brien. They later married and raised a family of their own, spending 57 years of devoted marriage together. Faith, family, and friendship were the cornerstones of his life.

Mr. Roche worked as a lineman for Boston Edison for 39 years, retired as a court officer in the MA Trial Court, and was a Norfolk County deputy sheriff. His greatest joys were watching his children and grandchildren at their various sports and activities. He himself was a gifted athlete playing football for South Boston High School, and for the local semi-pro team. He ran track and also played softball in the local league. Mr. Roche will be remembered as a gentleman, with a strong moral character, and a kind heart.

Beloved husband of Maureen A. (O'Brien) Roche of Weymouth. Loving father of Thomas Roche and his significant other Jacqueline Duffy of Quincy, Joan Barove and her husband Robert of Plymouth, Maureen Fallon and her husband Brian of Stoughton, William Roche and his wife Stefanie of Braintree, and Robert Roche and his wife Maureen of Weymouth. Brother of Francis Roche and his wife Marie of FL, and the late Catherine Knox and her husband William. Papa to Robert, William, Jenna, Joseph, Brian, Victoria, Kyle, Thomas, Shea, Jerard, and Nevin. Also survived by many cousins, nieces and nephews.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church, 1545 Tremont St., Boston, MA 02120.

John J. Sullivan, Jr., 70

JOHN J. SULLIVAN, JR.

A funeral service for John Joseph Sullivan, Jr., 70, of Wollaston, was held Tuesday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. Sullivan died unexpectedly on Aug. 7.

He was the son of the late John J. Sullivan, Sr. of Ireland and Helen (Healy) Sullivan of Somerville. He was raised in the home of the late Lawrence and Bridget O'Sullivan (Mum and Dad) of West Roxbury, along with their four daughters, the late Ellen (O'Sullivan) Yienger, Anne (O'Sullivan) Giambruno, Virginia O'Sullivan and the late Mary (O'Sullivan) Ryan.

Mr. Sullivan is survived by his son, Matthew J. Sullivan of New York City, and many cousins, nieces and nephews.

He was a graduate of St. John's Preparatory School and Boston College, with a degree in accounting. He was a dedicated employee, of 26 years, at Superior Packaging & Finishing in Braintree.

Mr. Sullivan was known for his kindheartedness with his family and friends along with his spirit and generosity for those less fortunate. He was a proud cancer survivor. He loved to play cards with his close friends, "The Mustache Club," and learning to cook and garden from his longtime friends Betty and Frank. He was an avid greeting card sender and always made the time to pen a note to the people he cared for and loved.

10-4 my friends!

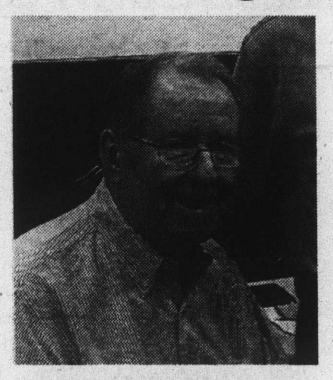

Private interment at St. Joseph's Cemetery at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the Joe Andruzzi Foundation's "UpBeat Cancer" and/or The Berkshire Hills Music Academy.

John F. Harrington, 83

A funeral Mass for John F. "Jack" Harrington, 83, of Quincy, a respected educator and long-time department head at Quincy High School, will be celebrated at 10 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Harrington died Sunday.

JOHN F. HARRIINGTON

Born and raised in Dorchester, he was the third of four children born to the late George A. and Mary E. (Curley) Harrington. Mr. Harrington graduated Boston Latin School and received his undergraduate and Masters from Boston College, where he was active in the ROTC Program and remained a strong supporter of his alma mater. He joined the U.S. Army and served his country with honor during the Korean War as an Army intelligence officer. He was discharged with the rank first lieutenant.

As a student of history and with a love of learning, teaching was natural choice for the man so many of Quincy's sons and daughters would come to know as "Mr. Harrington." He served as coordinator and department head for the social studies program at Quincy High for many, many years before retiring in 1997.

Mr. Harrington was active for several years with the Quincy Retired Teachers Assn., was a consultant and benefactor to the Howard County (Md.) Conservancy, was a former member and past exalted ruler of the Braintree Lodge of Elks, and served as a past chairman and member of the Sagamore Place Condominium Board of Trustees.

He was the brother of H. Claire Harrington of Kittery, ME, Janet M. Harrington of Quincy and the late James Harrington. Godfather of Phillip A. Johnnene. He is also survived by cousins, extended family, and many dear friends including Rev. Fr. Robert Johnnene, OFM.

Visiting hours were 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday in Hamel-Lydon Chapel & Cremation Service of Massachusetts, 650 Hancock St., Quincy. A funeral will be held there at 9 a.m. Thursday.

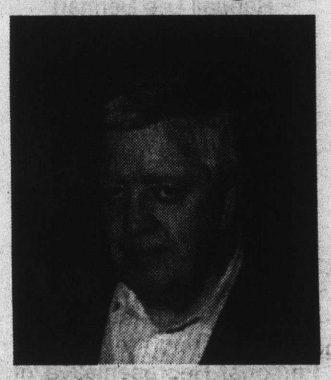

Private interment at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the Quincy Catholic Collaborative, 386 Hancock St., N. Quincy MA 02171 or to the Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Fund, Inc. c/o Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, MA 02169

John A. Hagerty

A funeral Mass for John A. "Jack" Hagerty of Quincy will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Hagerty died Aug. 11.

JOHN A. HAGERTY

The beloved husband of the late Mary (Grant) Hagerty. Devoted father of Kerry Whooley and her husband James of Quincy. Brother of David Hagerty and his wife Carol of Billerica, Ann Leurini and her husband Bob of Bridgewater and the late Daniel Hagerty and his wife Marney of Quincy. Cherished Pa to Faith, Tom, Will and Matt Whooley all of Quincy. Jack is also survived by many nieces, nephews, and brother- and sisters-in-law.

Mr. Hagerty grew up in Dorchester. He attended St. Mark's Grammar School, Christopher Columbus High School and graduated from Northeastern University. He served in the United States Marine Corps and rose to the rank of sergeant.

After his military career and upon graduation from Northeastern University, Mr. Hagerty began his career as a coordinator for Boston Edison, where he worked for more than 35 years. He enjoyed following the New England Patriots but his true passion was the Boston Red Sox; he was their biggest fan.

He will be remembered as a loving and devoted family man. His family is saddened by his loss, but they are grateful for all the blessings he brought into their lives. He will be dearly missed.

Visiting hours were 4 to 8 p.m. Wednesday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held there at 9:45 a.m. Thursday.

Interment at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Dianne E. Mullaney

Visiting hours for Diane E. (Mignosa) Mullaney of Quincy were held Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. in the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton, closing with a funeral service.

Mrs. Mullaney died at home on Aug. 11 after a courageous struggle with addiction.

In the face of it all she brought much love and light to those around her.

Beloved daughter of Andrew of Quincy and the late Joan Mignosa. Devoted mother of Stephanie and Nicholas Mullaney of Quincy. Sister of Linda Mignosa of Quincy, James Mignosa of Winthrop and the late Janet and late baby Joseph Mignosa.

Private interment.

Robert G. Noble, Sr., 92

A funeral Mass for Corporal Robert Gerard "Bob" Noble, Sr., 92, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in Albert the Great Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Noble died honorably in his sleep on Aug. 7.

ROBERT G. NOBLE, SR.

He was a World War II veteran of the United States Army Air Corps, 87th Infantry "Golden Acorn" Division, United States Air Force Reserve, Ex-Prisoner of War and a Bronze Star recipient. He was captured by the Germans two days before his 19th birthday on Dec. 16, 1944 in Alsace-Lorraine, France. He was liberated by the British Army 122 days later on April 16, 1945. Mr. Noble was a proud veteran and served as past commander of the Massachusetts State and Southeastern Chapter of the American Ex-POW Organization and was a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post 294, American Legion.

Mr. Noble returned home to Dorchester, where he met and married the love of his life, the late Gloria A. Noble (Dunn). They were married 63 years. Mr. Noble was a proud and active alumni member of the Boston College, Class of 1951. In his professional life, Mr. Noble was an industrial engineer and an employee of the United States Postal Service. In 1952, Mr. and Mrs. Noble crossed the bridge and raised their family in Quincy.

Mr. Noble was the patriarch of his family and we all learned from his example. He was the loving father of Robert Noble, Jr. (Donna), Alicia Gardner (late William Sr.), Nancy Noble (Charles McLaughlin) and Andrea White (Roger Sr.). He was the treasured grandfather of Christopher Noble (Kelly), Elizabeth Gatz (Steve), Nancy DeLisle (Eugene), Kathryn Noble, William Gardner Jr. (Haley), Robert Gardner (Caroline), Julia White, Roger White Jr., Matthew McLaughlin (Beth) and Peter McLaughlin (Lauren), great-grandfather and friend of Macayla Noble, Devon and Meredith Gatz, Andrew and Nathan DeLisle, Desmond and Quinn Gardner, Baby Gardner due in November, Ben, Tyler, Emily, Ansley, Louisa, Winn and Johnny McLaughlin and great-great grandfather of Aliyah Noble. He is predeceased by his loving parents Raymund and Agnes Noble and his brother and sister-in-law Paul and Fran Noble. He is survived by his sister and brother-in-law Marie and Frank Stapleton, sister-in-laws Josephine Noble and Alicia Coletti (late David Sr.) and adored by 19 nieces, nephews and their children.

Mr. Noble truly loved and believed deeply in his faith, community and country.

He was a proud and faithful parishioner of St. Albert the Great Parish in Weymouth, where he was a member of the Voice of the Faithful and an active participant of their successful perpetual vigil to keep the parish open, he could regularly be found at their Saturday evening mass and other various events.

Always with camera in hand, there wasn't an event in the city of Quincy that Mr. Noble missed. For almost 30 years, he documented both Quincy's history and current events through his work for The Quincy Sun, Quincy Access Television and for his own personal joy.

Mr. Noble was an active participant in many civic organizations including the Quincy Christmas Parade Committee (35-year member and 2014 grand marshal), Quincy First Night Committee (10 years), Quincy City-Wide and Ward 2 Democratic Committees (life-long member), Quincy Access Television Board of Directors, Quincy Historical Society and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

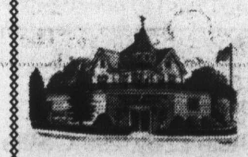

Together, Mr. and Mrs. Noble were the recipients of many awards, including the Jewish War Veterans Citizen of the Year, Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year, Elks Distinguished Citizen Award, Paul D. Harold Award, Elizabeth Betty Swanton Community Service Award and the Dennis F. Ryan Democrat of the Year Award.

On National Former Prisoner of War Recognition Day, April 9, 2015, Mr. Noble had the honor of laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Virginia. Surrounded by 40 family members, friends and hundreds of spectators, he proudly remembered and represented his fellow Ex-POWs in what was moving and proud moment in Mr. Noble's life.

Interment with full military honors was at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cyril P. Morrisette Post 294, Attn: Robert Lewis, 81-83 Liberty St., Quincy, MA 02169 (donations will benefit their scholarship fund) or St. Albert the Great Parish, 1130 Washington St., Weymouth, MA 02189.

Bidding documents will also be made available online at atjplanroom.com, click on Public Jobs, and then the project name. Drawings and specifications will be available to view and download. To download you must register for a free account, which will place you on the plan holders list to receive addendums, by email when issued. You can also submit your pricing electronically online at icdinc.com. You must register for a free account, which assign you a vendor number and allow electronic calculations.

The South-West Middle School is a single-phase project scheduled to install from March 4, 2019 to March 29, 2019. The installation will occur during normal construction hours, 7:30am - 3:30pm, Monday through Friday. The elevator will be available for use. This project is subject to construction progress schedules. The City of Quincy reserves the right to change the timetable due to unforeseen conditions. The Owner reserves the right to change the construction schedule with a 30-day notice to the awarded vendors.

All bids shall be submitted in accordance with the "Instructions to Bidders/General Conditions" of the Contract Document. Each bid (CONTRACT DOCUMENT form, VENDOR APPLICATION AND PRICE TABLE) shall be submitted in quadruplicate on the forms provided by Integrated Contract Design, Inc., and shall be accompanied by a bid security deposit for five (5) percent of the base bid amount as surety for the acceptance of the contract. Bid security deposits will be accepted in the form of a bid bond, certified check, cashier's check or treasurer's check issued by a responsible bank or trust company, payable to the City of Quincy. Bid security deposits will be returned within thirty (30) days to all unsuccessful bidders.

The bid security deposit for each successful bidder shall be retained by the City of Quincy. The bid security deposit shall be returned to the awarded bidder upon receipt of a signed contract and a one hundred (100) percent performance and payment bond. In lieu of providing a one hundred (100) percent performance and payment bond, a security deposit for five (5) percent of the contract amount will be accepted in the form of a certified check, cashier's check or treasurer's check issued by a responsible bank or trust company, payable to City of Quincy as surety for the faithful performance of his/her Contract and for the payment of all persons performing labor or furnishing materials in connection therewith.

Bids may be mailed and/or delivered to the address below, prior to the time specified above, and addressed as follows: City of Quincy, City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169, Attn: Kathryn Logan, Purchasing Agent, Purchasing Dept.

All documents must be submitted in a sealed envelope, plainly marked with the reference, South-West Middle School FF&E, 2017. These sealed envelopes shall have the name and address of the bidder, section number(s) and section title(s) prominently indicated on the bid envelope.

Any bid submitted will be binding for forty-five (45) working days beyond the bid opening. Bids will be awarded within forty-five (45) working days of the bid opening. The City of Quincy reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, or any part of any bid, if it is in the public's interest to do so.

Bidder attention is called to the fact that this project is required to comply with, in addition to all other requirements of this Contract Document, the Equal Employment Opportunity, Anti-Discrimination, Minority, and Affirmative Action Regulations of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty might upset some people, but you inevitably win more admirers for having the courage to tell the truth when others are more likely to scramble for cover.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your efforts to defend your project begin to show favorable results. You should soon be able to win over even the most determined detractors who had lined up against it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You win praise for your selfless efforts in a very difficult situation. But be careful not to allow your generous nature to be exploited by those who have their own agenda.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A trusted colleague sheds light on a recent spate of puzzling workplace situations. This should give you the information you need to bring to your superior's attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in workplace management could be helpful for talented Leos and Leonas who have been waiting to have their accomplishments rewarded by receptive leadership.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding between you and someone you care for should be corrected immediately. This relationship is too important to lose over a bruised ego.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A welcome piece of good news helps clear the air in a family situation. A job-related incident also eases as more information provides a clearer focus on the problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Quick action to heal bruised feelings pays off in a big way. Now you'll be able to move forward with your plans without that problem holding you back.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your creativity combined with a positive attitude should give you a considerable edge in finding a way to get around the negativity you've run into.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That sudden streak of stubbornness could cause some problems. Try to be more open to helpful suggestions and more flexible in making needed changes.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Now that that special relationship appears to be well and truly restored, you can spend more time dealing with those long-needed workplace changes.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new opportunity sounds promising. But watch out for any conditions that might be attached. Before making a decision, ask that each one be explained in detail.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can be distracted by promises of good times, yet you ultimately reach the goals you set for yourself.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – August 16 marks the 41st anniversary of the passing of "The King of Rock & Roll," Elvis Presley. I remember early radio reports saying Elvis was suffering from colon cancer, but they were quickly eliminated from future coverage, which might explain the laundry list of drugs, as later reported, he used in relieving the pain of his worsening colon problems. He reportedly spent the last night of his life in his room, with daughter, Lisa Marie, then took a large amount of drugs and went into his bathroom to die. He was just 42.

Now, more than 40 years later, his wife, Priscilla Presley, has revealed in interviews, including in the HBO documentary, "Elvis Presley: The Searcher," that she believes he planned his demise. Two years after the death of his longtime friend and road manager, Joe Esposito, new details surfaced. Allegedly, when Elvis died, his longtime manager, Colonel Tom Parker, sent Esposito to Graceland to clean up all remaining drug bottles and instructed him to take away a suicide note written by Elvis, which emerged last December. It said, "I'm sick and tired of my life, I need a long rest." Elvis' stepbrother, Rick Stanley, publicly admitted: "The handwritten note appears to be genuine to me. It's a clear indication suicide was on his mind."

If you wait long enough, when the people who suppress the truth pass on, the truth comes out, as it has with Marilyn Monroe and JFK's deaths. The Colonel preferred to have us believe Elvis was a drug addict rather than lose the insurance money for the gigs he couldn't play. From the times I met Elvis, I don't believe he was sick of his life, but could no longer endure the pain and suffering from chronic constipation.

Winning an Oscar for "Three Billboards" has made Sam Rockwell as hot as a bonfire. In addition to the upcoming "Blaze," for actor/director Ethan Hawke, with Steve Zahn (out Sept. 7), and "Backseat," with Christian Bale, Amy Adams and Steve Carell (Dec. 14), he also has "The Best of Enemies," with Taraji P. Henson; "Blue Iguana," with Ben Schwartz; animated comedy "The One and Only Ivan," with Helen Mirren, Angelina Jolie, Bryan Cranston and Danny Devito; and "JoJo Rabbit," with Scarlett Johansson, awaiting release dates. Rockwell also will play Bob Fosse, who won an Oscar, a Tony and an Emmy in the same year (for "Cabaret," "Pippin" and "Liza With a Z") to Michelle Williams' Gwen Verdon – Lola in "Damn Yankees" (1958) and "Cocoon" 1985 – in an as-yet-untitled eight episode FX limited series produced by Lin-Manuel Miranda. Fosse wrote and directed his autobiography, "All That Jazz" (1979), and as Robin Williams referenced in "The Birdcage," "Fosse, Fosse, Fosse!"

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Tin Candy Pail– An attractive box can help sell a product, especially if it can be reused in a new way. Since the 19th century, candy containers have been made to attract buyers. Figural glass bottles were first made in the shape of the Liberty Bell in 1876. Papier-mache animals with removable heads and hollow stomachs, and lithographed tin boxes, pails and even figural tins were used later. All of these are collected today, and some sell for hundreds of dollars.

Canco is the name found on a series of lithographed tin pails that held candy by Lovell & Covell, a candy company in Fulton, Massachusetts. The pails are decorated with nursery-rhyme figures. The Queen of Hearts, Three Little Pigs, Little Red Riding Hood and Peter Cottontail are the easiest to find in the series. In excellent condition, they retail for over $100. The Canco mark was used from 1910 to 1921 by the American Can Company, a 1901 firm.

If vintage candy containers are not modern enough to be of interest, consider the most popular candy container collected now, the container and dispenser for Pez. The first ones were made in 1949 and thousands of different heads have been used on other Pez dispensers.

Q: I have a lovely gutta-percha hand mirror and am looking for information as to how to care for it. I can see a change in color (turning to a beige) in areas and think it might be drying out. I don't know if that's correct, but it needs help and I would like to preserve it. Should I be using some kind of oil to nourish it?

A: Gutta-percha is made from sap from trees found primarily in Malaysia. It was molded and used to make toilet articles, canes, golf balls, knife handles, picture frames and other items in the 19th century. Daguerreotypes often were framed in molded black cases that were mistakenly called gutta-percha. The cases were made of a black mixture of wood and shellac. Today gutta-percha is used by dentists, who use it to fill root canals. Gutta-percha deteriorates when exposed to sunlight and can change color. Don't use oil to "nourish" it. Some oils will dissolve gutta-percha.

What numbers go in the two corners of the last square?

©2018 King Features Syndicate

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was British Prime Minister Winston Churchill who made the following sage observation: "A lie gets halfway around the world before the truth has a chance to get its pants on."

* There are lots of sports fans out there, and a lot of sports to enjoy: football, basketball, soccer, baseball, hockey...olive oil wrestling? OK, maybe there aren't a lot of oiled wrestling events here in America, but in Turkey it's the national sport. Kirkpinar, as it's known there, has been popular since the Ottoman Empire. The Turkish town of Edirne has been hosting the annual tournament since 1361

* If you do much printing, you might not be surprised to learn that if you figure out the cost by volume, printer ink costs far more than Dom Perignon champagne or Chanel No. 5 perfume.

* The name of Alcatraz Island – famed location of a high-security prison that's now a tourist attraction – comes from the Spanish "Isla de los Alcatraces," or "Island of Pelicans."

* The murre, a bird found in the Arctic, actually dives into the water and swims to catch the small fish that comprise its diet. Interestingly, its eggs aren't like those of any other bird in the world: The whites are blue, not white, and the yolks are bright red.

* Those who study such things claim that the oceans eventually will dry up – in about a billion years or so.

* The Transportation Security Administration banned cigarette lighters on carry-on luggage between 2005 and 2007. During that time, TSA screeners confiscated 22,978 lighters every day. Safe disposal of those lighters cost the taxpayers approximately $4 million every year.

Thought for the Day: "In this world there are only two tragedies. One is not getting what one wants, and the other is getting it. The last is much the worst."

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* If you often wake up in the morning with a neckache, try a new pillow. You can get them with cooling gel inserts, or ones designed especially for side sleepers or in ergonomic shapes. There must be one that will help you wake up refreshed.

* "I save the Tyvek envelopes from Federal Express and other mailings to make cheap, sturdy aprons for my children's art projects. The material is really durable, and it doesn't cost me a thing, so I can throw it away without washing if I have a mind to." – A Reader via email

* "It's time to clean the window screens again, but this year I busted out my small shop vacuum to clean them without having to remove the screens from the window itself. It did a pretty good job and was easy to port around the house." – D.L. in Pennsylvania

* "I had a super-cute sock with a hole in the toe, and although I didn't want to wear it, I wanted to keep it. I snipped the foot portion off and now use it as a bottle warmer or a condensation catcher, depending on what is in the drinking vessel. It's easy to slip on, and works like a charm."– A Reader via email

* Back to school hack: A little lemon juice on a cotton swab can help "erase" highlighter marks on glossy paper.

* Clean your air ducts in one fell swoop by removing the grates and lining them up on a sheet outside. I use my driveway, but you could use a deck or patio. Lay the sheet flat, then line the grates up. Scrub with a brush and soapy water, then use a hose to rinse. The sheet keeps ground dirt off the grates, and the water goes right through the sheet. Let dry and replace.

Statues On The Move

NEW BRONZE STATUE honoring American Revolution Patriot John Hancock is lowered by workers to its granite pedestal at the soon-to-open Hancock-Adams Common in Quincy Center Monday. Hancock's left hand is holding a copy of the Declaration of Independence. He was the president of the Second Continental Congress and first signer of that famous document. The Hancock statue, along with a statue honoring Second President John Adams, will be dedicated at a ceremony Saturday, Sept. 8 at 10:30 a.m. Below: the Quincy Firemen's Memorial Statue was removed from its base at Mount Wollaston Cemetery last Friday. Shown in the photo is Nick Batzell of Skylight Studios, Woburn, carefully guiding the Firemen's Memorial onto a truck as Irene Tash and Francis Tash of Clark's Transport, Vermont, look on. The firemen's statue will be refurbished and returned to the cemetery sometime next year. A photo of the Adams statue arriving Tuesday appears on Page 17. Higher Seawall Seen For Adams Shore, HN 1st Phase: Chickatabot Rd. To Babcock St.

2nd Phase: Babcock St. To Bayswater Rd.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy is planning to replace 8,000 linear feet of seawall between Adams Shore and Houghs Neck with a taller structure meant to better repel the ocean, but some residents say the current plan does not go far enough.

City officials and representatives from Tighe & Bond, the engineering firm working with Quincy to design the new seawall, outlined their plans for the project during an Aug. 15 community meeting at City Hall. More than 100 residents were in attendance.

The seawall along Quincy Bay would be done in two phases, with the first phase taking place from Chickatabot Road to Babcock Street. The second phase goes from Babcock Street to Bayswater Road.

The project requires approval from seven different federal, state and local permitting bodies, including the Quincy Conservation Commission, which is slated to hear the proposal at its meeting Sept. 5. Chris Walker, the chief of staff to Mayor Thomas Koch, said there is no timeline yet for construction given the number of permits the city must obtain.

"The construction timeline will come when design and permitting are several steps down the road," Walker said.

David Murphy of Tighe & Bond said the first phase is expected to cost up to $8.5 million. The total cost for both phases could exceed $15 million, Walker said. The city will seek state and federal money to complete the project – a state grant and matching funds from the city are paying for the design of the new seawall – but Koch is committed to the replacing the seawall even if no outside funding is

35 Car Breaks Reported In North Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy police are urging the public to lock their car doors and remove valuables from their vehicle after nearly three dozen car break-ins were reported in North Quincy in recent days.

The first six break-ins were reported in the area of 2 Hancock St. and the Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., overnight on Aug. 16 into Aug. 17. Entry to all vehicles was gained by smashing a window, said Sgt. Karyn Barkas.

Eighteen more break-ins were reported Saturday.

Eleven were in the lower-level parking garage of the Mellen Bray House, 10 Weston Ave. Entry to all vehicles was gained by smashing a window, Barkas said. Police believe the breaks occurred between 6 and 6:25 p.m. that evening, based on one victim's statement.

Seven break-ins occurred at Quincy Commons, located on Canton Street and French Street. One vehicle owner told police his vehicle had been parked in the lot for about 30 minutes when he returned to it around 7:35 p.m. and noticed the break-in.

City Receives $6M For Climate Mitigation Projects

Total State Aid For Quincy: $47M In FY 19

With the end of the Massachusetts Legislature's 2017-2018 formal sessions on July 31st, several major pieces of legislation were passed by the House and Senate and sent to Governor Charles D. Baker for his review.

In addition to balancing the $42 billion Fiscal Year 2019 state budget, the Legislature authorized over $1 billion in economic development funds; passed a $2.4 billion environmental bond authorization; created an automatic voter registration system; enacted comprehensive addiction prevention and treatment legislation to address the opioid epidemic; increased benefits to our veterans and their families; created a requirement to teach civic education in schools; increased the age to purchase tobacco products to 21; and expanded the amount of renewable energy we all use.

Of these, the $2.4 billion environmental bond bill is a top priority for Quincy following the devastating flooding and damage brought on by two winter storms in March of this year. In response to the storm damage, the Quincy delegation successfully advocated for several funding earmarks to be directed to the city for climate mitigation, restoration, and resiliency projects. The legislation includes authorization of $2 million to the city for seawall repair and other citywide storm resiliency improvements; $2 million for dredging the channel along Wollaston Beach in Quincy Bay; $2 million for improvements to Squantum Point Park, including to improve the pier to be better equipped for ferry services; and language is included to grant easements to the City of Quincy for flood mitigation along Furnace Brook Parkway and parts of West Quincy.

City and state officials have begun planning for the seawall repair project along Adams Shore and Houghs Neck, and held their first community meeting on the proposed plans Aug. 15.

"The bond bill demonstrates our continued commitment to maintaining the state's parks and waterways and protecting our existing natural resources, while also looking to the future by establishing funding to address global warming and climate change impacts across Massachusetts," said state Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy). "Especially after the major storms that hit Quincy and other coastal communities this past winter, the state funding included for climate resiliency projects will be a critical asset as the city continues to rebuild and be better prepared against future storms of that magnitude."

In addition to funding included in the environmental bond authorization, the City of Quincy is set to receive more than $47 million in direct funding from the FY2019 state budget. The city will receive $27,395,085 in Chapter 70 education funding and $19,743,316 in unrestricted local aid. Of the $310.8 million city budget, approximately 15% is directly from the state. The following are additional funds allocated to Quincy in the FY19 Budget:

- Norfolk County Agricultural School: $1,251,353 in education funds
- Manet Community Health Center: $100,000 for their behavioral health program
- 400th anniversary celebration for the City of Quincy: $30,000 for planning purposes
- Quincy's Department of Elder Affairs: $25,000
- State Police seasonal overtime patrols of Quincy Shore Drive and Furnace Brook Parkway: $95,000
- Quincy Fire Department Hazmat team: $50,000
- Final resting places of John Adams and John Quincy Adams: $30,000 for building safety improvements
- Germantown Neighborhood Center: $50,000
- Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.: $100,000
- Quincy Housing Authority: $75,000 for upgrades to the senior housing security system
- Fore River Club House and Fore River Field: $75,000 for continued upgrading and maintenance.

"The Quincy delegation deserves credit for passing a responsible and fiscally sound budget and successfully advocating for additional Quincy funding over the Governor's veto objections. It was a productive session which will help to ease the burden on the city and improve the quality of life for our residents," said House Majority Leader Ron Mariano.

As a whole, the FY19 budget, signed into law by Gov. Baker at the end of July, increases Chapter 70 education funding by 3.4 percent to a total of $4.9 billion and commits $319.4 million to the special education circuit breaker.

In substance abuse prevention and treatment, $142 million was allocated for direct treatment assistance across the Commonwealth, $1 million for Narcan used by first responders, $5 million for community based treatment programs and $4.9 million to step-down recovery services.

The Legislature also funded the Massachusetts Rental Voucher Program (MRVP) at $100 million. The early childcare rate reserve will receive $20 million.

Additionally, the state was able to increase the stabilization "rainy day" fund to over $1.7 billion. This money helps the state's bond rating and creditworthiness and is a safety net for state services if the economy takes a downturn.

"The budget process this year focused on increasing opportunities for all the residents of Massachusetts, through efficient and effective programming at the state level, and with a strong commitment to providing funding to our local communities," said state Sen. John Keenan. "Working with Representatives Chan, Ayers, Hunt and Majority Leader Mariano, we were able to provide increased funding for Quincy, which will be used for schools, police, fire, local libraries, and critical infrastructure, all of which will strengthen our neighborhoods."

"I was proud to work with the members of the delegation to advocate for these important budgetary protections for the City of Quincy and its residents," said state Rep. Bruce Ayers.

While the governor vetoed a number of line items that provide financial assistance to Quincy, including funding for public safety and local human services, the legislative delegation worked to achieve an overwhelming override of the Governor's vetoes. In total, over $47 million of direct funding is committed to the City of Quincy from the Fiscal Year 2019 state budget while an additional $6 million is directed to the city through the environmental bond authorization.

College Governors Welcome New Provost, Dean

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy College's new provost said the school has fabulous potential and its new dean of nursing said the program is already on the road to recovery.

Gerald Koocher, who will start as the school's provost next month, and Roxanne Mihal, the school's dean of nursing, introduced themselves to Quincy College's Board of Governors on Aug. 16. Mayor Thomas Koch, the school's principal executive, announced the hiring of the two in July.

At the Board of Governors meeting, Koch said the hiring of Koocher to the newly created provost position would pay dividends.

"I believe the hiring of Dr. Koocher is going to pay dividends in many, many ways," the mayor said. "I think just the hiring of him – with such credentials and background – brings a gravitas to this college that is much needed during this challenge. I would suggest that the challenges we have faced have been weaknesses

MA Secretary Of Labor, Workforce Development Visits City

ROSALIN ACOSTA, the Massachusetts Secretary of Labor and Workforce Development, recently visited G& L Labs in Quincy to meet with the owner, Diana Liu, and then held a roundtable event with youth participants of the Quincy Summer YouthWorks program. Secretary Acosta took the opportunity to hear from Ms. Liu about G&L's experience hosting participants at her lab and then held a discussion with the youth about their experiences. Some other host sites this year include the South Shore YMCA, Thomas Crane Public Library, Intelycare, Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quirk Ford and Self-Made Designs. Also in attendance at this event were state Sen. John Keenan and state Rep. Tackey Chan, supporters of the program. YouthWorks is funded through the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Executive Office of Labor and Workforce Development, is administered by the Commonwealth Corporation with local oversight by the South Shore Workforce Development Board, and in Quincy is run by the Quincy Public Schools. The program provides summer work and learning experiences for teens which includes 15 hours of workplace readiness training and part-time summer jobs. For information about this program contact Lynne Courtney, director of Youth Services at the South Shore Workforce Development Board.

Squaw Rock Poetry Reading, Beachcombing Stroll Sept. 3

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program is offering a free poetry and beachcombing tour at Squaw Rock Park on Monday, Sept. 3 (Labor Day) at 11 a.m.

This program was rescheduled from August because of bad weather.

Ilani D'Alfonso will read some of her poems about the ocean while participants stroll through the park followed by an exploration of the beach at low tide with coastal citizen scientist Peter Fifield. Participants should bring water and bug spray.

The tour will begin in the parking lot of the Nickerson Post at the end of Dorchester Street in Squantum.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

WORTHY OF ROYALTY

Sapphire, the birthstone for September, has long been a favorite of European royalty and nobility. Treasured for its brilliance and beloved for its color, sapphire remains a preferred gemstone for the center stone or accent stone in bridal and fashion jewelry. One notable example of this preference is the 18-carat blue sapphire engagement ring with which Prince William chose to propose to Kate Middleton. This ring, of course, belonged to Prince William's late mother, Lady Diana, who remains an icon of fashion and good taste to this very day. Continuing the importance of sapphire in the lives of married couples is the tradition of giving this gorgeous gemstone as fifth and forty-fifth anniversary gifts.

They say that ancient priests and sorcerers honored September's birthstone above all other gems because sapphire enabled them to interpret oracles and foretell the future. At Rogers Jewelry, we don't need this stunning gemstone to predict that you'll love feasting your eyes and dreaming your dreams about our selection of sapphires that sparkle with vibrant colors in their imaginative, custom-designed settings. If you're searching for a sapphire of a certain color and you don't see one at our shop at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, tell us. We will do our best to find one for you. PH: 617-773-3636.

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you – refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still so low, lower than fixed-rate equity loans, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Sept. 7, 1776, during the Revolutionary War, the American submersible craft Turtle attempts to attach a time bomb to the hull of British Admiral Richard Howe's flagship Eagle in New York Harbor. The Turtle was an 8-foot-long wooden submersible with lead ballast for balance.

• On Sept. 3, 1783, the American Revolution officially comes to an end when representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Spain and France sign the Treaty of Paris. The signing established the boundaries of America from Florida to the Great Lakes and the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi River.

• On Sept. 4, 1957, the Ford Motor Company unveils the Edsel. The car had a distinctive look, but not in a good way to many people. The big impact ring in the middle of its front grille looked (one reporter said) like "a Pontiac pushing a toilet seat."

• On Sept. 9, 1967, Sgt. Duane D. Hackney is presented with the Air Force Cross for bravery in rescuing a USAF pilot in Vietnam. He was the first living Air Force enlisted man to receive the award.

• On Sept. 5, 1972, Arab terrorists known as Black September take Israeli athletes hostage at the Olympic village in Munich, Germany. Twenty hours later following a German ambush, 11 Israeli athletes, 5 Palestinian terrorists and a police official lay dead.

• On Sept. 6, 1995, Baltimore Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. plays in his 2,131st consecutive game. Ripken went on to play 2,632 games in a row before voluntarily removing himself from a game on Sept. 19, 1998.

• On Sept. 8, 2003, the Recording Industry Association of America begins suing individual sharers of copyrighted mp3 songs, some of whom are children. In the first 20 months, the RIAA sued over 11,000 people.

MBTA Construction Updates For Wollaston Station, QC Garage Demo

By JOE SGROI and TOM LINDBERG
Public Outreach
Wollaston Station and Quincy Center Garage Demolition Projects

WORK HOURS FOR QUINCY CENTER DEMO AND WOLLASTON STATION

Day shift:
Monday - Friday 7 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Night shift work:
LMH, MBTA's contractor resumed night work on Monday, Aug. 20. Night work is scheduled from Sunday through Thursday, 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. See Red Line service alerts for most up to date information: https://www.mbta.com/alerts/subway#alerts-Red.

Weekend work:
Shuttle buses replaced Red Line service between North Quincy and Braintree on Saturday, Aug. 18, from start of service to 7 p.m. for construction. See Red Line service alerts: https://www.mbta.com/alerts/subway#alerts-Red.

Future weekend work will occur on four weekends in September beginning Sept. 7th and the first three weekends in October, beginning Oct. 5th. This weekend work is scheduled from Friday at 9 p.m. through Monday morning at 5a.m.

We acknowledge that night and weekend work can be disruptive, please feel free to contact the Project Team at: Wollaston@mbta.com with any concerns.

QUINCY CENTER GARAGE DEMOLITION

Demolition of the existing garage structure continues. Updates to the project can be found on the MBTA site here: https://www.mbta.com/projects/quincy-center-station-improvements. The contract also includes two important upgrades to the existing station.

New elevator
The existing elevator was closed on Aug. 6th. A brand new elevator will be constructed in its place. The scope of work for a new elevator is greater than that of an elevator repair job. The new elevator will be completed by December 2018.

For those needing to access the MBTA or Commuter Rail by elevator, there is an alternative mode of transportation in place: https://www.mbta.com/projects/quincy-center-station-improvements/update/quincy-center-elevator-shuttles.

Accessible walkway
Currently those with mobility issues cannot access Quincy Center Station from the Burgin Parkway side of the station. The contract calls for the construction of an accessible walkway. Work is underway, foundation piles are in place and construction of the walkway continues.

Additional temporary bike racks
Two additional bike racks have been installed at Quincy Center and North Quincy Stations. More permanent bike shelters at North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Center will be installed as part of the Wollaston Station Improvement Project.

WOLLASTON STATION

Construction activities at Wollaston Station continue on schedule. Work on the platform, east headhouse, stairways and lobby areas are on schedule. The contractor will be removing the remaining trees in the parking lot area, in preparation for landscaping improvements required in the parking lot area. The Project Team posts updates to construction activities and progress photos on line: https://www.mbta.com/projects/wollaston-station-improvements.

ACTIVTIES AT NORTH QUINCY STATION

The MBTA is reconstructing an underground electrical duct bank that runs from Hancock Street to the Red Line Substation located adjacent to the Red Line tracks. Construction work is underway and is anticipated to be complete within the next few weeks.

To facilitate construction, the Hancock Street entrance to the easterly parking lot has been temporarily closed to vehicular access. Customers have been directed to enter the lot through a newly opened temporary entrance at the extreme northerly end of the lot. The Hancock Street lot entrance should be reopened to customers by Monday, Aug. 20.

For those who have an interest in the Quincy Adams and Braintree Garage Projects, please check out the web site: https://www.mbta.com/projects/south-shore-garages.

We appreciate your patience and understanding as we make improvements to the Red Line in Quincy.

Register Of Deeds O'Donnell Office Hours Here Oct. 4

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will hold office hours Thursday, Oct. 4 from 10 a.m. to noon at the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall), lower level meeting room, 1305 Hancock St.

Although Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they will be on hand along with O'Donnell to answer basic questions, transport documents for recording and assist in the filling out of a Declaration of Homestead form that provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. They will also assist a person in signing-up for the new Consumer Notification Program that alerts a homeowner when a transaction has been made against their property to alert them against potential cases of fraud.

Additionally, there will be on-site work stations that can provide real-time status of your mortgage discharge, print out a copy of your deed and provide a demonstration on how the Registry's On-Line Land Records Database works. No appointment is necessary.

Trivia and Treats Aug. 28 At The Kennedy Center

The Quincy Council on Aging will present Trivia and Treats Tuesday, Aug. 28 at 11 a.m. at the Center, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

The event is sponsored by Sunrise Senior Living in Braintree.

Come and put your trivia skills to the test. To register call 617-376-1506.

Wreaths Across America Coming To Mount Wollaston Cemetery

Quincy's Mount Wollaston Cemetery has been selected as an official location for this year's National Wreaths Across America Day.

Wreaths Across America, a national non-profit organization, announced on Aug. 13 that Mount Wollaston Cemetery would be joining its mission to "remember, honor and teach" as an official location for 2018. This is the first year the cemetery will participate in the event, which will take place on Dec. 15.

According to Quincy Graves Registration Officer George Bouchard, the plan is to place wreaths on several thousand veterans graves in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The wreaths will be placed in front of the headstones of private lot graves throughout the cemetery. The wreaths will not block the names etched on the headstones, Bouchard said.

In the veterans' section with flat markers the wreaths will be laid on top of them.

Bouchard said the wreaths will be displayed four about four weeks - Dec. 15 to Jan. 15 (weather permitting).

A small ceremony is planned with several speakers when the wreaths are placed on the graves.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery is one of more than 1,400 participating locations nationwide.

Wreaths Across America hopes to raise enough funds to place 3,200 veterans' wreaths on the headstones of all the local heroes laid to rest at Mount Wollaston to ensure the individuals who served to protect the freedoms of our country are never forgotten, and to bring the community together in patriotic commemoration.

"We are forever grateful for the thousands of supporters who dedicate their time and effort to fulfilling our mission on a local level," said WAA executive director Karen Worcester.

"They know the value of remembering the fallen, honoring those who currently serve and teaching the next generation about the sacrifices made for our freedom every day, and without their continued support, Wreaths Across America would not exist."

Those in interested in volunteering for Wreaths Across America, either locally or at Arlington National Cemetery, are invited to visit wreathsacrossamerica.org.

National Wreaths Across America Day is a free community event open to all people.

It's Summer Kids, Let's Get Reading!

By GRACIE WARREN

Reading and books have always been a big part of my life. But, I know it's not this way for everyone.

Some adults, when they hear what a big reader I am, will say,"What's your secret Gracie? How can I get my son/daughter to love reading?"

I've given it some thought and I think the answer is: series books! If you can introduce your kid to a great series, they will get hooked. Here are some suggestions from some of my favorites.

Happy Reading!

1) Heidi Heckelbeck series by Wanda Coven (23 books, reading level - 5-8 years old). This series is about 2nd grader Heidi Heckelbeck, who also happens to be a witch and the new kid in school.

2) Judy Moody series by Megan McDonald (13 books, reading level 6-9 years old). This series follows Judy Moody, a 3rd grader, with red hair and lots of attitude, as she has crazy adventures with her brother, two best friends and her enemy Jessica "Fink" Finch.

3) Junie B. Jones series by Barbara Park (29 books, reading level 6-9 years old). The series follows a young girl from kindegarten to the end of first grade, where things go wrong more than they go right for poor Junie B.

4) The Never Girls series by Kiki Thorpe (13 books, reading level 6-9 years old). These books are about 4 girls in grade school who go to Never Land and have all kinds of fun adventures.

5) The Andy Griffiths Treehouse series (not to be confused with The Magic Treehouse series) by Andy Griffiths and Terry Denton (7 books, reading level 6-10 years old). This series follows Andy, Terry and their friends and neighbors while they add 13 stories to their treehouse with each book.

6) Tom Gates series by Liz Pichon (3 books, reading level 8 and up). Tom Gates is a trouble-maker and a class clown. These stories follow the adventures of Tom and his best friend, both really cool kids.

7) Big Nate series by Lincoln Pierce (8 books, 17 graphic novels, reading level 8 and up). Big Nate is a 6th grade troublemaker and trash talker (in sports, to the other team of course!) and nicknamer. With his friends Teddy and Francis, he searches for the perfect girl - will he ever find true love? Probably not.

8) Dear Dumb Diary series by Jim Bentonville (18 books, reading level 8 and up). Jamie Kelley is an 8th grade girl who is trying very hard to stand out and be noticed in middle school.

9) Dork Diary series by Renee Rachel Russell (13 books, reading level 9 and up). These are the diaries of Nikki Maxwell, a middle school girl with a dorky family, a cute crush, cuckoo but awesome BFFs, and a locker next to the mean MacKenzie. Middle school is hard for this dork!

Police Dept. Beefing Up With Innovative Crime Deterrents

The scope of law enforcement in the city is changing, signaling a new era for crime prevention in Quincy, according to police and city officials.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said that he hopes that the two mountain bikes the police department has had in operation for the last two weeks as well as mounted police, a K-9 Patrol and other planned additions to the department in terms of equipment and manpower, will help to increase its effectiveness and diversity.

"Quincy always had an innovative police force and we've always been an aggressive police force. I think that these items will be very helpful."

ANNUAL FAMILY FIELD DAY SET FOR SEPT. 5

The second annual First Family Field Day will take place Sunday, Sept. 5 from noon to 5 p.m. at Faxon Field, next to the Voc-Tech School, First Night Committee Chairman Michael Cheney announced. The event is a non-alcoholic family celebration that will include live performances by a Dixieland Band, costumed characters, cotton candy, popcorn, hot dogs and much more.

The Family Field Day was designed for families and friends to enjoy a Sunday afternoon together with some good old-fashioned fun.

Long Island Bridge: Hopeful For Amicable Solution

I would like to add some information which has not been surfaced during the recent debates regarding the re-building the bridge to the Long Island facility.

Under Mayor Thomas Menino's administration the Long Island facility was and continued until the bridge came down.

During this time the facility was not only a shelter but mainly a rehabilitation facility where residents learned computer skills. They were also tought by chefs to become professionals in that field. But the most visible projects on the island in recent years was the Learn to Farm and Market their produce. More than two acres was made to a productive farm. The climate and weather conditions are ideal for agriculture on this island. The City of Boston hired a professional farm manager to manage this most successful program.

The crops from Long Island farm supplied their commercial kitchen in addition to area restaurants and farmers' markets, including one in Quincy Center.

Today we need more programs such as the one the Long Island shelter operated. There is only one farm left in Suffolk County, The Allendale Farm in Brookline. There is a growing need and demand for locally grown produce for our growing population. We need to support Boston to re-establish this much needed program and not place roadblocks on the way, mainly fear of traffic.

The Long Island shelter's purpose was never to ware-house homeless but teach the residents a meaningful trade and help folks become self-reliant contributing citizens once again. If this is allowed to take place, perhaps some of Quincy's homeless residents could also find this facility helpful learning facility and a path to a new productive trade. And perhaps one could open up a new walk-up farm stand by the bridge for the residents of Squantum to enjoy during the growing season. Now how nice that could be?

I sincerely hope that the City of Quincy in collaboration with the City of Boston will find a solution amicable for all parties involved.

Burke Donates To Boy Scouts, Boston College Law School

Quincy attorney George Burke recently donated $2,000 to the Boy Scouts of America and $5,000 to Boston College Law School.

Burke said he donates to the Boy Scouts each year. He is a past recipient of the Good Scout Award and was recently asked to participate in the steering committee conversation which reviews the path of the Boy Scouts in greater Quincy.

Burke said he supports the Boy Scouts in all their good works and believes in their good cause and is always happy to give a hand or donation.

Burke also donates to B.C. Law annually and has donated for many years totaling well over $100,000. He attended law school at Boston College and was a graduate of the Class of 1959. He said he enjoys giving back to the schools that he earned an education and has great admiration.

Beechwood Knoll Playground Wins Arts/Crafts Competition

The finishing stages of construction on Adams Common did not interfere with one of the longest summer traditions of the Quincy Recreation Department.

Nine hundred votes were cast over a two-day period for handmade playground creations in the department's annual Arts and Crafts exhibit and contest.

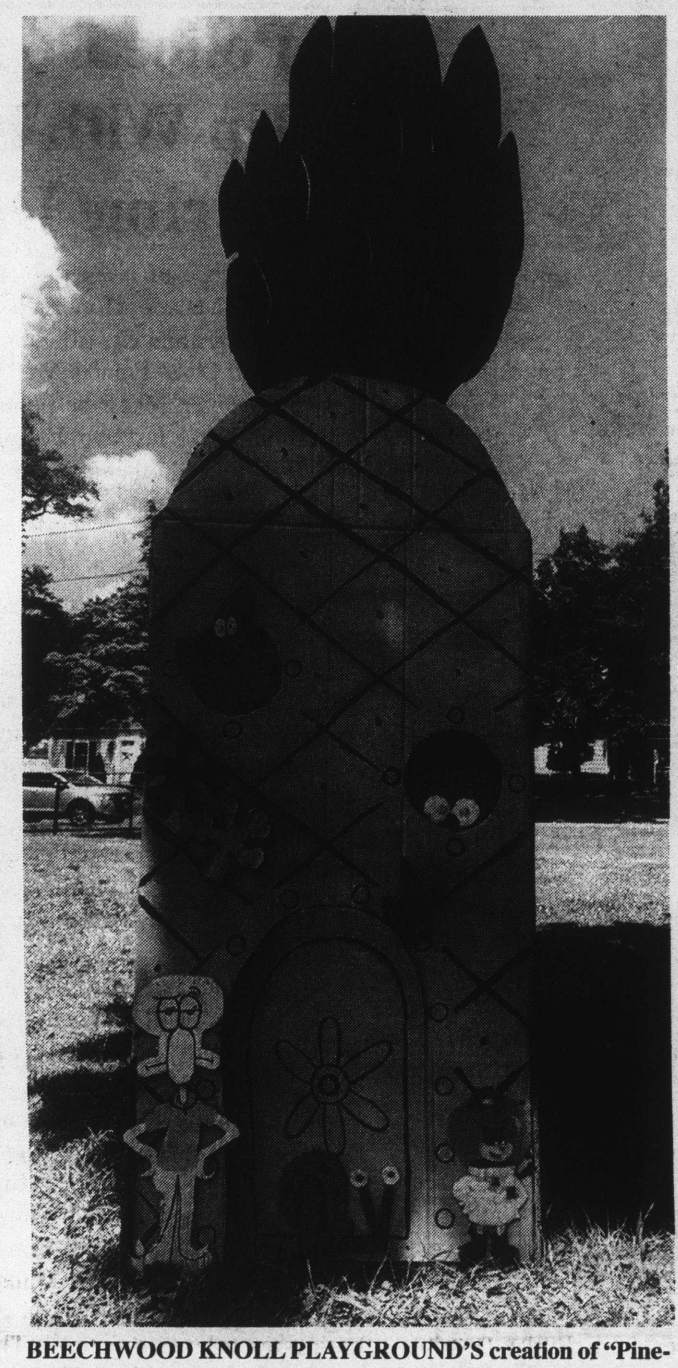

Projects from 14 playgrounds and the Happy Acres Special Needs program were on display on the remaining open space near city hall. The always popular display attracted City Hall visitors, local office workers and commuters coming and going to the Quincy Center MBTA stop.

When the votes were tallied the coveted title of city champion for 2018 went to the participants of the Beechwood Knoll playground. Beechwood crafted "Pineapple Paradise a colorful cardboard creation.

In second place the votes shifted to West Quincy's O'Rourke playground as "Munchkin Box with a cup of coffee" attracted many voters on both days of the event. From the North end of the city it was Montclair playground ending in third by a slim three-vote margin behind O Rourke. Montclair playground made a highly creative project with full details of a "Yellow Bike" complete with a package in the front basket.

The Happy Acres program for special needs received an award for outstanding creativity as they proudly displayed "You can be Incredible 2." A cardboard replica that had spectators posing for pictures of the popular action figures. Heron Road Playground with a "Slush Puppy" and Palmer Park with "Fortnite Llama" also garnered many votes.

Arts and Crafts Specialists Mallory Devoe, Jackie McAllister, and Kiera Clifford organized the event and manned the voting booths after assisting each of their playgrounds in preparing for the display.

BEECHWOOD KNOLL PLAYGROUND'S creation of "Pineapple Paradise" was judged the top craft at this year's Arts and Crafts exhibit and contest coordinated by the Quincy Recreation Department. Photos Courtesy Quincy Recreation

Recreation leaders at Beechwood Knoll are: Karyn McEvoy, Tim Layden, Abby Hanly and Brandon Sullivan. Key participants working on the project were: Molly Powers, Georgia Scott, Mave Powers, and John Burke.

Recreation leaders at O Rourke playground are: Molly Minton, Gina Ash and Spencer Smith. Playground participants Kailey Dalton, Daithi Quinn, Cole Doyle, Joe Campa, Jenny Ayles, Renzo Santangelo, Abby Dunn and Angelina Colletti all assisted on the project.

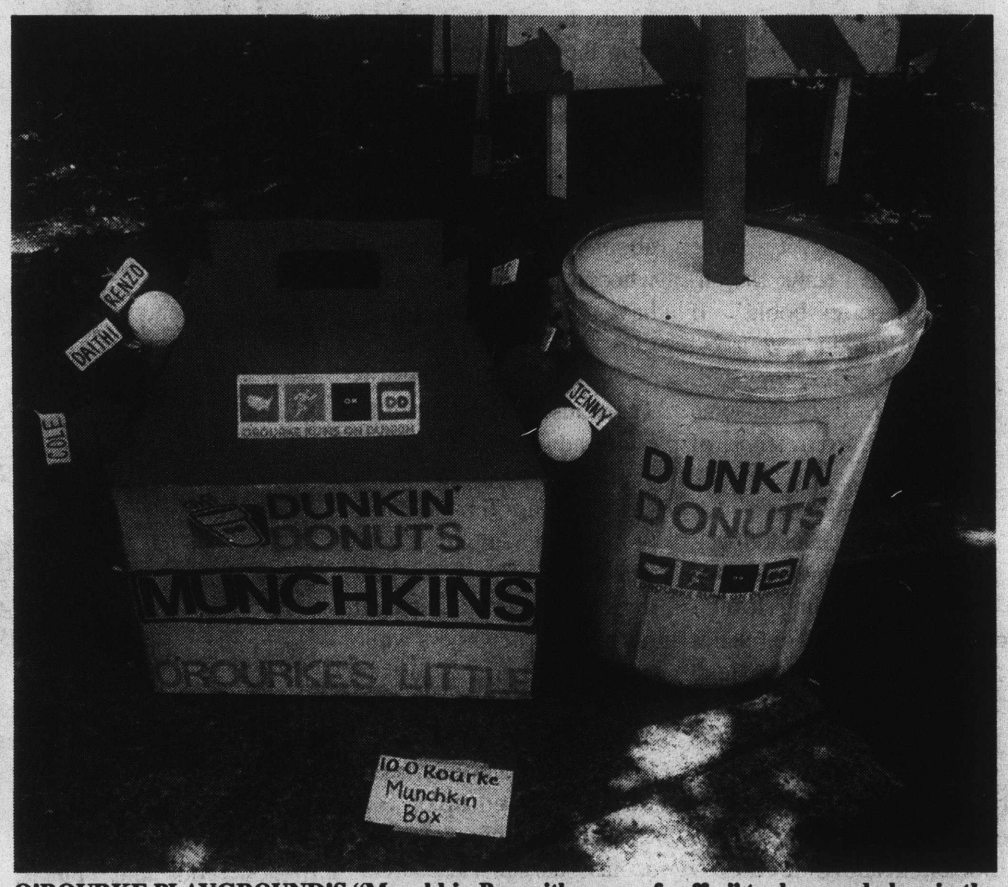

Montclair leaders are: Isabelle Flaherty, Brian Pham, Declan Murphy and Sam Smith. Meggie Webber, Patrick Webber Emily Burns and Stephen Cunniff played a part in assembling from cardboard tubes a replica yellow bike.

Recreation Director Barry Welch thanked Quincy business owners who contributed prizes that were distributed to the winning parks.

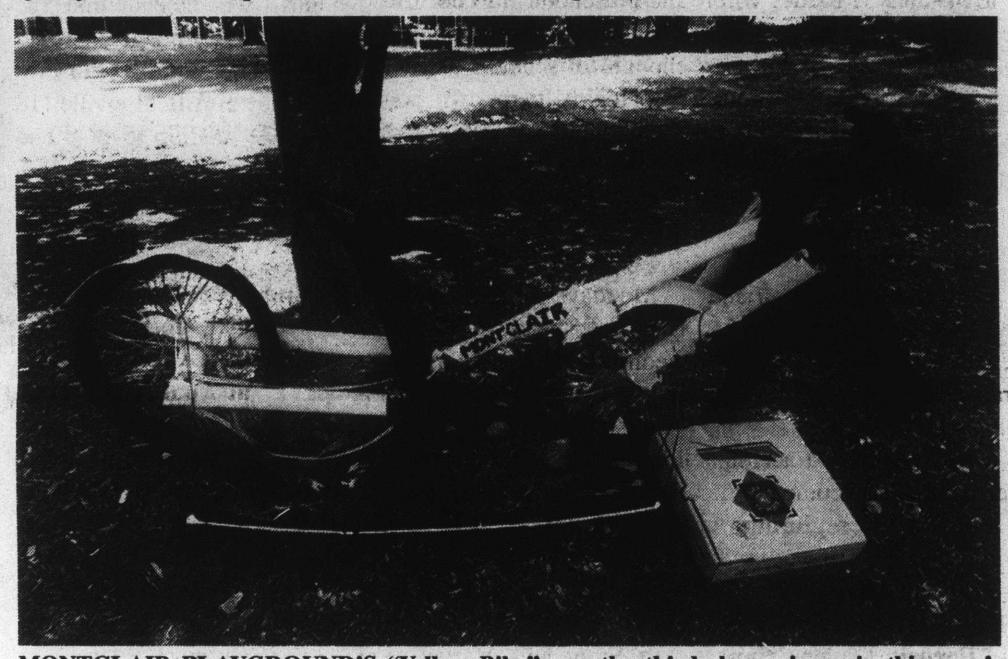

"The support of our local business community contributes greatly to the success of this program and helps us recognize the artistic and creative skills of our participants. We wish to thank them for stepping up each year to honor our winning entries."

The following contributed products for the winning playground to enjoy: Time Out Pizza, Harry's, Ginger Betty's, School House Pizza, Angelo's and the Pizza Connection.

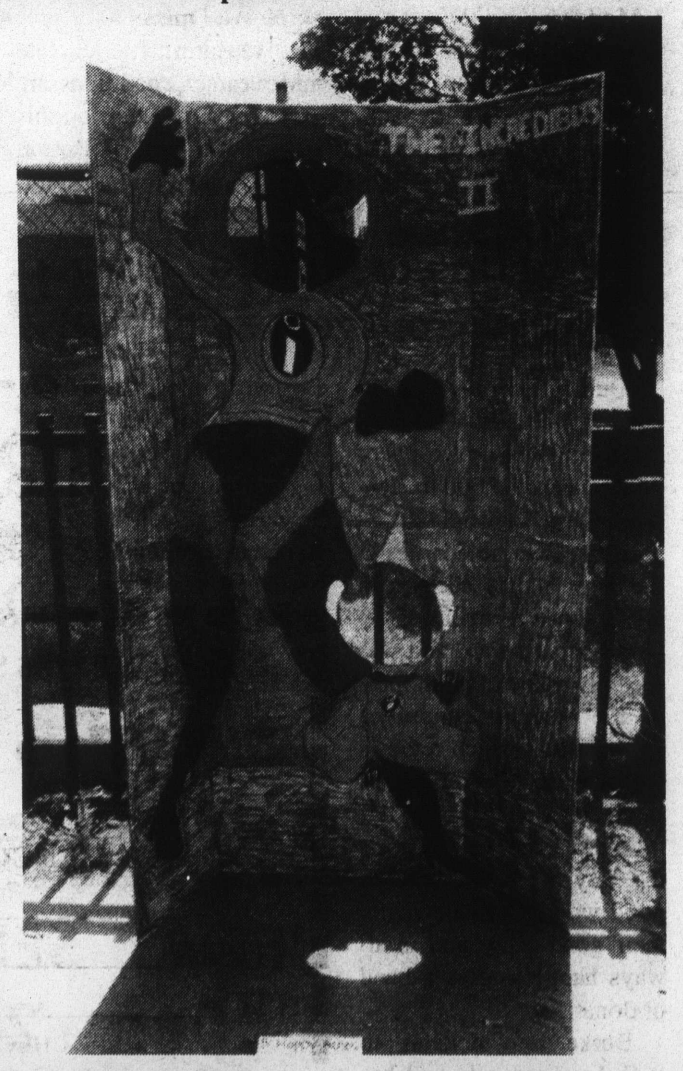

The department looks forward with great anticipation to bringing the 2019 display and contest to the Completed Adams Common which will create a wonderful venue for this end-of-season playground program tradition.

O'ROURKE PLAYGROUND'S "Munchkin Box with a cup of coffee" took second place in the Quincy Recreation Department's Arts and Crafts competition.

MONTCLAIR PLAYGROUND'S "Yellow Bike" was the third-place winner in this year's Quincy Recreation Department Arts and Crafts competition.

THE HAPPY ACRES program for special needs received an award for outstanding creativity as they proudly displayed "You can be Incredible 2" at this year's Arts and Crafts contest.
